Mr. J. D. Maxwell on last Thursday night was an unusually pleasant occasion, and was attended by a large number of young people, both married and unmarried. A farmer in this County says that he made five bales more cotton last year than he could have done had the old fence system been in operation; and yet some people are still grumbling because the change was made. There will be a meeting at the new school house near Mr. W. A. McKee's on Saturday, 14th February, to reorganize Mio Mills Grange. The Master of Pomona Grange is

Our Fair Play correspondent gives an interesting account this week of the capture of young Osborne, who is charged with the killing of Mrs. Compton during Christmas week, and who has since been evading the officers of the law.

Mr. Harrison Tucker, of Hopewell township, had his gin house entered on last Saturday night, and about six hundred pounds of white seed cotton taken from it. No clue has yet been obtained to the theives, whom, it seems, entered with a false key.

At the meeting of the Temperance Division Thursday evening last a resolution was adopted requesting Rev. S. B. Jones, D. D., of Pendleton, to preach a sermon on the subject of Temperance at his earliest convenience in Anderson on some Sunday

A postal card from Thos. W. Holloway Secretary State Grange, informs us that the South Carolina Railroad has reduced the rate of fare to the State Grange to 2 cents per mile for round trip, making the fare shooting of Mrs. Compton, near Fair Play, from Columbia to Charleston and return in December, was caught at his father's only $2.60. The schedule of the down train on the Anderson Branch has been changed so that the cars leave this place now an hour earlier than formerly. The change is made in order to connect with the down freight at Belton, where the passengers that go down on this line are compelled to wait for an hour for the train from Greenville.

On Friday night last about 7 o'clock, Tom Parker, son of W. F. Parker, proprietor of the saw mill at Westminster, shot and instantly killed at Seneca City a former laborer at the saw mill named Horne. The difficulty occurred in regard to a settlement between the parties. Horne leaves a wife and two children in destitute circumstances Parker escaped.

The efforts that are being made by the colored people of the town to repair the Greeley Institute building is most commen dable and praiseworthy, and we hope will be continued until their plans are perfected. The building and grounds have been given up to their entire charge, and have been most shamefully abused, and their steps in the direction of improving the property are taken none too soon. The building is to undergo thorough repairs.

Anderson has certainly established a reputation as the leading market of the up country, both for buying and selling. This is particularly the case in the furniture trade, for during the past week Mr. G. F. Tolly has sold bills of furniture to partie in Newberry, thus shipping over the railroad to within forty miles of Columbia, and delivering cheaper than the same arti cles can be bought in Newberry or Columbia. He also shipped furniture from here by way of Greenville to Easley station, because he is selling at prices greatly below the Greenville market. If any of our readers wish furniture, this is the place to come for it. Mr. Tolly's prices will always be found surprisingly low.

The Recapture of Osborne.

have succeeded in re-arresting Turner Osborne, the murderer of Mrs. R. Compton. been seen in the neighborhood of his ness principles. Her future is bright. father's house, Messrs. W. J. Hix and L. This is complimentary of our County town L. Jarrard collected a crowd of men and and it comes from an Oconeean.

O. P. Q. determined to make a thorough search for him. They succeeded in getting between fifty and seventy-five men, and left Fair Play about 9 p. m. on the 22d inst. Pickets were placed all along the River and Beaverdam Creek and along a road running north of Osborne's house. There was also a special guard around the house, which was to keep a sharp lookout and allow no one to go into or come out of the house. They thus kept guard till day light, at which time the whole party was to move toward them, making a thorough search of both houses and the woods as they closed

When a sufficient number had assembled they went to Osborne's house and told him of their intention to search his house for his son. He willingly consented. The dwelling and out houses were searched, but no trace of Osborne could be found. The men began to think that they had had their trouble for nothing, when R. Compton, who was in the crowd, requested to be allowed to search a small house, which had heretofore been overlooked, and which, I think, was used as a kind of meat house. This request Osborne also granted willingly, opening the door and requesting Compton to enter and search. To the surprise and gratification of all, he found Turner Osborne in a large box. He made no resistance, but surrendered as soon as he found out that he was discovered. He claimed that a report had reached him that if he was caught he would be immediately hung or shot, and he says that he believed it. If there has ever been any such talk it has never reached my ears, nor can I find any one here who has heard it. Osborne when arrested appeared to be quite uneasy, and showed some nervousness, but when he found out that he would be turned over to the proper officers of the law to be dealt with according to law, he in a measure regained his composure, and talked quite freely about the murder, contending that he did not do the shooting, but that Bradberry did it. He said, too, that he knew law was founded on justice, but that the law sometimes made mistakes, and that his only wish was that the guilty party should suffer. He was immediately sent to Walhalla under a guard of four or five men, where he was confined in a dungeon. It was reportrequested to send them a speaker for the ed here that an effort would be made to rescue Osborne from the guard on the road from this place to Walhalla, but there was > my only desire is that the guilty party shall e made to suffer. This community owes no thanks to the Governor in thus getting rid of a man who has been a source of great annoyance to us. The Governor has been requested once or twice to offer a reward for the arrest of Osborne, but he has kept perfectly quiet about the whole matter, showing a perfect indifference that is not at all appreciated by the eople of this section. The credit belongs, though, entirely to the people of Fair Play and the surrounding country. They were determined not to allow felonious crimes to be committed in their midst with impunity, and they went to work with a commendable zeal in this case and raised a subscription of over a hundred dollars, and made searches for Osborne until their efforts were finally crowned with success. They have set an example that will have a ten-dency to keep down crime in the future here. Honor be to those to whom honor is Fair Play, January 26th, 1880.

The Farmers' Meeting. Mr. EDITOR: The meeting which was to have taken place on the third Friday in January was so slimly attended that it was decided to hold another meeting on Saleday in April next. A subject was chosen for discussion, to-wit, the advantages for settlement by emigrants in the Piedmont region contrasted with the great West. The President was appointed to prepare a lecture or the question. A committee was appointed, onsisting of E. M. Rucker, J. W. Norris and P. R. Brown, to examine and report upon the practicability of forming a Farmers' Alliance, for Anderson County, for self-protection and the advancement of agriculture. It is designed to interest the far mers, as a mass, in this organization, with annual or semi-annual meetings. In States where the farmers are fully aroused as to the necessity for co-operation, (New York for instance), they have several different kinds of organizations, such as Patrons of Husbandry, Farmers' Alliance and Farmers' Clubs, all in sympathy, and all doing their appropriate work in arousing the farmers to an intelligent sense of their great wrongs, and the necessity for combination to correct these evils.
