inducing the farmers to bring their stuffs here for sale, and the very low figure at which goods of every kind, and especially those most needed by the country people, are sold. Up to within two years ago we had been discriminated against by the railroads to such an extent that it was impossible for us to compete with other towns in the matter of prices for goods, and consequently our business men labored under very great-disadvantages, which served to destroy their energies and retard materially the progress and development of not only their business but that of all others as well. Since, however, we have been put on an equal footing in this respect with other places, the many natural advantages of our town as a market, combined with the enterprise and public spiritedness of our business men generally, has drawn many hither who never traded here before, and brought back to us the trade of hundreds who had ceased to patronize Anderson for the reason that they could do better elsewhere. Our business this year as compared with that of former years is very much improved, and we have every reason to believe that as the advantages of our place as a business mart are more widely known this improvement will be still greater. The whole number of bales of cotton sold at this place for the cotton year ending 21st August last amountcd to between 15,000 and 16,000, and this year we have no doubt the number will reach 10,000 or 20,000. Up to the present time we are several hundred bales ahead of last year, with every indication that each succeeding week will add to this majority. There are many causes for congratulation upon this progress, which should and doubtless will, stimulate every one with a greater efforts to build up our town. No one should relax his energies now. Do all that is possible to extend the fame of Anderson, and thus contribute to her prosperity. There is no town in South Carolina where higher prices are paid for cotton or where goods are sold at lower prices, and there is no reason why any farmer in this County should haul a pound of cotton to any other market. Our merchants appreciate fully the demands of the times, and they will be the last ones to disregard these demands. This, we think, every one can rest assured of.

captain Joseph Y. Fretwell, one of our oldest and most valued citizens, died, at his home near here, a few days ago, most quietly and peacefully, without suffering of account. He was nearly four-score, and yet he was hale and hearty to the last week of his life. He was a Christian, I believe, although he had not united with any church, and I look forward to meeting him in the better world. I was his pastor, his family were Baptists, and I often visited him at his quiet country home, taking my little children with me. He loved children passionately; said: "I am never so happy as when I have my arms full of them, and my heart full of them, too." Often placing his hands on the head of my little daughters, he would say, fervently: "God bless you, and shield you, and save you, my daughters." He had ar abiding trust in Jesus, and lived an exemplary life. A large an afflicted community of friends mourn his loss. His children and grandchildren rank among our very best people showing that they have had good training. My last visit to his house was the last week in June. He welcomed me, as usual, and said: "I do so much appreciate this visit, sir. I was afraid you wouldn't have time to come and see an old man again." Bidding me good-bye as I went away, he said: "I know you will succeed in your new work, but I am sorry you gave up your church."

Our other loss was that of Judge J. P. Reed, who for many years, was one of the most substantial supports to our Baptist church, and the most public spirited citizen in our village.

He had been a public man all his life, serving his country and State, and to his efforts are mainly due many good works and monuments of progress in upper South Capolina. His illness was long and due many good works and monuments of progress in upper South Carolina. His illness was long and painful, but he exhibited great character under his sufferings, and has gone to "where the weary are at rest." His nature was noble and generous, are at rest." His nature was noble and generous, and his heart was tender and sympathetic as a weman's. He possessed that admirable quality of true manhood that enables one to say, "I was wrong, I ask your pardon," and he was a shining illustration of it; had he julged a servant unjustly or hastily, he was as prompt to seek out that servant and make due amends. For a good while I was his pastor, loved and appreciated, and it was so painly to be seen in his long sickness that the good Father was mellowing the apple before it was to fall. He was specially fond of God's word and prayer, and often, when I visited him, he would remind me almost as soon as I sat down, that I must read God's word and make prayer before I retired.

His ideal of a Christian man, minister, editor and argumentarian, was found in Dr. Jeter. He was constantly uttering his praises. Often has he said to me: "Bro.S., Dr. Jeter is the greatest man the Baptists have produced;" and when he died, he said:

"There is no one to take his place."

"There is no one to take his place.".

A short time before his departure, I visited him; he could speak but little; "My only hope for salvation is in my Heavenly Father, through his Son Jesus Christ, and I don't believe he will fail me. He never has." And as he said of Jeter, so may be said of him. There is no one to fill his place in the enterprise and public spirit of our town.

A large, honorable and respectable family mourn his loss, and to them and the friends of Captain Fretwell we tender our sincere sympathies. Thus together have passed away two of the oldest sentinels on the out-posts of mortality in Anderson.

A Suggestion.

MR. EDITOR: We wish to speak with the eaders of your paper about Anderson and er interests. We are of the opinion that the time has arrived to build a large factory in the town of Anderson. We believe that our people have the spare means to enter into such an enterprise, and if correct in this the only remaining question is, Will it pay? We think it will, if properly managed. There can be no doubt about it. We are in the centre of the finest cotton belt in the State cotton sufficient sold in our the State-cotton sufficient sold in our market annually to supply a first-class cot ton factory. This is certainly a very deci-ded advantage over many mills that succeed and declare large dividends to their stockhol-ders annually. We take it that a good per centum could and would be realized on the investment, therefore no objection can be urged to the enterprise on this considera-

Is the foregoing all the consideration? We think not. It would make Anderson a better market for the planter; it would double the population of our town; it would increase the price of real estate both in the town and surrounding country; the mercantile business would be greatly in-creased; the business of mechanics—carenters, masons, painters, and all-would be greatly enhanced, and from these sources many other advantages would naturally arise, such as additional contributions to our schools and churches. These considerations alone, disconnected from the percen-tage on the investment, would compensate the stockholders, but when we get the per-centage and the other advantages attending the enterprise, why not enter into it?

We write with the hope of getting our
