

THE REVISED BIBLE.

How it is Received by the Clergy of Atlanta.

Atlanta Constitution.

The excitement over the revision of the St. James version of the New Testament is beginning to touch Atlanta, and yesterday the Constitution reporter called upon several prominent ministers of the city and secured expression of opinion concerning the necessity for, and the probable future of, the revision. The book is gotten up in a number of styles of binding and printing, and retails at prices varying from fifteen cents to six dollars. The twenty-five cent style will probably have the largest sale for the present in Atlanta. It is neatly printed, unabridged, and will answer all purposes for comparisons. A few copies of the edition have been on sale for a few days, but owing to the fact that there were no advertisements, the sale has been limited to about three dozen copies. The books will be here in great numbers in a few days, and, as General Evans remarked yesterday, the probability is that the Bible will have such a universal reading as has never been known in this country. The United States edition of the new version in the pulpits of Atlanta was made Sunday, by Rev. E. J. Cooke, pastor of the Marietta street Methodist church. He took for his text a portion of the 37th verse of the 18th chapter of John, which is as follows: "To this end was I born, and for this cause I have come into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

The new version is as follows: "To this end have I been born, and to this end have I come into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

Rev. B. C. Fouse, pastor of St. Philip's church, said that he had not seen the revision, and would not express an opinion. He said that he had seen a thorough review of the changes, and that his opinion was that the revision would be a great blessing to the church.

Dr. J. H. Martin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, said that he had not seen the revision, but that he had seen a thorough review of the changes, and that his opinion was that the revision would be a great blessing to the church.

Rev. C. A. Evans, pastor of the First Methodist church, said: "You are aware that I preached a sermon on the subject a few days ago, in which I endorsed the revision. The interests of Christianity demand that we should have a new translation of the Bible. A living language is liable to change and words take on new meanings. This with the error of translation and of grammar rendered the new version absolutely necessary. I look upon the book which is now before us in the light of a revised translation, which will be used by the people of the world, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

Rev. John W. Heidt, of Trinity church, replied as follows to a query from the reporter: "I had of the new revision. It is the result of patient, faithful work. Perhaps no fairer search for truth could have been instituted. The text has been studied, compared, tested by every rule of translation and construction, and the final rendering agreed on. I can assure you that the new version is a great blessing to the church. It is a living language, and it will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

THE COMING COTTON CROP.

Important and Interesting Reports From the Principal Cotton-Growing States.

Atlanta Constitution.

On April 16, in summarizing the cotton situation, Bradstreet's pointed out that the receipts for the preceding four months had been larger than for any corresponding period in this history of the trade. For the past four weeks a like story can be told. Reports to the editor of Bradstreet's summarized in that journal of May 14, shows that on May 5 there was more cotton on the plantations in the South than at the same date last year. Indications continue to point to a confirmation of the estimate of 6,422,000 bales for the old crop. The journal named, referring to the course of the cotton market for the next few weeks, says that it will very probably depend very much on the weather report which has been fully discounted, and whether the final output is 6,400,000 bales, or 6,500,000 bales, it will have little influence on prices hereafter. Feeling that this is the most important feature in the cotton trade at the moment, it has taken great care to be informed as to the latest reports of the crop, and the prospects of the growing crop. Full reports as to the acreage planted with cotton this spring being impossible at this early date, the best available data bearing on the condition and outlook of the new cotton crop are given, and are summarized as follows: Georgia reports an increase of 7 per cent. The new crop was planted ten to fifteen days later than last year, but owing to the favorable weather for the last three weeks, part of the time lost has been regained. A large increase in the acreage is noted, and labor is as good as last year. South Carolina reports an increased acreage of full 8 per cent, a large increase in the use of fertilizers, and that the crop in some regions is earlier than last year. The crop prospects are said to be quite equal to those of last year. Georgia advises as to the effect that the same acreage as that of last year has been planted with a large increase in the use of fertilizers. The crop is reported as very promising, though perhaps fifteen days late. Florida reports a slightly increased acreage, and though late in planting the fine weather for the past two weeks has placed the crop in good condition. Alabama advises state that a slight decrease is noted in the acreage planted, and that planting was fully fifteen days later than last year. Telegraphic reports are, however, not so favorable to the favorable weather for the past two weeks, the crops are as early as usual, and that the prospects are good. Mississippi has about the same acreage as last year on uplands. The use of fertilizers will be largely increased. Planting was from eight to twenty days later than last year, but a part of the delay has been recovered, and the crop prospects are good. Louisiana has about the same acreage as last year, though planting is fifteen days later. Late advice by mail state that the outlook for the crop is good, and that the crop is ten to twelve days later than last year. Texas advises an increased acreage of five per cent. The comparatively small increase in this State is explained by the large amount of railroad building, which has absorbed a large proportion of the available labor. The crop was three weeks later than last year, but for the past three weeks the weather has been very favorable. Reports by mail say that the stands are good, and part of the delay in planting has been recovered. Arkansas reports an increased acreage of five per cent. The crop is ten to twelve days later than last year, but a part of the delay has been recovered, and the crop prospects are good. Tennessee reports about the same acreage as last year, with planting twelve to thirty days later than last year, but the crop is only ten to twenty days later than last year. The Mississippi River has interfered with planting in some instances. These reports, which are based on the observation and experience of cotton growers, cotton factors and others throughout the South, indicate that the crop is raised, point, therefore, to a largely augmented use of fertilizers, an increased acreage of cotton, with the crop thus far in good condition. The drawback occasioned by the delayed spring has, in part, at least, been offset by an unusually favorable season since planting. Special telegraphic advice from Memphis and New Orleans speak of the serious damage done in the largest cotton growing countries in Louisiana. The following table, received by the editor of Bradstreet's this evening, brings information as to the damage done by floods in Louisiana down to date: "A late dispatch from the morning of May 11, and by evening the crevasse was 250 feet wide, with water rushing through it at a tremendous rate. The crevasse is widening and deepening, no effort being made to check it. The water is now pouring down Bayou Macon, and great damage will result from it. In the parishes of East Carroll, Tensas, Madison and Concordia, the crops have been planted, and were well advanced. Can scarcely hope for the water to recede in time to admit replanting."

Another Shooting Affair Between Revenue Officers and a Citizen.

Another shooting difficulty has occurred between Revenue officials and a citizen, but this time the citizen receives the shot instead of a Revenue officer. The usual two-sided story reaches us, and we will give it just as we heard it, reserving comments until we are in possession of the facts. The case is in relation to the late shooting at the home of a gentleman from whom we derived it is as follows: They found Josh Alexander, standing in the door of the house, (whether still house, or dwelling our informant did not know), and when ordered to surrender he fired at Perry Cooper, who was over him, whereupon Cooper "pulled down and got him." Another report from the Revenue side is that the bullet, or shot from Alexander's gun cut a lock of hair from Mr. Cooper's head. The other side of the story is (and it is directly from the neighborhood) that the Revenue officer surrounded Mr. Alexander, and shot him about daylight or a little before, and making their presence known, Mr. Alexander, who is a son-in-law of Powell's and lives in the house with him, went to one of the doors and opened it. When he did so, he saw W. F. Cooper with a gun pointed at him. He thereupon turned and went to the other door, (we suppose there were only two doors to the house), opened it and ran out in order to make his escape. Cooper was at this door, and fired at Alexander, the shot striking him in the hip and leg. Mr. Alexander then ran after being shot through the hip and leg. The Revenue officers went to him and gave him some whiskey, carried him back into the house and left him. Dr. King has since extracted one bullet shot from his body, and Dr. Fries, an equine shot, has since extracted some from his body, about four or five of them being buck shot the others squirrel shot. Alexander was spitting up blood on last Sunday morning and was not expected to live. We will publish all the particulars when we obtain them reliably, with such comments as we think the affair demands. Alex. Cooper, with his gun, called "Rocky Bottom," in the mountains of this County, near the North Carolina line.

Since the above was put in type, we have conversed with a gentleman who visited Mr. Alexander on last Sunday. He informs us that, he learned from Mr. Alexander's son, that about 50 yards from his house, he did not shoot at Mr. Cooper. He did not have even a pocket knife about his person, being in his night clothes. Mr. Alexander says that Lee Fisher had the gun pointed at him at the first door he opened, and when he went to the other door, he was shot through the hip and leg, and could have snatched it from him, but knowing Mr. Cooper and being friendly with him, he did not think he would shoot him and concluded to run off, knowing that there was a warrant against him. Cooper shot twice and Lee Fisher once at him. He ran about 50 yards, and then stepped before he fell. The officers carried him back into the house by his request, but never said a word about his arrest. The gentleman from whom we got this information thinks Mr. Alexander will recover, notwithstanding 78 shot entered his left hip and thigh.—Fickens Sentinel.

The Insanity Dodge.

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

In murder trials these days the plea of insanity has become so common as to be regarded almost a matter of course. If a man, harboring in his breast, the intention of committing a crime, and which will win its way to the front rank. By slow stages it will move forward, commencing itself steadily to the enlightened judgment of Christendom."

AN AWFUL CALAMITY.

The Canadian Thames the Scene of the Latest Steamboat Misfortune.

Atlanta Constitution.

LONDON, ONTARIO, May 24.—This evening at 7 o'clock the steamer Victoria, with over six hundred excursionists on board, was returning from Spring Bank, and when near the Cove railway bridge, one mile below the city, the boat suddenly collapsed like an egg shell and became a total wreck, level with the water. The alleged first king of the world, Nimrod, is supposed to have founded this city. It was built in an exact square, each side being fifteen miles long, consequently embracing an area of two hundred and twenty-five square miles. The modern world will never cease to wonder at the vast proportions of this gigantic wall which encircled the city. This structure was three hundred and fifty feet in height and eighty-seven in thickness—broad enough for six chariots to drive abreast. The illustrious Nebuchadnezzar made this city the most magnificent in the world. The hanging gardens constructed under his matchless hand have never ceased to be the wonder as well as share the admiration of mankind. Even the artistic Greek reckoned them one of the "seven wonders of the world." In these gardens the largest trees grew at an elevation of three hundred and fifty feet. The temple of Belus was surpassingly magnificent. The graven images and vessels were of massive gold. The temple, probably built on the foundation of the tower of Babe, was the most elevated structure ever reared, being considerably higher than the loftiest Egyptian pyramid. It was built on the site of the temple of Belus, and the site of the temple, its treasures besides amounted to more than $100,000,000. Nebuchadnezzar's palaces were not surpassed by his other stupendous works. The old one was four miles in circumference, the new, eight miles. The passage between the channel of the river afforded means of secret communication between these two mammoth buildings. An endless variety of animals were represented in life size, on the walls of these palaces, and at each entrance were magnificent gates, made of brass taken from pillaged Jerusalem. But the time was approaching when the "golden city" should be "brought low." The mandate had gone forth from the Most High that when Nebuchadnezzar's "son's son" should sit upon the throne this proud, wicked city should fall. The beginning of the fall was the fall of the golden city. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open combat. But the Babylonians, who had been the terror of all nations, now cowardly shut themselves within their walls. The king, who had been on the throne of the wicked and inefficient Belshazzar, Cyrus the Great besieged the city, and during two years constantly challenged Belshazzar to meet him in an open