

SMITHSONIAN.

BY DR. WM. STILES.

"The cup that my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?"

"Kissing on all my Fathers love, show sweet it is."

"Methought I heard a gentle voice— 'Child, here's a cup!'

"Here's a flower." "My heart did sink—I could no more receive."

"Father, do not love thy child?" "Then why this cup?"

"One day, my child, I said to thee— 'Here is a flower.'"

"Plucked from a beauteous flower— 'Didst thou complain, or take it thoughtfully?'"

"One day I gave thee pleasant fruit from a choice tree."

"Thou saidst, 'I love thee!— These fruits may I prove?' Thy heart was full with joy, thine eyes did beam."

"That flower was mine, that fruit was mine— this cup is mine!"

"And all that's in it comes from me?" "Father, I'm still."

"Forgive my naughty will, But what's in the cup, may I look in and see?"

"Thou saidst, 'My child, thou must not see.'" "Christ only saw His destined cup of bitter gall."

"Only believe— 'Methought I heard thee say— And know that love and wisdom mixed it all!'"

"O Father, must I be?" "It must, my child!" "Then give!"

"Receive this cup, my child!— Only thy face don't hide! I'll drink it all, it must be good: 'tis mine!"

QUEEN OF HEARTS.

Mrs. Governor Pickens of South Carolina—Sketch of her Early Life.

The New Orleans Democrat, after giving a sketch of Miss Holcombe, of Texas, now Mrs. Pickens, of this State, proceeds to tell her as follows:

Many years elapsed. One beautiful young Texan had become a dignified matron of well preserved beauty and unimpaired zeal and earnestness in behalf of any cause which engaged her sympathies.

The war of secession had been inaugurated. South Carolina, the gamecock of the South, as the poetical name called out her bravest to confront invaders of her soil and her sovereignty.

There was a grand review of volunteers at her beautiful capital. The Governor, a veteran of the Revolution and a descendant from a distinguished chieftain and hero of the Revolution of 1776, was present.

With conscious pride and flashing eyes, his Excellency rode down the ranks of the gallant volunteers of his native State, accompanied by his staff.

Prominent in the group of the showily dressed officers of his staff rode a handsome and graceful lady, garbed in the simple colors of the Confederacy, and mounted on a splendid charger, which she handled with the grace and skill of an accomplished equestrienne.

The eyes of the Governor, all the while fixed upon this lady, as they presented arms, in intense and enthusiastic admiration, and could not be repressed by any military discipline.

They broke forth into one harmonious and wild hurrah to the lady of the Governor, almost forgetting, in the intensity of their enthusiasm, his Excellency and his gallant staff.

This lady was the young heroine of the Cuban enterprise described, and the author of the "Free Flag of Cuba."

The lovely Miss Holcombe of Marshall, Texas, had become the wife of the distinguished Governor Pickens, of South Carolina.

Appointed by President Buchanan to the Russian Mission, Governor Pickens bore his beautiful bride to the brilliant court of Emperor Alexander, who had just succeeded his father on the throne of all the Russias.

On this new scene in that far distant land and ungenial clime, among strangers and without a familiarity with the language and social habits and ideas of the court and people, our young Texan bride soon displayed the power and effect of her genius, her charms of person, grace and tact by the conquest of the hearts and enthusiastic admiration of all who came within the large circle of her influence and acquaintance.

She became as attractive and influential at the Court of Alexander, including the highest official of the government, the distinguished military chiefs, the ambassadors of all the great powers, and finally of the appreciative and susceptible Emperor Alexander, as she had been among the filibusters in New Orleans. So intense and earnest were the sentiments of the Emperor for our young bride, that the Empress was drawn toward her with special attention and a warm interest, the emphatic manifestations of which her Highness regarded as wise and judicious tributes to the taste and desires of her imperial husband, who had given such strong proofs of his preference for the charming young bride of the diplomatic representative of the great republic.

His brilliant position at the court was sustained through the influence of the American Minister at St. Petersburg, and when the union of the veteran Governor with the lovely Texan was blessed by the birth of a daughter, the Empress named the honor of presiding at her christening as representing the republic and giving the name and an appropriate gift upon the young heiress to the fortunes and fame of one of the most ancient and honored of the Revolutionary families of South Carolina.

The name given to the little girl was a Russian one of such length and difficult orthography that we can not recall it in its entirety, but that "Douschka" was the pronomen, and by that she was ever known and called.

The approaching sectional strife in which South Carolina assumed so leading and perilous a position terminated the mission of Gov. Pickens to St. Petersburg. He hastened home with his young wife and daughter, was elected to the Governorship, and entered with all his earnestness and energy into the necessary preparations for the defense of his native State.

In all his labors he had the enthusiastic and efficient cooperation, sympathy and aid of his accomplished young wife, who acted as his secretary and aid, and accompanied him in all his reviews and journeys through the State.

Her Governor did not survive the unhappy and devastations result of that struggle. His bereaved State and widow were left to bear the miseries, devastations and impoverishment, which were the bitter fruits of the untimely but gallant and patriotic effort. Nobly were borne.

South Carolina and the widow of her heroic Governor have, throughout these late, maintaining a heroic patience and self-composure which admirably ever develop in all heroic natures. Therefore Mrs. Pickens devoted her chief care to the education and training of her lovely daughter, the godchild of the recently deceased and most exemplary Emperor of Russia.

That daughter ripened into a blooming and attractive young lady, vindicated the excellence of this training. She became one of the belles of her native State, and in her appearance in the brilliant salons of the fashionable summer resorts in the Virginia mountains, accompanied by her handsome and dignified mother, excited it unbounded admiration and the envy of beholders, and a zealous rivalry among the gallant youth, who frequent these attractive places.

Happily, however, this rivalry has ended by the brilliant nuptial ceremony which recently took place at Edgefield, South Carolina, when the lovely Miss Douschka Pickens was led to the altar by a gallant and accomplished southern gentleman, amid the jubilation and enthusiastic demonstration of the whole population.

Saved by a Shadow. The scout was surrounded. He took in everything at a glance and determined to cut his way through and risk the chances.

But the ladies presented to him that this was a certain death. They could conceal him, and—

The young ladies acted promptly. One ran to the window and asked who was there, while another closed the back door—that in front being already fastened.

The scout looked at the ladies. In a case, one of the ladies accompanying him to show him his hiding place. All had taken place in a few moments, and the Federal troops gave sudden evidence of their estimate of the situation.

They fired a volley through the front door and the bullets whistled by the young ladies. Then the door was burst in and the troopers swarmed into the house.

— had been conducted to a garret bare of all furniture, but some planks lay upon the floor of the ceiling, and lay upon the floor of the ceiling, and by lying down on these a man might conceal himself. So mounted quietly and stretched himself at full length and the young lady retired and returned to her room. From his perch, he then heard all that was said in the hall beneath.

"Where is the guerrilla?" exclaimed the Federal officer commanding the detachment.

"What guerrilla?" asked one of the ladies.

"The rascal!"

"He was here, but he has gone."

"That is untrue," the officer said, "I shall search this house. But first read the orders to the men," he added, turning to a sergeant.

The sergeant obeyed and the distinctly overheard the reading of his death warrant. The paper chronicled his exploits, denounced him as a guerrilla and bushwhacker, and directed that he should not be taken alive; the men were expressly ordered to kill him, not to take him prisoner. This was not reassuring to the scout concealed under the rafters above. It was probable that he would be discovered, in which case death would follow. There was but one thing to do—to sell his life dearly.

After ransacking every room on the first and second floors, the Federal troops ascended to the garret. The ladies had attempted to divert their attention from it, but one of them asked:

"What room is that up there?"

"The garret," was the reply.

"It may be there, show the way."

"You see the way," returned the young lady. "I do not wish to go up in dust; it would soil my dress."

"You go before, then," said the trooper to a negro girl who had been made to carry about a lighted candle for night had come now. The girl laughed and said, "There is nobody up there," but at the order went up stairs to the garret, followed by the troopers.

The decisive tramp feet and the clack of his pistols. The light streamed into the garret, and looking over the edge of his plank he saw the garret filled with troopers. All seemed over and his discovery certain; he was about to spring down and fire, when the men cried, "Hold! there's nothing here," and went down the stairs again. The servant girl had saved him by a ruse. She had taken her stand directly beneath the board plank upon which she—— was extended, and to her deep shadow had concealed him. To her ruse he doubtless owed his life. An hour afterwards the Federal detachment left the house in extreme ill-humor, and on the morning of the next day he had been seen from the dangerous locality where he had overheard his sentence of death. So is now one of the leading clergymen in Virginia.—J. Esten Cooke, in the Philadelphia Weekly Times.

THE SENATOR'S VISITING CARDS.—The mystic letters written on visiting cards are a source of bewilderment to the Congressmen from rural districts, who can not decipher their meaning. Hence that stalwart Kentuckian, Sen. McCree, met a foolish young constable, who had just returned from London, and said to him: "I received your card the other day. I recognized your father's name, which is the same as yours, and supposed that it was his son; but what did the letters E. P. written in the corner mean?" "Why, Mr. Senator," replied the traveled man, "it is customary in Paris to write the initials of certain works on leaving cards. For example, had I been going away, I should have written P. C. the initials of the printer engaged to take leave. As it was calling myself, I wrote E. P. the initials of En Personne—in person."

"Oh!" said McCree. "I understand. A week or so afterwards the two met again, and the young man said: 'Senator, I received your card, but I couldn't comprehend what the letters S. B. A. N. in the corner meant. Pray interpret them.' With pleasure, said McCree, his eyes twinkling with humor, 'S. B. A. N. are the initials of Sent By a Nigger!' The young man tried to laugh, but really couldn't see the point of the inscription. Others did.—Cor. Boston Journal.

— There is quite a stir in the treasury department just now over another scandal. A new investigation is under way, the result of which is looked forward to by the employees interested with some anxiety. It has been ascertained that the secretary's decision relative to the heavy call for bonds as yesterday got into the hands of a certain broker near the treasury before the call itself had been promulgated. The depressed state of the stock market made the exclusive information a handle upon which several speculators sought to profit. The usual plan is to defer such calls until after the 1st of January, and then to publish them to everybody at once, and it was telegraphed to Wall Street. The secretary is very indignant and has set to work to find out who furnished the information, and his recent ones under suspicion are very indignant that they are suspected. It is said that Mr. J. K. Updegraff, an assistant secretary of the treasury, is a stockholder and officer of the banking institution which got the inside track on the news.

— Charlotte (N. C.) Observer: A prominent gentleman of Cabarrus reports that a married woman of that county suckled at the same breast and has just weaned a baby and a baby cow. He states positively that he himself has seen both at the breast and gave a ludicrous account of the half playful and half angry struggles between the child and the cow for the choice of nipples. The cow would roughly brush her child away, carefully avoiding, however, any use of her claws; he would return with spirit to the defense of his natural rights, and in the meantime the mother would look on with perfect neutrality, appearing to enjoy in a quiet way the novel contest.

A Massachusetts mill owner used a man for watering six head of cattle in his mill pond. The man drank enough to stop the mill for forty minutes, and the damages are laid at $25.

Mr. George Drake, 45 Oak street, Indianapolis, Ind., suffered terribly with 'water' rheumatism. He used St. Jacobs Oil, and was entirely cured.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

Judge DeLois is said to preserve his frugal habits, notwithstanding his promotion to the Presidency of the Senate. To a young friend who found him counting a roll of greenbacks the other day he said: "There is my statutory allowance. The Senate are allowed $125 for stationery. To much, too much. I have used just $1 worth, and am entitled to $121 in cash and here it is. Revere, economical and saving young man."

A Kentucky girl was struck by lightning and killed while dressing for her wedding, and the hard-hearted Cincinnati Enquirer says: "There's such a thing as a girl being too attractive."
