Atlanta Post-Appeal. The following remarkable story was imparted to a Post Appeal reporter by a railroad man. The names are purposely charged, but the facts are vouched for, and will be recognized by the few familiar with the facts in this city:

It was nearly time for the cars to leave. Passengers hurried to and fro looking after their baggage. A carriage drove up and stopped in front of the car shed. A beautiful young woman leaped out and rushed through the crowd and into the baggage car. Confronting the conductor she said, "Sir are you a married man?" "I am, madam," he asswered. Turning to the baggage master she asked, "Are you married, sir?"

"I am not," was the reply.
"Will you marry me?" she asked.
"No, madam; I will not marry you; what are you doing here anyhow? The cars will leave in a few minutes and you had better get off."

Benton, the brakeman, who was sitting near with his hands in a bucket of axel grease, looked up at the young lady and said: "Madam, I will marry you if you

"Very well," she answered; "you will do, come along with me." They walked to the carriage together, entered, and drove rapidly away to the office of Mr. Merritt, an attorney. Arriving hence, the lady introduced Benton to the lawyer.

"Are you of age?" queried Mr. Merritt.
"I am," replied Benton.
"Will you marry this woman?"
"I will, sir."
"And for a consideration will you promise to leave this country after you have married her?"

'Yes, I will do that." "Then (tossing him a fifty dollor note) take this, go buy you a suit of clothes and come back."

In a short while Benton returned, and, accompanied by his bride expectant and Mr. Merritt, proceeded to a minister's, where the marriage ceremony was briefly performed. Then taking the groom aside, Mr. Merritt said: "The young lady to whom you are married was Miss Gertrude Templeton. She is the heiress of a considerable fortune. When her father died and left her an orphan he made a will, of which I am the executor. The will provides that the legacy bequeathed to Miss Templeton should be left with Mr. Carson, a friend of her father's, and art. Carson, a friend of her lather's, and not delivered up by him until the young lady was married. We have frequently attempted to get the money but failed. Being limited in her support, Miss Templeton has scarcely been known in social circles. I have worked up the case in this way to obtain the inheritance for her. Now get your wife and as with for her. Now, get your wife and go with me to Carson and demand the heritage." The three then repaired to the office of Mr. Carson, and Benton having been introduced as the husband of the young lady, the deliverance of the inheritance was asked. At first it was refused. "Do was asked. At first it was refused. Do you not know me, and is not my standing good in the city?" asked Mr. Merritt of Carson. Thereupon the money was surrendered.
"Now," said Mr. Merritt to Benton,

"go get you a boarding house and call again to see me to morrow. In the mean time let this lady take care of herself.

They parted, and the next day Benton called, according to their engagement.
"Well, my friend," began the lawyer, "we want you to go to some foreign country for two or three years; what consid-"I don't know; what is my wife worth?"

"I shall accept no other consideration. By the laws of the State she is my wife, and I shall have her."

"Weil, here, take this." (Handing him five buddred dollars.) "Go see whether she is killing to be your wife, and let me know what you decide upon."
Benton called on his bride and obtained Benton called on his bride and obtained permission to visit her again and again. In the course of a few months they had agreed to live as man and wife. Meanwhile Mr. Merritt inquired about Benton, and learned that he was of a splendid family. The inheritance was delivered into their possession, and to-day they are living in Atlanta in affluent circumstances the happy parents of a house. while Mr. Merritt inquired about Benton, and learned that he was of a splendid family. The inheritance was delivered into their possession, and to-day they are living in Atlanta in affluent circumstances, the happy parents of a household of bright children. This is no fiction. These facts are true, except that fictitious names are assumed, because the writer is not authorized to give the real names of the parties to this romance in real life.

Don't let us act too hasty, but give the laws a fair trial and if they prove to our disadvantage though you habitually abstain, as I do myself, from everything of the sort, there are occasions, and this is one of them, when a stimulant will do us both good; I would neither take it myself nor offer it to you. So you must make an exception to your general rule and join me in a toddy your general rule and join me in a toddy to night."

It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, In diseases of the AYER'S the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of Ayer's Cherry Pecronal, are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious ill-

Pecronal are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whoopping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy cellications, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply scated or incurable. Use Ayen's Cheiner Pectoral, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.
