History Once More Called in Question.

To the Editor of The News and Courier; I think the publication of the enclosed papers will be interesting to your readers. The want of a date in Mr. McMaster's letter as to the time when the stranger visited Kincaid's mill is to be regretted, as a date would shed a light upon the point in question.

I have not been able to find the date of Whitney's patent. McCulloch's "Coml. Dict." says 1793, and that the next year the exports of cotton amounted to nearly two million of pounds, whereas in 1793 it was less than one hundred and fifty thou-was less than one hundred and fifty thousand pounds.

The Legislature of this State in 1801 gave Miller & Whitney $50,000 for the use of his patent in this State.

I used to be familiar with the story of the invention of the saw gin, but it has nearly faded from my memory. Whitney graduated at Yale College in 1792. This is certain from the records of that college. He then went to Georgia to be a teacher in the family of Mrs. Miller, sister of General Greene. In her house he saw many planters, all of whom regretted that a product which Georgia could produce so readily should be useless beproduce so readily should be useless be-cause of the difficulty of separating the cotton from the seed. Whitney studied the subject and the result was the saw gin. The whole work was perfected in

Mrs. Miller's house.

What share Mr. Miller had in the invention does not appear, probably he furnished the money. The patent was made out for Miller & Whitney, and it was to them that the Legislature paid the

When the gin came into general use is still doubtful. It could not have been before 1795. Doubtless many wits were at work to invent a gin, as we see by the patent of Hogden Holmes By 1801, when the Act of the Legislature was passed, cotton had become the steple of South Carolina and Georgia. It is so long since my attention has been called to this subject, that I find I cannot rely on my memory, and authentic histories are not to be had. Perhaps if you give publicity to these papers you may revive the memories of others who may shed some light on this interesting feature in our history. Very respectfully,

F. A. PORCHER,

LETTER FROM C. H. M'MASTER TO THE SEC. S. C. HISTORICAL SOCIETY

WINNSBORO', May 23, 1882.
Dear Sir: By request of Mr. W. D
Aiken I send to your society letters patent for the invention of the cotton gin issued by President Washington in 1796 to Hogden Holmes. It is believed by many in this community that Whitney filched the invention from Holmes.

The following is fact: James Kincaid.

in this community that Whitney filched the invention from Holmes.

The following is fact: James Kincaid, a soldier of the Revolution, being told by Holmes, who lived at Hamburg, that he had invented a cotton gin, agreed to take the gin and try it at his mill, situated in the western part of Fairfield District. He did so, and whilst the gin was at the mill, and whilst the mill was closed for a few hours, in the absence of Kincaid a young man rode to the house and asked Mrs. Kincaid permission to see the mill. She, forgetting the injunction of her husband not to permit any one to enter the mill during his absence, gave the key to the young man, who returned it in a short time and rode off. Mr. Kincaid learned afterwards that the young man was Whitney, and this is believed by Kincaid's descendants, who still own the mill. The old original cotton gin was burned with the mill by Mr. Sherman, who, I believe, is from the same country as Whitney.

as Whitney.

Dr. W. M. Cloud, W. D. Aiken's grandfather, married the daughter of Hogden Holmes, and preserved the parchments which I enclose. Respectfully,

P. S.—It would be interesting to have published in The News and Courier these letters patent, and this is Mr. Aiken's wish, and thereby elict a comparison of the respective claims of Hogden Holmes and of Whitney, and the honor of the invention of the Cotton Gin. C. H. McM.

LETTERS PATENT. The United States of America.

To all and whom these letters patent To all and whom these letters patent shall come: Whereas Hogden Holmes, a citizen of the State of Georgia, in the United States, hath alleged that he has invented a new and useful improvement, to-wit: new machinery called the cotton gin; which improvement has not been known or used before his application; her made oath that he does veribly believe that he is the true inventor or discontinuous. lieve that he is the true inventor or discoverer of the said improvement; has paid into the Treasury of the United States the sum of $30, delivered a receipt for the same, and presented a petition to the Secretary of State, signifying a desire of obtaining an exclusive property in the said improvement, and praying that a patent may be granted for that purpose: These are therefore to grant, according to law, to the said Hogden Holmes, his heirs, administrators and assigns, for the term of fourteen years, from the 19th day of the month of April last past, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using lieve that he is the true inventor or dis last past, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using and vending to others to be used, the said improvement, a description wherefore is given in the words of the said Hogden Holmes himself, in the schedule hereto annexed, and is made a part of this patent.

In witness whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed. Given under my hand in the city of Philadelphia, this twelfth day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the twentieth.

If he is pressed too closely, he must strike into a new country "to find a range." His judgment must be exercised with regard to several particulars. The country he selects must be fairly covered with the natural grasses, with here and there patches of grease-wood, white sage or other browse, to serve as food in case the grass is covered by a fall of snow. He must further assure himself as to the perennial character of the stream or water-holes upon the range, upon which the cattle are to depend for one essential element. And, leatly, he should also see to it that the country affords good shelter from the winter winds and storms; secured by clumps of trees, bluff, or other features of a broken country. With feed, water and shelter assured, he feels that a suitable range has been found, and returns to drive thither his herd. Into a heavy freight wagon is loaded the whole ranch equipment, including tent, bedding cooking utensils, and provisions to last perhaps a year.
