

Mr. W. J. Compton, in Fork Township, runs his school ten months. He will not teach any other kind, and his patrons understand it. They know how to appreciate a faithful teacher, and are willing to pay for his services.

We are sorry to lose Mr. D. H. Russell from the number of our teachers. He is a faithful and painstaking teacher and ought to have regular work in the school room. While he is not confident of the great cause of education will have his earnest sympathy and ever-abiding interest. Our best wishes attend him.

It gives us pleasure to notice that Miss Leonora Hubbard is one of the regular correspondents of the Carolina Teacher. Our readers have made Miss Hubbard's acquaintance in the Teachers' Column. We congratulate the members of the Anderson County Teachers' Association that they are represented in the columns of that excellent paper by so worthy a member.

Unavoidable circumstances prevented a meeting of the Anderson County Teachers' Association last Fall. As early as practicable the executive committee will arrange for a meeting. Due notice will be given through this Column, and it is hoped that every teacher in the County will try to attend. One meeting in a few weeks and another in the Spring will contribute no little to the general interest in the cause.

Let our readers not suppose that because during the Spring months, we will have no need of a Teachers' Column. We hope to arrange for a two weeks' session in accordance with the wishes of the teacher-pupils at the closing exercises of the Institute last Summer. Already we have employed two instructors. We were forced to be thus hasty on account of the great demand for persons competent for positions of so great responsibility. Let the interest in the cause of education not be abated, but let the teachers take advantage of the suspension of the public schools to better prepare themselves for the work of the future. If the first Teachers' Institute accomplished some good, the next one must accomplish a great deal. Let us work for it and expect it.

While in Columbia in December, the pressure of business prevented our spending more than a few minutes in the Graded Schools. We saw enough, however, in those few minutes to convince us that system and order are the watch-words, and that the business-like manner of doing things there pays. We found Prof. Johnson, the Superintendent of the Graded Schools and one of the editors of The Carolina Teacher, plain, amiable and affable gentleman, and had the pleasure of meeting again Miss Fannie McCants, so well known to the majority of our teachers. Miss Selby's pleasing face and easy manner contributed largely to the pleasure of our visit, and, altogether our visit to the Graded Schools of Columbia, though short, was pleasant and profitable. Miss McCants, who presides so easily and gracefully over one of the rooms there, and who contributed so considerably to the success of the Teachers' Institute last year, has consented to be with us again next Summer. That fact alone almost insures success.

Last week we expressed the opinion that the close of the public schools would in the end, be for the educational interests of the County. The fact that, already, in many sections of the County, private or subscription schools have been made up, is evidence of the correctness of that opinion. Our people had learned to rely on the education of their children. That fund of itself is insufficient, and many children that deserve better things at the hands of their parents are allowed to grow up in comparative ignorance. Either ignorance or a pusillanimous stinginess makes some men measure the education of their children by the face of their tax receipts. This temporary suspension of the public schools will test the earnestness of a great many in this matter of education. There are plenty teachers and some good school-houses in the County; let the teachers be employed and the houses be occupied. Let the citizens in the neighborhood of Graytown give a strong support to Miss Minerva Drake, who has labored many long months faithfully and well among their children. They can not afford to lose her. The Generosees school is to be in the hands of Miss Lila Prince. The patrons of that school say they are determined to have a school. Miss Prince will do them good service. At Salem, Mr. W. P. Holland "teaches the young ideas how to shoot," and is supported by the wide-awake citizens in that community. And so, at various other sections of the County, subscription schools are running, or the subject is very earnestly agitated. Let the good work go on. If you haven't a teacher, but are in earnest when you say you want one, write to me, and I think you can be supplied. Times are hard and money is scarce, but a little economy practiced on the part of our citizens would support many schools, and prove a blessing to thousands of little ones.

PERSEVERANCE. Perseverance is a thing of which poets often sing; And it is, and always will be, a thing of which still.

As long as man himself shall last, Until the present age is past; 'Tis 'till the world itself shall end, 'Tis 'till the world will ever pend.

Perseverance conquers all. All our tasks, though great or small. By persevering you may be As great a man as Pope or Lee.

There is nothing that we meet In our school, or on the street, That can not be overcome, If we stop and try it some.

STORIES FOR REPRODUCTION.

From the Teachers' Institute.

Three ladies once had a dispute as to which had the most beautiful hands. One sat by a stream and, dipping her hand into the water, held it up, white and dripping. "What could be more beautiful?" she cried. Another picked strawberries until the ends of her fingers were pink. "These are," said she. The third gathered violets until her hands were fragrant, and said, "But these are most beautiful." An old ragged woman, passing by, asked, "Who will give me some bread? I am very hungry." All three of the ladies refused to give her anything. Near them sat another lady who had made no boast of the beauty of her hands, nor tried to improve their looks. She gave to the old woman food and money. Then the beggar asked what they had been disputing about; they told her and lifted up their beautiful hands. "They are beautiful indeed," she said. But when they asked which were the most beautiful, she said, "Not the hand that is washed clean in the brook, not the hand that is tipped with flowers, not the hand that gives to the poor."

As she said this her wrinkles fled, her staff was thrown away and she stood before them, an angel from Heaven, with the power to decide the question in dispute. And that decision has stood the test of all time.

Gooboo was a monkey of high degree, who lived in a jungle in India. He was the chief of a tribe of brown monkeys, and the greatest thief in the forest. When he was young, he received a severe whip through the cords of one leg, while fighting with a gray monkey, and this left him lame. So he loafed around a large temple that stood on the edge of a jungle, and watched his chances to steal his daily food. Sometimes, there would be a festival at the temple, and throngs of pilgrims would come up to worship, some on foot and some on wagons. They all camped outside the temple-wall, and cooked their food over red fire-pieces, built of stones. During these festivals, the monkeys had a picnic. Swarms of them hung around, ready to snatch up anything they could lay their little brown hands on. Chief among these thieves was Gooboo, and his chief victim was a man. One day, as he sat on the image above her, he saw the palm-leaf fan fall by her side. This was the signal that she was asleep, and sliding down, he quickly slipped a piece of jaggery into one cheek-pouch, puffed out the other with a generous bit of cake, emptied the dish of ghee upon the smoldering coals, tucked his plain under one arm, and started back up the wall. All might have gone well but for his lame leg, which caused him to fall. The old woman, awakened by the spluttering of the ghee on the coals, seized a big, sharp knife and fell with all her might at Gooboo. Her aim was a sure one, and the pointed blade made a fatal wound. In a few minutes, Gooboo breathed his last.

A gentleman while walking in the fields one day, heard the cries of a bird in distress. Looking up, he saw a hawk trying to catch a poor little lark. The lark darted this way and that, and managed to keep out of the reach of his enemy, but he was plain that he was becoming tired out. The man felt very sorry for the lark, and was wishing that he could save it from the cruel hawk, when suddenly it darted down towards him and flew straight into his hand, where it remained panting and trembling. The hawk, when he saw what had happened, flew off as if in disgust.

The lion, it is said, likes the flesh of the Hottentot better than anything else he can get for his dinner. Once a Hottentot, while driving his master's cattle to a pool of water, saw a lion crouching in a pool and looking straight at him. Quickly he thought that if he ran back from the herd of cattle the lion would lose sight of him, and make a meal off of one of the beasts. But he was mistaken. Looking back, he saw the lion making his way through the herd fearfully toward him. Half dead with fear, he scrambled up an alou tree by the aid of steps which had been cut in the trunk by searchers for bird's nests. The lion made a spring at him, but, missing his aim, fell to the ground. The Hottentot screened himself from sight behind the branches, and thought the lion would give up and go away. After a long time he peeped out, and there sat the lion, with his terrible eyes glaring at him. After a while, the lion lay down, and for twenty-four hours he did not move from his place. Which would have held out the longest, it is hard to say, had not the lion become so thirsty that he was obliged to go to a spring at some distance for a drink. As soon as he was far enough away, the Hottentot scrambled down, and was soon beyond the lion's reach.

Ready for Action. It is not, perhaps, generally known that the Captain of a man-of-war is ordered to keep his ship properly prepared for battle as well in time of peace as of war. Every evening before dark the quarters are cleared and every arrangement made for night battle, to prevent surprise by a better prepared enemy. When at anchor in a harbor, especially at night, the ship is always prepared to repel any attempt of an enemy to board or attack with torpedoes or fire-ships. In addition to the daily and weekly drills and exercises, the crew are closing the crew are exercised at night quarters, the time, of course, being kept secret by the Captain, so that no preparations can be made beforehand, the exercises being intended to represent a surprise. In the dead of night, when only the officers of the watch and the sentries posted in the various parts of the ship are awake, the notes of a bugle vibrate along the decks. Immediately as if by magic, everything becomes alive; men are seen scrambling out of their hammocks and lights flash in all directions; the bugle shells are lifted by hydraulic power from the magazines, placed on trucks and wheeled by means of railways to the turrets; men run here and there with rifles, boarding pikes, axes, cases of powder and ammunition; others are engaged laying fire hose along the decks, others closing the watertight doors while far down below the engineers, stokers and firemen are busy getting up steam for working the electric light engines, turrets, etc.

At the torpedo boats in the Whiteheads in their tubs, others are preparing cases of gun cotton for boom torpedoes. In ten minutes, however, all is again silent and each man stands at his station ready for the Captain, followed by his principal officers, now walks round the quarters and inspects all the arrangements for battle, after which various exercises are gone through. A bugle sounds, and numbers of men rush away to certain parts of the ship to repair imaginary boilers; another bugle, and a large party immediately commences to work the pumps; another long blast is a warning that the ship is about to ram an enemy, and every man on board stretches himself flat on the decks until the shock of the supposed collision takes place. After a number of exercises have been gone through, the guns are secured, arms and stores returned to their places, the men tumble into their hammocks again, and are soon fast asleep.—Chambers' Journal.

Acts of the Legislature. ILLICIT SALE OF LIQUORS. An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to limit the ages of pupils attending the Free Public Schools," approved December 22, 1883.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE. An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to limit the ages of pupils attending the free public schools," approved December 22, 1883, by adding to the first section thereof the following: "That from and after the passage of this Act, it shall not be lawful for any person who is less than six or more than eighteen years of age, to attend any of the free public schools."

SECTION 1. That an Act entitled "An Act to limit the ages of pupils attending the free public schools," approved December 22, 1883, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the whole of the first section of said Act and inserting the following in lieu thereof: "That from and after the passage of this Act, it shall not be lawful for any person who is less than six or more than eighteen years of age, to attend any of the free public schools."

SECTION 2. That all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

Which of your boys, the heaven of your heart and life, will you give in order that your city may be lighted with electric lights? Which child can you spare to help your city grade and pave its streets? How long will you consent to tread on sidewalks that the blood of souls has enabled your city to lay for your convenience?—Mary F. Aldrich in Southern Journal, Louisville, Ky.

My wife has been a great sufferer from Catarrh. Several physicians and various patent medicines were resorted to, yet the disease continued unabated, nothing appearing to make any impression upon it. Her constitution finally became implicated, the poison being in her blood. I secured a bottle of B. B. and placed her upon its use, and to our surprise the improvement began at once, and her recovery was rapid and complete. No other preparation ever produced such a wonderful change, and for all forms of Blood Disease I cheerfully recommend B. B. as a superior Blood Purifier.

Uncle Dick Sautter says: Fifty years ago I had a running ulcer on my leg which refused to heal under any treatment. In 1853 I went to California and remained eighteen months, and in 1873 I visited Hot Springs, Ark., remaining three months, but was not cured. Amputation was discussed, but I concluded to make one more effort. I commenced taking the B. B. about six weeks ago. The fifty-year-old sore on my leg is healed and cured yesterday. I walked about fifteen miles fishing and hunting without any pain, and before long the B. B. B. I could not walk excepting half a mile. I sleep soundly at night for the first time in many years. That that six bottles have done me more good than Hot Springs, eighteen months in California, besides an immense amount of medicines and eight or ten first-class physicians, will convince any man on earth that it is a wonderful blood medicine. It has also cured me of catarrh.

There is a lady living here, Mrs. —, who has had catarrh for many, many years. I have known her for fifteen or twenty years, and my father once visited her, as she was then a tenant on our place. For the last two and a half years she has been bedridden, the catarrh of her mouth out. She was so offensive no one could stay in the room; she could not eat anything, but could not walk excepting a few feet. She gave up to die, and came so near perishing all thought she would die. Her son bought the B. B. B. and she used it, and had only the roof of an entire cure. She is now well and hearty. I have not exaggerated one particle.

WE TOLD YOU SO! WHEN WE COMMENCED BUSINESS we told you, through the INTELLIGENCER, that THE SAVANNAH VALLEY RAILROAD was going to be built in spite of croakers, and it has become an established fact that it IS TO BE COMPLETED SOON. In the meantime, what told you about our determination to build up a good trade has been verified, and to such a degree that we have been compelled to seek larger and more commodious apartments. ANDERSON IS ON A BOOM! And we are not going to be behind anybody. We can show a beautiful line of Dry Goods, Cloths, Collars, Jeans, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, and we carry a full Stock of Groceries and Provisions, Bagging and Ties that we will sell as cheap as any other house. We have built up a splendid trade by square dealing, and we are now so situated as to stand all the pressure that can be put upon us. Returning thanks to those who have given us their custom heretofore, we bespeak a continuance of their patronage in our new quarters, and we would be glad to see their neighbors, and their cousins, their sisters and their aunts, and all their male kindred. Our Store is now in the New Building on South side of the Public Square. We always pay highest Cash Prices for Cotton. BROWN BROS. Oct 10, 1885

IT STANDS AT THE HEAD! THE Light-Running Domestic. THIS cut shows the new Style of wood work that the Company is now introducing. Artistically beautiful, without a peer in its mechanical construction, it is the most perfect and reliable of all the machines that are now being placed with each "Domestic" are specialties. No other machine has them. These Atlanta agents and the new wood-work make the "Domestic" more than ever, without question, the acknowledged standard of excellence. Agents wanted in unoccupied territory. Address Domestic Sewing Machine Co., 909 Main Street, Richmond, Virginia. For Sale by C. A. REED, Agent, Anderson, S. C. July 9, 1885

WE TOLD YOU SO! WHEN WE COMMENCED BUSINESS we told you, through the INTELLIGENCER, that THE SAVANNAH VALLEY RAILROAD was going to be built in spite of croakers, and it has become an established fact that it IS TO BE COMPLETED SOON. In the meantime, what told you about our determination to build up a good trade has been verified, and to such a degree that we have been compelled to seek larger and more commodious apartments. ANDERSON IS ON A BOOM! And we are not going to be behind anybody. We can show a beautiful line of Dry Goods, Cloths, Collars, Jeans, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, and we carry a full Stock of Groceries and Provisions, Bagging and Ties that we will sell as cheap as any other house.
