What Hurts.

There is an outcry, here and there, not so vociferous since the elections, against Hon. George D. Tillman's statement for hard times. We understand Mr. Tillman to mean by this that the President is allied with the Northern or Wall street money power, in favor of the gold standard and currency contraction, and hostile to the free coinage of silver. Mr. Tillman and other economists refer the stringency of the markets, the low price of cotton, wheat, etc., to this Eastern legislation, which, under a Democratic Administration, differs, in no way financially, from the policy pursued by Hugh McCulloch and John Sherman as Secretaries of the

Now, very pertinently, comes the Birmingham Age and complains that while money is abundant at the North, at low rates of interest, "it is very high to the favored borrowers in Alabama, while many of the people cannot get a dollar, not even if they offer to do a day's work for it. We venture to say that not exceeding one in one hundred, or as to that matter, one in five hundred of the laboring men in the region of the cotton plantations in Alabama can go out in the morning and find a month's work on a whole chapter of explanation of the financial distress of the country. The Age refers most of this stringency to a hide-bound State law that bars the way to outside capital, although $90,000,-000 of taxable property is permitted to

Our contemporary adds: "Our entire cotton crop goes out without bringing a dollar of money back. We get meat, flour, meal, corn, hay and the like for it, and then mortgage our lands to meet the difference between sales of cotton and purchases of supplies to make cotton again. If the farmers would mortgage their lands and religiously devote the money raised to fencing it and stocking it, to save at home all money now sent out to buy grain, meat and mules, what a splendid profit cotton at eight cents would make on land making half a bale to the acre." Perhaps, if the South and West had a different financial policy at Washing-ton, money would be more abundant in those sections, and an awakening of home industry without the necessity of

The Fiftieth Congress may be memorable for shifting the political centre and changing the Wall street idea to one more in the interest of the whole people. While the South is drained of her profits, the East reaps the benefit by controlling legislation, and, when parties are revolutionized, perpetuating under a Manning the system of a Shermap.

If the money-changer of the East is to control everything, the people of Alabama and other Southern States may be long without the surplus dollar they are hunting for.

SIGNIFICANT FACTS.

IT is a significant fact that the poor devil who is tied up with a lien and mortgage, and knows he's got to do so, is always the first man to pay his account. It is a significant fact that people always put off paying the poor Drug man until they have paid everybody else, and then if they have anything left that they've no use for, they let him have it, and think they have done him a great

It is a fact most people lose sight of that the Drug man has got to pay his debts, live and keep out of the poor house if he can, just like other folks. It is a fact that Hill Bros. have sold a great many people this year and last on time, who ought to have paid them long ago and who havn't. It is a fact that if this cap fits any of all business transactions, and punctuality Is to use a Cotton Seed and Grain Crusher for crushing his Cotton Seed, and in this way you can make your own Fertilizer at home and save money.

WE invite your attention to the letter of Mr. G. S. Williford, who is a Public Ginner and Farmer of large experience. Read what he says, and then insist on your Public Ginner to buy a Cotton Seed and Grain Crusher. You will like it, and

Anderson, S. C., Sept. 28, 1886.

Messes. McCully, Cathcart & Co.—Gentlemen: The Barbour Cotton Seed and Grain Crusher which I bought of you last January has given me satisfaction in every respect. I can crush more seed per hour than you recommended the Machine to do, having speeded my Machine to crush 60 bushels per hour, which it did easily with about four horse power. The Seed when crushed is in excellent condition for use as a Fertilizer, and I am satisfied that farmers all over the South should use them as a matter of economy in the use of Cotton Seed as a Fertilizer. All my customers are pleased with the Machine, and I am having considerable addi tional demands to gin cotton from parties who desire their seed crushed.

Yours truly, G. S. WILLIFORD.
