duty. So I cannot see any injustice on Oconee's Representatives in the Legislathat line. The only injustice is the impracticability of equalizing the labor to the different sections of the roads that cannot be equally and justly done. Another great disadvantage in the present system is getting suitable overseers for each section of road. But the greatest loss of time and labor is want of suitable tools to work with, when not one-half of the hands own a tool suitable, and no one s responsible or under any obligations to furnish them, besides private property cannot be used for public purposes. Well, you say there are about 5,000 road ands in the County, and they are liable to eight days work each, which, at 50 cents per day, is $20,000. Why not tax these road hands sufficient to work the roads, with the privilege of working it out at 50 cents a day under a contractor, and tax he property of the County to pay the contractors? Would it not be a great savng of labor when ten hands, under a contractor, with suitable tools, would perform the labor of twenty called out under he present system? Let the contractor be prepared with receipts to give each hand when his duty was performed, also those who choose to pay the money, and make it the contractors' duty to report all defaulters to the Auditor, to be entered on the tax-books and collected as other of this sort, as a majority of the road hands pay no tax to support the Government that gives them protection in life, liberty and property. I think they should perform the road duty as their fathers have done before them. But I am not in favor of so much local laws. I think such laws as the road law should be general. There are nearly one-third of the people of the County living around on the border who are nearly as much interested in the roads in adjoining counties as they are in Anderson County roads. Perhaps they do their marketing in an other County, and most of their travel, so do not think it should be local.
