

The friends of Senator Sherman have been counting noses and they think Mr. Sherman can enter the Republican Convention with 312 votes. It is necessary for a choice.

The executive committee of the Missouri Farmers' Alliance, comprising members of both political parties, adopted resolutions endorsing President Cleveland's views on the tariff issue, endorsing protective tariff and calling for an immediate repeal on raw material of the necessities of life.

President Cleveland has appointed Hon. Melville W. Fuller, of Illinois, to be the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Judge Fuller is a native of Ohio, and is about 54 years of age. He has, however, been a resident of Illinois for many years, and has obtained a prominent place at the bar of Chicago. He was a personal friend of the President, and was not an applicant for the position. He is a strong Democrat, but not a partisan.

The New Orleans Picayune thinks it would be a great mistake for Southern cotton growers to fully utilize their augmented resources this spring by enlarging the acre devoted to cotton. In view of the present European situation such a course would be very dangerous. The balance between the great powers are becoming more strained, and a general war is probable. In the event of a general war the South would have to raise its cotton prices for cotton, and higher prices for grain and provisions. The world would see a seller and a purchaser. The policy, therefore, is not to increase the cotton acreage and not to diminish the corn fields.

P. H. E. Sloan, in a special dispatch to the News and Courier from London, under date of April 26, says: "An appraisal of the property of Mr. Clemens completed their work to-day. Mr. Sloan returns I send you the following statement: Value of Fort Hill $100,000. Value of other lands $10,000. Personal property on Fort Hill $2,761. Value of stocks, bonds, notes and mortgages in the hands of Col. E. W. Simpson, executor, $75,000. It is estimated that premiums and interest on the above will make $100,000 more. The face value of the appraisers' bill amounts to $103,848, and the interest and premiums thereon make a sum total of $113,820. Mr. Sloan says he will contest the bill, but Col. Simpson, the executor, assures me that he has no fear whatever of the contest. The State will receive over $100,000."

The majority report of the last number of the Manufacturers' Record, published at New York, was filled with special letters from the Governors and Agricultural Commissioners of Southern States, upon the financial condition of the farming industry of the South and the general condition of that section. In every case the farmers are said to be more prosperous than for many years, and proof of this is given in the great decrease in number of mortgages and crop-liens. The farmers are less in debt than at any time since the war, and are buying more machinery of improved labor-saving agricultural implements. In Alabama Governor Bay and E. F. Kelly, Commissioner of Agriculture, insist in reporting a decrease in the indebtedness on the part of the farmers and a steady improvement in their condition all over the State, with very marked improvements in buildings, fencing, etc. In Arkansas, Florida and the Carolinas the same report of increasing prosperity is made. The growth of the South in other lines is shown by an increase from 1880 to 1887 of $27,000,000 in the assessed value of property, notwithstanding the fact that an immense amount of property, including railroads, now factories, etc., is exempt from taxes and hence is not included in these figures.

1,000 or more, and to solicit the cooperation of said officers in furthering the objects of the convention. The South Carolina delegation to the Convention, on the way home, held a meeting on the train, and adopted a resolution regarding the cities, towns, railroads, boards of trade and other industrial organizations, the importance of holding early meetings for the purpose of raising the subscription needed to entitle them to representation on the Board of Directors of the Association mentioned in the above resolutions. The delegation also wrote in a letter to the State Board of Agriculture, in which was urged the importance of the movement, and requested the Board to immediately appropriate $1,000 to constitute the State of South Carolina, through the Department of Agriculture, a member of the Association. This would give the State a voice in the organization and management of the Association from the very beginning.

Mr. Editor: Though not identified with the farmers' movement, or the band of farmers who are opposed by Mr. Lee to be "clamoring for an agricultural college under false statements, or at least gross exaggerations," I feel called upon as a farmer's son and a farmer myself to present this obnoxious and sarcastic fling at the farmers and their college in his suggestions in his article in the News and Courier about feeding the officers of an agricultural college on milk and hominy, and "pushing a measure through our Legislature by blinding our representatives by a clamor through gross exaggerations," etc.

Now, while suggestions are in order, we would suggest that the farmers of this State need no political aid from a New York republican in lining out their course of action in this matter of an agricultural college. It may be necessary for Mr. Lee's republican party in New York, in order to pass a measure, to "push it through by a clamor through gross exaggerations," but we farmers in South Carolina simply ask plainly for what we want, and we will get it, if we get it by honest means, let that be with or without Mr. Clemens's request. Now, South Carolina's greatest statesman, Mr. Calhoun, said that a successful system of agriculture is the basis of South Carolina's prosperity. So blended together are the interests of all our industries with that of the farmer, that when the farmer's business becomes depressed the others languish in consequence. If we mean to do anything mean or lowly in establishing an agricultural college that would impel farmers to resort to any such means, or deceptive measures to get something that would surely advance the interests of our whole State.

When the public know that the appraisers (some of them from Seneca, Mr. Lee's present place of abode), of Mr. Clemens's estate have set a par or face value on everything at one hundred and ten thousand dollars, we cannot account for Mr. Lee's very lowly low estimate of this property, unless "there is something rotten in Denmark." If Fort Hill is such a dilapidated old, worn out plantation, what does Mr. Lee mean by his estimate of $100,000? He is bragging and advocating an entirely opposite political party to that of Mr. Calhoun, we are sure he has not the interest in preserving the place as a relic of Mr. Calhoun as the others taking an interest in it. It is a relic of one of her noblest sons and greatest statesmen.

There must be something dead up the creek. We think we can suggest that the appraisers of Mr. Lee's estate, and the writer would further suggest that the effluvia arising from this obnoxious article, in the News and Courier, will not prove good for the rheumatism (1) that held him confined in his stone mansion on the Hudson above New York so many years, and during the recent illness of the deceased—Hon. Thos. G. Clemens, his father-in-law. But we observe that Mr. Lee is a man of great energy, and his father-in-law's grip upon Mr. Lee's limbs, and he now gets about here very nimble, indeed, though we are willing to acknowledge that his Southern climate is good for rheumatism.

Rev. Sam. Jones is back from South Carolina. "I visited in South Carolina," he said, yesterday, "five cities—Columbia, Newberry, Greenville, Anderson and Laurens. It seems that you stirred the animals in Greenville." "The only evidence I have of the fact is the newspaper reports. I thought I was very mild in my treatment of gospel preachers in this country. I see a religious paper published in the city says that after I left the city there were some people very mad, and it intimates that perhaps I had stirred up the animals, and they have ever done when they lived at peace with mankind. Really, I had a delightful trip to South Carolina. I talked to crowds at all points except Columbia, at my first lecture there, and there were other entertainments free. Mine happened to be seventy five cents a head, and Columbia, to say the least of it, enjoys a free show. You would have thought I expected to see a crowd of people there, and I was disappointed. I suppose they will all get into a good humor before my return there next week. I had a very good time. I see one paper says I begged the audience not to leave while I was preaching. Every man who knows me, knows that is a lie—I always say 'if you do not like the preaching, you may point you can just get up and rack out admission to the street is free.' However, just as I was concluding my sermon three or four young men in the gallery got up to talk to me, and I said 'Be so good and gentlemanly. I will be through in a moment.' I learned afterwards that they were college students and were leaving to meet their classes. I was through preaching that morning at Columbia. I suppose three hundred people shook hands with me and Dr. Girardeau, president of the Presbyterian theological seminary, came up and gave me his hand and said kind brotherly words. He was charmed with the people of South Carolina. Many evidences I saw of temporal prosperity. I think they are behind us in church zeal and religious fervor. I shall work some in South Carolina this summer."

Mr. Simpson informed me that the personal property, consisting of stocks, bonds and mortgages and other securities in his hands, was about $75,000. From this sum take the legacies payable in cash, $18,000, and it leaves $57,000. Mr. Simpson, the executor and trustee under the will, is allowed 5 per cent on the whole amount of the estate by the will, and also, I am told, 5 per cent by law, making in all 10 per cent commission on the whole property. This would amount to $5,700. Deduct that from the cash assets left of $57,000 and it leaves $51,300. Then deduct lawyer's bills, expenses keeping up the house and many other necessary expenses, and think most people will agree with me in thinking that there will not be much left on which to found an agricultural college except the 825 acres of the Fort Hill plantation, with a few dilapidated and partly ruined buildings.

But, even valuing the remainder of the estate at $15,000, an extremely high estimate, the interest on this sum of money at 7 per cent, would be $1,050. Not very magnificent sums these that would found a great State institution, and certainly the most incorruptible and honorable Statesman could not reasonably expect to receive more than $1,050 being divided into salaries and paid over to the president, professors and a few practical farmers who would also be necessary to carry on the institution. The question of the college in the United States the presidents get at least eight or ten thousand dollars per annum, and the professors from three to five thousand. Still, some patriotic statesmen might be found to serve their State from the purest motives, without money and without price.

WASHINGTON LETTER. WASHINGTON, D. C. April 30, 1888. A year to Washington at this season of the year would not fail to convince even the most skeptical, of the wonderful beauty of the city and its surroundings. Just now the numerous parks are filled with blossoms. The fountains, statuary and public buildings and the broad avenues lined with trees which are just now adorned in the fresh green foliage of early spring, all contribute to render the scene at once pleasing and attractive.

Although the President finds that his time is fully occupied in considering the numerous bills that are daily being transmitted to him by Congress for his approval, he has been unable to resist the temptation to venture out for an occasional drive about the city, and during the past week he has spent much of his time at the country. At an early hour every morning he leaves the White House in a side bar buggy drawn by one of the celebrated "seal browns," unaccompanied, except by a large roll of engrossed bills and public documents which he has carefully stowed away under the seat, and which upon arriving at his country residence he carefully examines, and notes upon the jacket of each either his approval or disapproval. About sunset he drives back again to the city, and spends an hour or more in attending to his current duties, and in preparing a new bundle of bills for consideration upon the following day.

It is probable that the President and Mrs. Cleveland will very soon take their spring trip to the White House. Several wagon loads of furniture and other household articles have been removed from the White House to the cottage at Cayuga, N. Y. As the season opens there is a decided renewal of activity in the building line. In addition to the erection of several public buildings which have been provided for by Congress, a large number of very fine private residences will be built. Senator Sawyer, of Wisconsin, has commenced the construction of a residence upon Connecticut avenue, which is estimated to cost at least $150,000. It will add one more to the number of magnificent senatorial residences. The Western Senators have much finer houses than those from the East, and the few Southern Senators who own houses here have very modest establishments. Senators Gorman and Gibson being the owners of the finest houses of any of the Southern Senators.

Senator Blair introduced a bill on Wednesday last providing for the distribution of public documents to public libraries. The bill provides that the City, County, State and college libraries shall be furnished with one copy of every public document printed by the Government, upon filing an agreement to receive the same.

Lindsey Muse, the old colored door keeper at the office of the Secretary of the Navy, who has held the office since 1828, having been appointed during the administration of John Quincy Adams, and who is now over eighty years of age, has at last been obliged to resign his post on account of feeble health, and it is thought that he will never again resume his familiar place at the Secretary's door.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 28.—An explosion occurred in a dwelling house on West street between 18th and 14th yesterday caused by the pouring of oil from a five gallon can nearly full into the tank of a gas stove. The building was set on fire and destroyed, resulting in the death of Annie Rogers, an English girl, who had been in this country only a short time, and her charge, Mary McLaughlin, the six-year old daughter of McLaughlin, and Mrs. D. O. Rogers, with a child, a travelling salesman for a Cincinnati notion house, and his wife, occupied the house. The bodies when recovered were a fleshless, charred mass. The position of the bodies indicated that the servant had desperately tried to save the little one. Mrs. McLaughlin, the mother of the little one, was also badly burned and lies in a critical condition. The bodies of the house were enveloped in flames when the explosion happened. She attempted to return to the house to rescue her child, but fell exhausted to the ground.

New York, April 29.—Rev. Edgar L. Hermance, late pastor of the Presbyterian church in the village of White Plains, shot himself while in the pulpit of the church to-day. Hermance's resignation was asked by the congregation in consequence of dissatisfaction arising between himself and the flock over his salary. His wife is the daughter of an ex-President of the United States, and his financial standing was unquestioned. Shortly before he was shot, Hermance was sitting within the chancel conversing with the sexton, John Blakey, and appeared perfectly rational. Hardly had he closed the church door on leaving, when he was startled by the report of a pistol shot, and rushing back into the church, he was stretched prone upon the floor of the pulpit. He was bleeding profusely from a bullet hole in his right temple. Close beside him lay a revolver, and a note pinned to the wall of the pulpit. At the time of the shooting Mr. Hermance was teaching a Sunday school class in the new chapel within a few feet of his husband.

Red Bank, Ga., April 25.—Thomas F. Morford was putting a belt on the flyer in his iron foundry this afternoon when his fingers got caught. The engineer, who happened to be looking at him and who heard the outcry, sprang to the rescue, and when he saw the man's hands in a second, but meantime Mr. Morford's hand and arm had been wound around the shaft and he himself had been whirled around it twice, but not very rapidly, as the machinery was not running. The man was unbound and he was taken down. "Oh he's killed," he's killed," cried his son, who was present. "No, Harry," said the injured man, "I'm all right, only my arm is gone." Only a little flesh held my arm together at the elbow, and pointing to the forearm he said to his foreman, as if he were giving a routing order in the foundry: "Cut it off." The foreman did so without trouble with a knife. Mr. Morford was then taken to his home a mile distant, a carriage, he wanted to be carried in the morning, and he would be amputated at the shoulder.

Watermelons are in the market in South Florida, and peaches are ripening rapidly. —The estate of the late Walter M. Gibson, prime minister of Hawaii, is estimated to be worth more than $1,000,000. —There is still on the statute books in Rhode Island a law forbidding the smoking of cigars on the streets of any city in the State. —There is a large quantity of home-raised corn in Spartanburg County this year, but "there is no special demand for it as yet because all the farmers were wise enough to raise enough for their own use, and no man is compelled to buy from his neighbor. This is an excellent condition of affairs for the Spartanburg farmers, whether they can sell their corn at high prices or not. Empty cribs usually go with empty pockets. It is far more satisfactory to have corn on hand without any special demand for it than to see the demand on hand year after year, and no special price for it. —A sensational arrest has been made in Springfield, Mo. About two years ago a gentleman came to that place with a large amount of ready cash, each of which he invested. He soon became one of the leading citizens of the place, and a devout churchman. A few months ago he became engaged to one of the most prominent young ladies of the town, and the wedding was to have taken place next week. Last week a detective reached Springfield from Baltimore and soon satisfied himself that Samuel Whipple, a liberal merchant of Springfield, and the most popular man in town was none other than William Spurgeon, formerly a confidential clerk in a private banking house in Baltimore, who had embezzled over $150,000 and fled, leaving a wife and three children. Spurgeon has been carried back to Baltimore and will be tried. Miss Clark, the young lady to whom he was engaged, was so shocked on hearing of his arrest that she fainted and at present is dangerously ill.
