the truth. "I refer to the tariff question, as it is the man at whose house he was staying commonly called. Now I presume that The war being over, and being solely here is no man in this vast audience who does not know what is meant by the word 'tariff,' or the term 'tariff law.' And yet it can do us no harm, and may lead to precision of speech and to com-prehension of what I have to say, if I begin by a definition of what is the tariff. "Tariff, my friends, is nothing else in his world than a tax levied by the General Government upon importations brought into the United States for sale, the effect of which is to raise the price of all domestic commodities of the same nature made within the United States. "This tax is paid by the consumer of the article. When your State tax is levied it is levied on property: it is paid by property. A man of much property pays much more than a man of little property : and a man of no property pays "But the tariff is a tax that is paid by the consumer of so-called protected articles. He pays it, not to the tax-gatherer, not to any officer of the Government, but he pays it in the price which he gives for every protected article that he buys. Let me suppose for instance, by way of illustration, that an importer purchases in England a thousand dollars' worth. No, I won't take so much as that: I will say enough cloth to make a suit of clothes for a man. "He pays for it then, say $10. H brings it to the United States. Before he can even get it out of the custom House at the place where he lands, he must pay on that a tax called a tariff, and the probability is among the enormous rates in the schedule on woollen goods, that he will pay a tax of not less than 60 cents on the dollar. That is, that he will pay six dollars tax on ten dollars' worth of work for a living. cloth that he has bought. Then it has cost $16-that cloth has. "Now if any man who imports that cloth sells it to a wholesale merchant. he must, of course, put the tax that he pays on to it in price, otherwise he would lose money by the operation, and so when this importer sells to the wholesale merchant he charges him $16 for that which cost him originally but $10. Nay, more, he charges him $16 and his mercantile profit on the $6 tax as well as on $10, the original cost of the goods. The wholesale merchant sells it to the retail merchant, and the retail merchant sells it to his customers.

course this price with each merchant's profit continues and is in the goods when they are sold to the consumer. So that by the time one of you buys that cloth you find you have to pay for it from $16 to $20, perhaps, not less than $20 for that which originally cost $10. So here has been a tax imposed on the consumer which amounts in effect to nearly or quite as much as the original cost of the goods. "Now, my friends, this is so true that
