

Anderson Cotton Market. Strict Good Middling... Good Middling... Strict Low Middling... Low Middling...

The following are the receipts for the week ending Tuesday night...

The Whooping-cough is prevailing in the city at this time.

Turkeys meet with ready sale in the city at fair prices.

Now is the time to subscribe for the Intelligencer for 1889.

Christmas cards promise to be very fashionable this season.

Eggs are selling in the city at fifteen and twenty cents a dozen.

Our advertising columns will tell you where to buy your Christmas goods.

It is said that Anderson will have one or two weddings shortly after Christmas.

Hon. J. Belton Watson came up from Columbia last Saturday and spent Sunday at home.

Mr. J. W. Gaines, representing the Augusta Chronicle, spent a day or two in the city last week.

We are indebted to Col. Rice, the State Superintendent of Education, for a copy of his annual report.

Send us the news—a few new subscribers—a few dozen eggs or an old turkey. We are not choosers.

We learn that hog cholera is prevalent in Oconee County and in the upper portion of this County.

Mr. W. B. Beacham, after a residence of some time in North Carolina, has returned to Anderson.

A patent medicine vendor entertains a large crowd on the Court House Square every day this week.

The physicians are having an easy time just now. There is scarcely any sickness in or around the city.

Rev. C. B. Smith, the new pastor of the Methodist Church, will occupy his pulpit for the first time next Sunday.

An important notice appears in another column to persons indebted to Foster Pant & Co., and to Foster Pant.

Come to Anderson to buy your goods for the Christmas holidays. You can get anything you want, and at low prices.

Mr. Wm. McArthur, with his family, has moved from this city to Birmingham, Ala., where he will engage in business.

Mr. Thos. A. Murray, of Union, S. C., is spending a few days in the city. He came here to attend the funeral of his brother.

Quite a number of our friends have called in and settled for their paper, but our supply of blank receipts is not yet exhausted.

Dr. M. C. Parker has let the contract for the erection of a neat dwelling house on West Market Street near the Savannah Valley depot.

Mr. J. R. Wilson and family, of Williamsburg, Va., are in the city. They, Texas, where they will make their home for the future.

The "Spelling Bee" at the residence of Mr. R. Bleckley last Friday evening was a most pleasant occasion, and was attended by a good crowd.

The first Quarterly Conference for Williamsburg and Belton Circuit will be held at Belton on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in this month.

Mr. G. F. Tolly is in Charleston this week attending the Grand Lodge of A. F. M. He went via Augusta, and Mrs. Tolly accompanied him.

W. J. Compton will open school at Tongue Academy, Fork Township, on Monday, Dec. 31. Parties interested will govern themselves accordingly.

A large party, on their way West, passed up the road Tuesday evening in charge of Mr. Chas. L. Hopkins, Passenger Agent of the E. T. & A. G. line.

The laying of the corner-stone of the new hotel on the 27th inst. will attract a good crowd of visitors to the city. Reduced rates will be secured on the railroads.

Married, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. O. C. Hall, on Thursday, December 6th, 1888, by Rev. A. H. Nicholson, Mr. Patrick Haynie and Miss Essie Hall.

Several of the street crossings in the city need the attention of the street hands. Planks or rocks placed at the most important crossings would be appreciated by the public.

On our first page this week will be found the report of Messrs. Norris and Tindall relative to the Mississippi Agricultural College. It is worthy of careful consideration.

The Piedmont Union Meeting will convene with the evangelist Church on Saturday before the 21st inst. The Rev. S. A. Gary will preach the Introductory Sermon.

Our Representatives at Columbia have just returned on the following tax for Anderson County: Ordinary County purposes, 22 mills; deficiency, one-half mill; special road tax, one-fourth mill.

The services for the winter at Grace (Episcopal) Church will be as follows: Sunday School at 10 o'clock a. m.; divine service at 11 o'clock a. m.; evening prayer at 7 o'clock p. m.; also on Wednesday afternoons at the same hour.

Mr. Jas. E. Kelley, who resides on the Crab place, in Corner Township, had the misfortune to have four hundred pounds of cotton and seventy-five bushels of corn destroyed by fire one night last week.

The Duo West correspondent of the Abbeville Press and Banner, says: "Miss Mary White Pearson, Duo West, has just finished a capital life-size drawing of her grandfather, Maj. Thompson, of Anderson, and by none more so than her friend, Rev. W. F. Pearson."

Hill Bros. extend a cordial invitation to the rich and poor, young and old, male and female, to call and see their beautiful assortment of Christmas goods, which are offered at wonderfully low prices.

The Flocken Scandal, of last week, says: "Mr. W. B. F. Taylor expects to move to Savannah this week, and his friends here have many warm friends in this community, by whom they will be greatly missed."

A new enterprise in Oconee County is the mountains down Keowee river to the railroad bridge over Seneca River, where a log boom has been constructed.

Brother McGill, of the Haystack (Ga.) Sem., is responsible for the following: "There is a woman living in this County who has six breasts, all of which have afforded life-giving fluid to her children."

The Neal's Creek Sunday School will have a Christmas Tree on Christmas Day. Presents will be delivered at 2 o'clock p. m. at the Committee charged with the tree will meet at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Brother McGill, of the Haystack (Ga.) Sem., is responsible for the following: "There is a woman living in this County who has six breasts, all of which have afforded life-giving fluid to her children."

Mr. A. O. Norris with his family left Tuesday for Graham, Texas, where they will in the future reside. Mr. Norris was one of the best and most popular citizens, and his departure is deeply regretted by a wide circle of friends.

Crayton, Jones & Seybt have a new advertisement in this issue, and it deserves a careful reading, for it contains some startling announcements. These young gentlemen are live, energetic merchants, and are doing a fine business this fall, but reference to the advertisement will give you and for the next few weeks will offer extra inducements to cash buyers.

Mr. G. W. Faust & Son are fully prepared to supply the wants of the public for the Christmas trade, as is shown by their list of goods, which is published in this issue. Their stock embraces everything suitable for Christmas present, and we would advise our readers to go and inspect it. They have beautiful selections of Christmas Cards of the latest styles. Every article is marked at a low price. Read their advertisement and don't forget to give them a call when making your purchases.

A Crazy Tale! What is that? Well, go to the Temperance Hall on Friday evening, 21st inst., and see for yourself. The young ladies of the Baptist Working Society are to give a party at the Temperance Hall, and will charge a small admission fee of 10 cents. Light refreshments will be served during the evening. We know it will be a pleasant occasion, and we bespeak for the young ladies a liberal patronage. The Hall will be opened at half-past 6 o'clock. Remember the time and place.

The Belton Amateur Club will give an entertainment in Stringer's Hall, at Belton, on Wednesday evening, December 20th. The evening's program will consist of the rendition of a drama, entitled "The Last Lot," which will be followed by a laughable farce, "Jumbo Jones." A small admission fee will be charged, and the proceeds will be devoted to a worthy charitable purpose. Don't forget to give them a call when making your purchases.

The following important circular has just been issued from the office of the State Comptroller, J. C. H. S. C. It is addressed to the several County Treasurers throughout the State of South Carolina: "The time for the collection of the taxes for the fiscal year commencing November 1st, 1887, and ending October 31st, 1888, is hereby extended to the 15th day of January, 1889, with penalty. In the meantime it is expected that legislative action will be had in the matter of the collection of taxes on Township bonds."

Hattie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Earle, died on Monday morning, at half-past 9 o'clock, aged 8 years. She took suddenly ill on Saturday night, and suffered intensely until the angel of Death came to her relief Monday morning. She was a sweet, amiable girl, and her sudden death is a sad blow to her devoted parents, who have many sympathizers in their sore bereavement. Her remains were interred at Anderson, on Tuesday, by Rev. J. R. Earle conducting the funeral services.

Mr. Albert Bowles, of Corner Township, made this year, with one male, fifteen bushels of cotton, averaging 47 pounds to the bale. Also, one hundred and twenty-five bushels of corn, forty bushels of wheat and nearly enough oats to feed his male next year. This is hard to believe, and to show that it is as easy to make a living in Anderson County as in Texas or anywhere else, if you go about it in the right way. We will remark that Mr. Bowles is a single man, and would advise our friends to take his case into consideration before they give up.

The new advertisement of R. S. Hill should have the careful attention of every reader of the INTELLIGENCER. Mr. Hill, as is well known, is one of our most reliable merchants, and he means just what he says in his advertisement. There are not many business houses in upper Carolina that carry the stock he does, and we know none of them sell any cheaper. He has made a big reduction in prices, in order to reduce his immense stock, and for the next thirty days it will pay every person to pay his store a visit. He has a sufficient number of clerks, of both sexes, who are courteous and accommodating, and who will take great pleasure in showing their goods.

A most diabolical assault was committed upon the person of Mr. R. P. Black, on the plantation of Bro. Hoch, McLean, in Rock Mills Township, last Friday, by a colored man named George Scott. Mr. Black was ploughing in the field and Scott, who was a tenant on the place, approached him, and after abusing and cursing him, attacked him with a knife. Mr. Black was courageously fighting, but before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone. Another severe wound was a stab in the throat, between the internal and external carotid arteries, and another across the throat from the upper angle of the right jaw diagonally downward across to the sternum. He was also stabbed in the back, two inches deep, between the shoulder blades. Dr. R. G. Witherspoon, who was called in to attend to him, said that Mr. Black was in a very critical condition. Scott, who is described as being a very stout man, suddenly fled to his home, and was not seen again. It is believed that before he had time to defend himself, Scott had hit him in nearly a dozen different places. He received two skull wounds, one extending from the right eye, across the temple, over the ear and to the back of the neck, severing the temporal artery and cutting downward to the bone. The other skull wound was on the left side of the head, extending two and one-half inches to the bone