The Anderson correspondent of the Columbia Register falls into error in his statement in a recent issue of that paper that to Col. J. G. Their goods are arriving every day, and their store now has the appearance of a veritable dry goods palaco. Their stock embraces everything in the general dry goods line, in addition to at large stock of gents' furnishing goods and clothing. Their millinery depart-

Mr. J. C. Keys has done a very substantial piece of work on the public road just this side of the bridge that spans Generostee Creek, near Mr. J. N. Byrum's brick yard. For a number of years past this portion of the road, for about fifty yards, has been very bad, and during the winter season would be almost impassable. The road hands would work on it every year, but no permanent im provement could be made. Mr. Keys. who is a practical man in every sense of the word, assured the Commissioners that he could make that portion of the road as good as any other, and they authorized him to go shead and do it. Mr. Kevs at once went to work, and after building a good, substantial rock wall, two or three feet high, he bauled two hundred wagon loads of rock and filled in between the walls, and then covered it over with sand. Those who have seen the work say it is a permanent improvement and will last for years. The work cost about seventy dollars, but it is money wisely spent. The dialogue in friend Russell's (our efficient School Commissioner) column has created a great deal of talk and dissathas created a great deal of this and disast-isfaction in some parts of the neighbor-hood; rather unfortunate just now, as our people are just beginning to pull out of the old ruts of depending on the public funds alone for schools. Hence, we think it will tend to hurt, rather than bless our schools, as we cannot get the kind of a teacher as we want for the amount the public pays, so we cannot conform to "Young Trustee's" ideas. We have a good school and have to supplement the public ing the public term, besides running it all the time at the same wages.

How she enlivens and stimulates the farmer, and provides him with hope and encouragement that enables him to battle through the summer conflict.

Peaches are in bloom, and it is hoped that there will be plenty of fruit this year. Very little, if any, corn has been planted in this section.

The farmers of this section are preparing and better this year than usual.

Health is good, and every one is proud of it, unless it is the farmer boy who must plow from early till late. How many of us can very well remember the time when we almost mourned our existence, because the days were so, so l-o n-g. and the little nights were so short, that when we were called to get up it seemed but a minute since we retired. Dreams are of various kinds, but the most romantic we ever heard, was one of a young man not long since. He dreamed that he had a falling out with another young man, and after receiving a severe blow from his antagonist, he "downed" him and frailed him to his own satisfaction. He arose next morning only to find the feather hed torn assunder, feathers scat the floor choked to death.

It is a fact that one of our young wid-owers is searching for and endeavoring to capture another one of the fair sex. Not long since he decided to address a lady by letter, and after getting the note almost completed, he noticed a deficiency somewhere and laid it by, intending to write a destroy the original, which was picked up by one of his familiar friends, and the handwriting at once recentions. handwriting at once recognized. It is said that the same gentleman has his cap se for a certain lady, and good authority states that the lady also has one set for him. We are just waiting and watching to see how and when and where it will chew tough beef, &c.

On Monday night our people were highly entertained with a public debate, given by the young men of Prof. Watkins' A young man of rather backward ap pearance called to see a young lady recently, and after being seated for an hour in the parlor where the young lady was his only company, he took out his watch and said, "one hour gone." The lady did not notice his remark much, and they chatted on in the usual way till another sixty minutes had passed; when the gentleman consulted his time-piece again with the emark, "two hours gone, andlady asked him then what time it was. He told her it was eight. "Really;" said the lady "no later than that?" The time wore on till the hands on his watch said wore on till the hands on his watch said ten, then he said, "well, I'll declare, three hours clean gone and—and not—nothing said yet." She quietly asked him what he meant, and told him if he wanted to say anything to go ahead. He told her that he would not hesitate a moment if he knew she would like to hear it. She said, "well, say 'good night.' John," and he did and was greatly relieved, and the lady, too. Some time ago two of our young men decided to visit the city of Augusta, Ga. They arrived shortly after dark, and as it was the first time either had been in any city larger than Anderson, they began to feel very small and insignificant. They agreed to stand by and protect each other in case of danger. They soon found a hotel and took supper, registered and paid for lodging and breakfast. They procured the key to their room, and turned out in Dutch sermon, to the delight of all. Mr.
John A. Hudgens presided during the meeting, and he did it well. We feel like saying hurrah for Watkins and his school.

The night was cold, and they kept stirring around for a good while day, and when he found that his pants hour the street lights were were two large, he just sent and got a bus-tle: you know that a bustle takes up space. No more use for tailors while bustles are extinguished and the boys got lost and did not as much as know the name of the hotel or the street where they had paid for cheap and fashionable. lodging. They walked the streets until a late hour, and being tired and sleepy, they decided to give up hunting any more.

MESSENGER.

The frightened boy tried to speak but failed, and no one knows how the difficul-ty would have ended if the other young own talking—a source of mutual thanks and confidence—giving no occasion for growling or petty complaints. This is true of many things sold by the Sullivan Hard-subject to momentary derangement. The gentleman glanced at the boy and said, "I believe it," then turned and went down the street scratching his leg. They boys agreed to keep everything to themselves, but it was too good. We learned through your paper that a young man, while talking to his girl one night, had his lunch pocket amputated by a pup. He has the sympathy of a number of young men, but sympathy is poor con-solation after the damage is done. Would it not be much better to go without the lunch, and inform the lady (and the pup too) of the important fact, and take a cold "snack" with the young lady if—the op-

Last Wednesday night at prayer meeting Prof. J. B. Watkins made one of the best talks that it has been our privilige to hear for some time. It is certainly a blessing to any community to have such a christian gentleman to live and teach in their midst.

The following were the speakers on the affirmative: Messrs. W. E. C. Vermilion, John Parker and W. R. Earle. The speakers on the negative side were Messrs. L. C. Branyon, James Chapman and Charlie E. Burts. The following gentlemen were re-quested to act as a deciding committee: Rev. R. T. Estes, D. W. Hiott and M. McGee. At the close of Mr. Burt's speech the committee withdrew for a few utes, and when they returned made their report through Mr. Estes in favor of the affirmative. The arguments were very good on both sides, and some of the speeches were very fine and well delivered. Surely Prof. Watkins must be proud of his boys. Before the debate came off, the exercises were as follows : Reading by L. Y. Moore, speeches by Edgar Harper, W. R. West, Henry Stokes and P. C. Johnson Mr. Johnson delivered a comic speech for the good of the society, and so well did he please the audience that while the decidng committee were out making their decision, Johnson was called for again,
