THE Firm of Bleckley, Brown & Co. was organized in 1872, continued in business for eight years, being succeeded by Bleckley. Brown & Fretwell, who conducted the business for eight more years, and who in turn were succeeded by Sylvester Bleckley Co., the present Firm, which was organized last year, and of which two of the members of the old Firms still figure as the leading lights, our Senior, Mr. Bleckley, having been a member of several other Firms before those named, since and before the war. He still holds the reigns of government, and we trust will for many years to come. In this last new Firm arrangement we have combined the wis-dom and experience of the older ones, with the vim and enthusiasm of the younger. The business of the different Firms have prospered, our trade having constantly increased, even beyond our most sanguine expectations, each year showing a marked increase. We feel that all this success has been accomplished largely by our strict attention to business, and treating our customers politely, selling them Goods at reasonable prices. corn and 7 or 8 bales cotton this year,) six miles from Anderson on Pendleton road, bounding lands of T. It costs but very little more for us to handle $150,000 worth of Goods a year than it costs to handle $75,000, having reduced our expenses to the very lowest minimum. We do not promise to sell you Goods at or below cost, as we do not propose to do busi-ness for glory, and cannot afford to work for nothing and board ourselves. We propose to charge only a fair and legitimate profit on our Goods, which you should be willing to pay. But we buy our Goods so much cheaper than other people do. As an illustration, we will tell you confidentially what occurred last week, and these instances are not rare by any means: The proprietor of a large Shoe Factory from Asheville, N. C., called on our shoe-buyer last week, stating that he had 1500 cases Brogans and Women's Shoes that he was obliged to sell. The following con-versation then ensued : condition, together with about 500 new vines three years old, making in all about 2000 vines.
