Harper's Magazine.

An New Shakespeare—the Shakespeare of Edwin A. Abbey—will be presented in Harper's Magazine for 1890, with comments by Andrew Lang. Harper's Magazine is also made special arrangements with Alphonse Daudet, the greatest of living French novelists, for the publication of his serial form, of a humorous story, to be entitled "The Colonist of Tarragon: the Last Adventures of the Famous Tartarin." The story will be translated by Henry James, and illustrated by Rosset and Myrback.

W. D. Howells will contribute a novelette in three parts, and Lafcadio Hearn a novelette in two parts, entitled "Yomoi," a beautiful and weirdly illustrated.

In illustrated papers, touching subjects of current interest, and in its short stories, poems, and timely articles, the Magazine will maintain its well-known standard.

Harper's Weekly.

Illustrated.

Harper's Weekly has a well-established place as the leading illustrated newspaper in America. The fitness of its editorial comments on current politics has earned for it the respect and confidence of all impartial readers, and the variety and excellence of its literary contents, including the highest serial and short stories by the best and most popular writers, fit it for the personal people of the widest range of tastes and pursuits. The Weekly supplements are of remarkable variety, interest, and value. No expense is spared in bringing the highest order of artistic ability to bear upon the illustration of the changeable phases of home and foreign history. A Mexican romance, from the pen of Thomas A. Janvier, will appear in the Weekly in 1890.

A SHOWMAN'S STORY.

A Life Spent Among Animals and in the Ring.

A Showman's life.

It is a pretty hard one, but like most every other life it is not without its rewards and pleasures.

But all in all it is a career not so desirable, and so rose-tinted as many might imagine. With me it is comparatively little work and big pay, with others it is all work and no pay.

"There is a great deal of difference between shows now and shows in times gone by," said one who has grown up in the business, and who until a few months ago, knew comparative little about any other sort of life.

The speaker was Mr. J. W. Havens, the keeper of the Grant park zoo. His place is familiar to frequenters of the park, and he has become quite a feature of its attractions, with his graphic stories of life under the caenas. He is thoroughly in love with his work among the animals of the menagerie and is familiar with their wants and necessities as a parent with the care of a child. Mr. Havens has spent the past seventeen years among the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, in connection with the numberless shows and menageries all over the country.

He has boarded the lion in his very den, and two of those that are now caged in Grant park were captured by his own hand in the mountains of Mexico.

"Yes," he continued, as he patted the big lion, Molly, on the nose, in her cage at the zoo yesterday, "the show business isn't what it used to be. It has been ruined, you might say, by high license and fakers; by fakers, I mean the sharpers who hang on to every show that is big enough to sport a tent, and who has brought everyone connected with the business into disrepute by their knavery. Then there used to be a time when everybody about a show worked, when the high keeper, the rider, rope walker and all used to turn in and lend a hand at the work of putting up tents and the like of that. But that's all changed now. The actors have got to think they are better'n the balance of the boys, and in place of the good old-fashioned one ring show, where everybody could see and hear, it's two and three rings, with a rush from start to finish. No, sir, the show business ain't what it used to be; it's changed."

"Tell me something about your circus life."

"We've seen a good deal, haven't we, Molly," said the keeper again caressed the great shaggy head that pressed up close to the bars of the cage by his side.

"Yes, we have been together a long time—Molly and me. I captured her when she was a cub, and though she has been owned by a dozen different shows, we've never been separated for long at a time. She's not the gentlest creature in the world, but with me she's as friendly as a kitten. Did she ever hurt anybody, did you ask? Yes, she has killed her man. It happened in Cairo, Ill., about two years ago on a parade. You see I was in one cage with that spotted fellow down yonder and Pearl Atwood, another trainer, was in the cage with Molly here. We never could tell just how it happened, but all at once the lioness sprang up and struck Pearl on the back with her paw. The lion paralyzed him and in two months he died. It was pretty bad, but such things will happen, you know, and the worst of it is, when they do occur, the people say, oh well, he was a fool anyhow for going in there with the beast."

"Don't you ever get them trained so you won't go back on you?"

"I don't care how well trained an animal is a man is always in danger when he is in reach of their paws or fangs. You can make them let you put your head in their mouths, but every time you do it you hear some well say prayers. You might as well talk about charming—snake charmers and such like. That's all nonsense. It is nothing in the world but nerve. If you had the courage you could go into that cage there with Rose or Molly with just as much safety as I do. All you've got to do is to make them know that you're the boss, that you are not afraid of them."

The farmer, his five children and two farm hands sat down to breakfast, and she poured out the coffee and baked the cakes which they ate. After they had finished she ate her own breakfast, if she cared for any. Then came washing or ironing or scrubbing or baking until it was time for the heavy noon meal which she cooked. Her daughters used sometimes to help a little, but in an idling half-hearted way. Sometimes she would direct them out with a queer patting smile.

"Young folks like pleasure. They ought to have their dinner. They ought to have their dinner," she would say.

There was the morning work to finish after the dinner was over. It was a large farm, and the men were hearty eaters. She "laid down" great quantities of meats and canned dried vegetables.

After supper was over, everybody found some recreation but mother. The farmer smoked, the young folks visited the neighbors or gathered at one end of the porch chattering and laughing. Mother was inside at the work, sewing or with her great basket of stockings.

"They like to look out at them smiling."

"They like their fun," she would say. She looked at them again sometimes as if, old as she was, she would like some fun, too, but she never joined them.

They were with the friends who they had made at college and school. Mother had been very little at school when she was young. Besides, she had no time for idling. Sometimes when she was making shirts for the boys she worked until midnight.

One evening her youngest girl read her a story, which she thought would suit her mother's intellect. It touched and pleased her deeply. She spoke of it for a year afterward.

"What became of Marcus; that isn't him out there in the park, is it?"

"No; he was shot and killed by some fellows that were afraid of him. Up in Newport, Tenn., Marcus, who was then owned by the Hall & Dingley show, got loose to pieces here last spring, got loose by his cage breaking down and made many things lively there for a time, I tell you. He made for the country with John B. Orr, descended to and to be put before me in Court of Probate, to be held at Anderson Court House, on the 21st day of December, 1889. Notice is hereby given to all parties interested in the estate of said deceased, to show cause, if any they have, why the said administration should not be granted.

Given under my hand this 10th day of December, 1889.

name and the price are stamped on the bottom of all Shoes advertised by him before leaving his factory; this protects the wearers against high prices and inferior goods. If your dealer does not keep the style or kind you want, or offers you shoes without W. L. Douglas's name and price stamped on them, and says they are just as good, do not be deceived thereby, but send direct to the Factory for you can get what you want by return mail, postage paid. Dealers make money by selling you shoes that are not warranted by anybody, and therefore do not be induced to buy shoes that have no reputation. Buy only those that have W. L. Douglas's name and the price stamped on the bottom, and you are sure to get full value for your money. Thousands of dollars are saved annually in this way. In ordering by mail state whether you want Congress, Button or Lace, London cap toe, plain French toe, or narrow cap toe, and be sure to give size and width you wear. I can fit any foot that is not deformed, as my shoes are made in a great variety of widths, sizes and half sizes. I formed, as my shoes are made in a great variety of widths, sizes and half sizes. I guarantee a fit, prompt delivery and perfect satisfaction in any manner refunded upon return of the shoes in good condition.
