

Anderson Intelligence. PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY. J. F. OLMSTEAD, Editor and Proprietor. U. C. LANGSTON, Associate Editor. THURSDAY, SEPT. 18, 1890. ONE YEAR, $1.50. SIX MONTHS, $1.00. STATE DEMOCRATIC TICKETS. For Governor, BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN, of Edgefield. For Lieutenant Governor, EUGENE B. GARY, of Abbeville. For Secretary of State, J. E. TIMBAL, of Anderson. For Attorney General, X. C. FOWLE, of Newberry. For State Treasurer, W. C. HARRIS, of Orangeburg. For Comptroller General, W. H. MILLER, of Marion. For Adjutant and Inspector General, HUGH L. PARLEY, of Spartanburg. For Superintendent of Education, W. D. FLETCHER, of Greenville.

We present above the names of those chosen as the standard bearers of 1890 in this State. It is not necessary, we presume, for us to urge every Democrat in this State to support that ticket, for we take it they will rally around the standard of Democracy—not necessarily around the men, for that has been settled—but around the Democracy of South Carolina. Our personal preferences have been adjusted in the selection of these men, and just as we would have expected others to support our choice, so we expect each to support his own choice or not. If there is to be harmony in the Democratic party now is the time to secure it, and every man should feel his bounden duty to help secure it. Bury your petty prejudices, your likes and dislikes, make the cause of Democracy the supreme cause now, and in its interests do your voting. It is only in the sacrifice of personal preferences, and the over-coming of personal and petty prejudices that we can show best our Democratic principles, and that we are Democrats from principle. Therefore, let us walk up like little men and vote for Democratic harmony.

STATE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. This body met in Columbia on 10th September. The two State Democratic Executive Committees compared their differences, and the Convention was organized without any trouble. The proceedings, on the whole, were harmonious, with one or two exceptions, and we congratulate the Democracy that there is no split, and that Mr. Tillman and his ticket will be supported without opposition from any source. Let every Democrat in the State go to the polls in November and roll up a large majority. Let us have no sulking, remembering that we are working for our wives and children and future generations.

The following, copied from the Columbia Register, gives the closing hours of the Convention. Shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning, the committee of order entered the hall, according to Capt. B. R. Tillman and the other nominees. They first read the signal for food and long applause from the Tillmanites, all of whom rose to their feet as the party passed up to the State stand. The command of the Straightened delegation remaining in the hall kept their seats and looked and listened in silence, both to the cheering and to the speaking which immediately followed. Dr. Pope introduced each one of the nominees in turn to the convention. Capt. Tillman, on being introduced, spoke in substance as follows: "My President and Gentlemen of the Convention. After your anxious labors, lasting throughout a day and night, I know that you are now worn out. I have had some sleep, and out of consideration for you I shall be very brief, for you have had enough of speaking already. Captain Tillman, continuing, said that he would, therefore, only touch upon a few points which he felt it necessary to mention. They had just considered the Panhandle. He replied: "When God laid the foundations of the world he ordained a drought for this country, and it seems to continue to this day. He said that he was not fully represented in the Congress. The most of the commissioners were from the East and West. They had a free discussion as to the sub-treasury bill and about four-fifths of the members were opposed to the scheme, because they saw no possible good it could do. After seeing the finest sections of the Mississippi valley and comparing it with the Panhandle, he said that he was not fully represented in the Congress. The most of the commissioners were from the East and West. They had a free discussion as to the sub-treasury bill and about four-fifths of the members were opposed to the scheme, because they saw no possible good it could do.

He then turned to the people and said that he was not fully represented in the Congress. The most of the commissioners were from the East and West. They had a free discussion as to the sub-treasury bill and about four-fifths of the members were opposed to the scheme, because they saw no possible good it could do. Both Duels Killed. GREENSBORO, Ala., Sept. 15.—A doubly fatal street duel took place between two prominent young men at Greensboro, Ala., nine miles below here. He turned, and the people were closed, the days of vituperation and abuse had also closed. He had been represented through the medium of the press as a dangerous demagogue, a worse man than any man in the State, and he had defamed his mother State. When he ever accused the people of South Carolina of fraud or corruption? He had charged official mistakes and mismanagement on the people, and he had defamed his mother State. When he ever accused the people of South Carolina of fraud or corruption? He had charged official mistakes and mismanagement on the people, and he had defamed his mother State.

those that held that such was the case with the revolution which had thrown him on top. If it were so, time would show. As regarded the biases of those who opposed him, he could say now that he felt no animosity toward them, nor did he entertain a single spark of resentment in his bosom against any man who had not treated him with common decency in his campaign. There is a man who had not done so, and he could say now that he felt friendly disposed toward them; but he would say that he had no one to reward, no one to punish, and would enter office with clean hands, unpledged to anything whatsoever, save to administer the laws faithfully and impartially.

Alluding once again to the bitterness existing against him in certain quarters, Captain Tillman asked the Convention to contrast his action in the past, when he had accepted defeat and concurred in unsatisfactory nominations, to the action of the people of the State, who had instructed their delegates to vote against making his nomination unanimous. Richard might refuse to join the Tillman column, but like the absence of the statue of Pompey from Caesar's triumph, it only made the triumph more conspicuous. Of the many slanders uttered against him and spread broadcast over the land, he would only stop now to notice one. It was that in regard to his having himself abandoned by detectives whilst in Charleston. That was an infamous lie, and he did not know that any such had been done until after he had left that city.

Great stress had been laid upon the matter of the bonded debt of the State, and fears were said to be entertained that his election as Governor would injuriously affect the credit of the State, and it was said that inexperienced men could not successfully manage the financial affairs of the State. Where was there any experience needed in debt paying? All that was needed was common honesty and common sense. He had always paid his own debts, always protected his own credit. Why then should he be anything to impair the credit of the State? He believed that so far from any injury resulting in this direction, the contrary would be the case, and that he would go out of office with the credit of the State standing higher than ever. Captain Tillman closed his speech, which was of much greater length than his opening remarks, and seemed to arouse an appeal for harmony, and said in conclusion that if all of the people of the State would hold up his hands, we would enter upon an unprecedented career of happiness and prosperity.

The Garden Spot of the World. SPANISHBURG, September 13.—Col. T. J. Moore, congressman to the Farmers' Congress at Indianapolis, has returned, and is running over with enthusiasm for the Piedmont region of South Carolina. He passed through the fertile fields of Tennessee, the blue grass regions of Kentucky, the wheat, grass and corn lands of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. He then crossed the Mississippi and viewed the rich prairie lands of the West. He went as far West as Denver, and on his return came through the Panhandle of Texas. He saw the rice and sugar fields of Louisiana, the wonderful Mississippi bottoms, and the fertile fields of Alabama and Georgia to his home on the Tyger.

Col. Moore comes back fully impressed that we have here, in Upper South Carolina, the garden spot of the world that he visited. Here we have a variety of productions, an equable climate, the best of water washing from every hillside, unsurpassed health, and rains distributed throughout the twelve months. He found better cotton on his farm than he saw in the Mississippi bottoms, and several of his neighbors have better cotton than he has. It looked more like the cotton here in South Carolina than any place he saw, unless it was in the sugar plantations of Louisiana. The oak crop of the West was short, wheat was partial failure and there was a general drought prevailing from the banks of the Ohio to the Pacific. In many places the corn was parched up, with no signs of ears. In very few sections was there a full crop. All over the fertile prairies of the West it looked like hard times and worse coming.

On his way to the Texas Panhandle his expeditions were high. To Indiana he had heard he thought he would see an inviting country, but when he reached it he saw treeless plains, parched up with heat and drought. Along the road the average crops made no show. The spirit of desolation seemed to hover over the country. The only flourishing crop he saw in that section was the prairie dogs. It looked as if they would starve out in a dozen bushes to the west. They prove very destructive to crops, uprooting the young corn and wheat. A settler there, from New York State, said they had destroyed his corn crop, but he was not to be deterred. We can raise a steer until he is 3 years old cheaper than we can feed a chicken six months back in New York. Col. Moore asked a lady how she managed to get her husband to the Panhandle. She replied: "When God laid the foundations of the world he ordained a drought for this country, and it seems to continue to this day. He said that he was not fully represented in the Congress. The most of the commissioners were from the East and West. They had a free discussion as to the sub-treasury bill and about four-fifths of the members were opposed to the scheme, because they saw no possible good it could do.

A Preacher Convicted. VERNON, Ala., Sept. 14.—In the circuit court here yesterday Rev. Thomas Owen, a primitive Baptist preacher, was convicted of disturbing public worship and using obscene language in the presence of ladies. The case was a very sensational one, Owen having committed the offenses while in the pulpit of one of his churches. He was conducting a revival meeting, and was attended by a number of ladies who were not members. One day Owen denounced these ladies who refused to believe his teaching and join his church in unmeasured terms, applying to them the vilest of epithets. This brought on a riot in the church. The gentlemen, relatives and friends of the insulted ladies, trying to mob the preacher. The riot broke up the meeting. Owen was warned never to preach in the neighborhood again.

Both Duels Killed. GREENSBORO, Ala., Sept. 15.—A doubly fatal street duel took place between two prominent young men at Greensboro, Ala., nine miles below here. He turned, and the people were closed, the days of vituperation and abuse had also closed. He had been represented through the medium of the press as a dangerous demagogue, a worse man than any man in the State, and he had defamed his mother State. When he ever accused the people of South Carolina of fraud or corruption? He had charged official mistakes and mismanagement on the people, and he had defamed his mother State.

He knew that he was a plain, blunt man; he had been charged sometimes with even brutal bluntness, and as a consequence was to-day the worst hated man in the State of South Carolina; and yet after all the people had endorsed him. Why? Compared to his two distinguished competitors, what was he? A mere nobody. What was the reason for it? It was that the people were for Tillman; it was that they were for the principles of which he was the exponent. In accepting this nomination he felt that his peaceful days were gone and a heavy load of care placed upon his shoulders. Be that as it may, he would assume the office to discharge its duties without fear, favor or affection. He trusted, and the people were closed, the days of vituperation and abuse had also closed. He had been represented through the medium of the press as a dangerous demagogue, a worse man than any man in the State, and he had defamed his mother State.

All communications intended for this Column should be addressed to J. W. BOWDEN, Denver, S. C. We call the attention of the Sub-Alliance to the suggestion of the Directors of the State Exchange at their meeting of Greenville in July, that the County Exchange Agents should be elected at the County Alliance meeting, the 1st Friday in October.

The County Alliance. The next regular quarterly meeting of the County Alliance is on Friday, October 3rd. Sub-Alliance Secretaries will please be prompt and send their Quarterly reports and dues to the County Secretary, so that he will receive them by the 1st day of October. That is the constitution, and to facilitate business, it should be obeyed. The County Secretary will be in the County House at ten o'clock to enroll delegates. Secretaries will please send their Post Office address to me at once, so that I can send them the new reports that are to be used for this Quarter. J. W. BOWDEN, Sec. A. C. F. A.

A Review. The smoke, dust and confusion of a fierce and prolonged fight, between the masses of the people and the "intelligent minority," who think they should rule by divine right, having somewhat subsided, we, the average farmer and Allianceman, should stop and take a calm, dispassionate and intelligent view of the political events of the last eight months, which in many respects, form the most remarkable in our history. It is the most disgraceful campaign that has ever been in South Carolina. In making this review the average farmer will find a great many ideas in political economy that are entirely new to him, and ideas that are laid down by editors, and other leaders of his opponents, who claim to be infallible, as law and gospel, and anyone who dares to differ with them, can be nothing less than a radical, demagogue, greenbacker or any other abusive epithet that can be thought of or invented. In order of time, the first of these new ideas advanced is what it takes to make a representative body of men.

The Republican County Convention was held here to-day. Si Milton was president. He is a black negro with little education, but he makes a splendid preaching officer, and kept the Convention in excellent order. Several resolutions were adopted, most of which were conservative. E. H. Deas of Darlington was present and made one of his characteristic speeches. He is not in favor of a ticket, for he says the Antis will not help them, but he would be glad to see they would only then say, "You see what has been done because Tillman was nominated." He is "arrogant" both factions of the party.

Severe Western Weather. A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life. It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle; it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, until she was able to use and to work strong, healthy, rosy, plump, weighing 140 pounds. For fuller particulars send stamp to W. H. Col. Druggist, Fort Smith. Trial bottles of this wonderful discovery free at Hill Bros' Drug Store.

MINOR Married and Happy! WEDDED to his "last love," in the City of Anderson, in the presence of a host of witnesses and multitudes of admiring friends and patrons. The bride, attired in her most becoming costume, won the hearts of the glad throng that witnessed the nuptials, and as to the happy groom, everybody envied him his sweet treasure, and wished for him and his long life of usefulness and pleasure. Everybody says Minor has "done well," and he, not content with laurels and honors, still aspires to higher achievements, and ere long his bride of eighteen months— (THE 10c. STORE.) will be decked in robes befitting a queen, for on every train comes new goods, bought in the East and with such care that all can be pleased. Happily yours, A. EVINS BROWNE, For C. S. Minor, Who is still on his bridal tour.
