

August 4, 1892.

atching a few moments in the interval between the hours of service in the great religious meetings this week, I have heard and read many things concerning the political situation of Georgia.

Nothing from the volume of smoke that is rising from the smokestacks of the Georgia politics. I know something of the two old parties, Democratic and Republican. I know a little of the creed and dogmas of the old party.

The plumes I got of the Third party, the Alliance and the Greenbackers, the labor unions and temperance advocates, etc.—the most incongruous, incompatible, unworkable elements of nature or grace ever saw; reminding me of nothing so much as a great convention of religious nonconformists, such as the Second Adventists, Christian Scientists, extreme holiness cranks, etc., etc., in conclusion with the purpose of fasting and organizing themselves to down the established churches.

The Catholic and Protestant churches in America are the two great religious bodies representing the Christianity of the world. The non-conformists, such as the Unitarians, have criticized and scorned the church until they have found no service in the pulpit and hypothesis in the pew, and they now propose to divide the church into two parts: one to do the work of the church, and the other to do the work of the world.

Know the established churches of America have their hypocrites and their hypocrites, and many other things that I deeply deplore, but I shall not quit my place in the grand old Methodist church and run off with the boys and cranks, whose only purpose is to play that I have and give me nothing in return.

There is a want and a truth underlying the great movement of the wage workers and farming class, and God knows I would see their wants ministered to, and their truth interpreted, and their wills legislated and administered, so that all men will be equal before the laws and who will forever be free.

As the gulf widens between Wall street and the honest laborer, it seems that the masses multiply and class legislation increases.

There is a profound contempt for the dirty money of one who seeks promotion of himself, who is of uneasy reputation, and who has no more character than a Jersey milk.

Oh for a Moses, an Aaron and a Aaron who will lead us from among the mountains in the wilderness, over into the land of grapes, pomegranates and olive trees.

The press and meetings will give us light on men and measures, and it is the duty of all men to lay aside prejudice and hear both sides and according to the dictates of true wisdom and pure patriotism.

There is a great light from the people will gather here and there a half mile, and a dangerous falsehood which will madden revolutionaries and swamp its victims.

We have advanced measures and in due time, now let us have men as noble as our measures and as large as our wants as our standard bearers.

Simply we are all brethren, and the property of one class in Georgia means a property of all, and that which hurts one will harm all.

It will always be true, as it has always been true, that some will be rich and some will be poor, but we don't want to get much richer nor the poor get much poorer. We want true, pure, unadorned, unadorned and unadorned.

There is a weakness and defeat in division. There is strength and victory in union. I am no politician, but I have a me and a family in Georgia, and her lot is not touched me on all sides, and would see eliminated from our State that would mar her beauty and corrupt her ballot box. There was never a time when passion and prejudice could be used so effectively, and there was never a time when men should be more liberal and thoughtful.

Yours for the right,
SAM P. JONES.

Roads in France.

The excellence of French roads is well known. The United States Consul at Bordeaux describes how they are made. The materials are brought from the nearest quarries and placed at either side of the route surveyed. In order that the full amount contracted for may be delivered, the stone must be heaped in great piles of prismatic shape and fixed dimensions. These heaps, placed at a given distance from one another, are afterward visited by an official inspector, and must in all instances fit exactly beneath a skeleton frame carried by him.

The material is usually marble, flint, stone or gravel, and whatever is used must be of the best quality and cleaned from all foreign substances. The stone must be broken so that each piece may pass through a ring two and a half inches in diameter. It is then spread evenly over the road, the interstices being carefully filled in with smaller pieces, so that the whole is smooth and free from abrupt eminences and depressions. A steam roller then crushes and further evens the whole, after which a superficial layer of clay and earth completes the work.

Roads are classed as national roads, which are the main arteries of the system connecting most distant parts of the country, and are constructed and maintained by the government; department roads, which connect different points of the same department or of two adjoining departments, and are constructed and maintained by the department; highways and public roads, which are the property of the commune through which they run, but are practice made and repaired by the department from taxes levied on the commune, supplemented by a department subsidy; cross roads, which are maintained by sums derived from the ordinary revenues of the commune, occasionally supplemented by additional taxes.

The other day a young man sauntered into a saloon on Whitehall street, and asked for a glass of beer. The barkeeper, a German, recognizing in the stranger a fellow countryman, set out a glass of the required beverage for his refreshment. Taking the glass in his hand, the stranger walked to the end of the bar, opened his coat and proceeded to pour the beer into a funnel.

"Mein Gott in Himmel," shouted the astonished bartender. "That you do with that beer?"

"I am drinking it," replied the stranger, calmly emptying the last drop into the funnel, and placing the glass on the counter.

The barkeeper was paralyzed, and nothing short of a full explanation fully reassured him. It developed that the stranger had some time ago swallowed some carbolic acid by mistake, which had caused stricture of the throat. He is unable to swallow even liquids and his only means of taking food or drink is through a tube which runs into his stomach. Through this he drinks and eats, first chewing his food and then passing it through the tube into his stomach.

"This was such a rare one that the barkeeper took him to see some of the doctors of the city. He is in good health, and does not seem to suffer much from his strange affliction, conversing readily, though unable to swallow anything at all. The tube through which he takes his food is removed when not in use, and when he is hungry he places it in position, and it is through it that he eats.

The discovery of Samuel J. Tilden, deceased, was filed his appeal. The report made shows the amount of his fortune to be $5,200,000, which after deducting the bequest, etc., is $3,200,000 to be divided among his heirs.

The entire living population of the globe, 1,400,000,000 people, divided in families of five persons each, could be located in Texas, each family with a house on a half-acre lot, and there would still remain 70,000,000 vacant family lots.

Mrs. Jennie McCarty, wife of Mr. T. A. McCarty, of Highland Home, committed suicide by hanging Sunday afternoon. Mrs. McCarty had been in bad health for a number of years and her sufferings had reached extreme mental depression. She had inched about middle life. Great sympathy is felt for the family in their distress.—Laurens Advertiser, 12th.

Who ever thinks of Mrs. Christopher Columbus? Yet to her the great discoverer was indebted for encouragement. She was a Miss Palestrolo, of Lisbon, the well-educated, brilliant daughter of a navigator with whom she had been engaged to marry, and who gave her one of the first valuable collections of charts, maps and important memoranda which have aided his voyages.

At Houston, Tex., during the war a large amount of bombs and other ammunition were thrown into the Buffalo Bayou, to avoid capture. Last week a boy named Chubb took home one of the bombs, and he had a very good idea of its value. He had a very good idea of its value. He had a very good idea of its value.

Language Among Dogs.

LAWRENCE, KAN., April 13.—Probably the most convincing and remarkable evidence that animals can talk to each other was witnessed near here a few days ago on the farm of William Seymour. Seymour has two dogs which are accustomed to remain in the barn and have become firm friends with the horses. To such an extent has this friendship progressed that when any of the horses or dogs have been away from home for any time immediately on their return they rush together and rub noses and give other evidences of delight at meeting.

The dogs and horses go to the pasture together and return home at evening in company. This remarkable and close friendship has been noted by many and much commented upon, but the climax was reached when one of the dogs came rushing from a small piece of timber about half a mile from the barn. He ran hurriedly up to the other dogs and whined and barked in a queer manner and then ran to the house.

The second dog at once jumped to his feet and started off on a run to the woods as fast as he could go. The first dog hunted around the place until he found Mr. Seymour, and then by barks and strange antics attracted his attention and started back toward the timber.

Mr. Seymour paid little attention to him until he was told what occurred in the barn, where the two dogs apparently held conversation, and then he followed to the woods. The dog went straight into the woods, and there Mr. Seymour found that one of his horses had fallen down in a small water course which was so narrow and steep that it was impossible for the animal to rise.

The horse was lying perfectly still, while the second dog sitting by its side licking its face and showing by its attentions that he intended to comfort the horse all that it was in its power. The fact that the horse was lying in an out-of-the-way place, with the additional fact that the second dog did not hesitate, but went directly to where it had fallen, was plain evidence of the fact that the first dog had told the story and given directions for finding the horse that was in trouble.

Down a Fanned It Went.

The explosion occurred at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, and was the result of a small quantity of powder which had been carelessly left in the mill.

Swamp on their Lives.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., April 5.—Three strong-limbed boys near Waveland in this county, passed through a trying ordeal on Sunday. Their names are Hiram Rustin and Harry and Thomas Rice, the latter two being brothers. James M. Rice, father of the last two mentioned, owns three fish ponds covering several acres.

The deluge of Sunday, when the rain fell in ropes from the clouds, flooded the ponds and threatened their destruction which would mean a loss of several thousand pounds of choice bass, pickerel, and perch. The boys started to cut through the banks to provide an escape for the rapidly rising backwater that was already overflowing the dam. Suddenly about the rear of the storm they heard a crash that would have made older men than they quail.

Mr. Seymour paid little attention to him until he was told what occurred in the barn, where the two dogs apparently held conversation, and then he followed to the woods.
