

The Anderson Intelligencer.

ANDERSON, S. C., WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1892.

VOLUME XXVII.—NO. 12.

BY CLINKSCALES & LANGSTON.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
E. R. Kay et al. Plaintiffs vs. Nannie Kay et al. Defendants.—Complaint for Partition, &c.

PURSUANT to the order of Court herein I will sell at Anderson, S. C., on Saturday in October next, the following described lands, to-wit: 1. The Home Place of E. R. Kay, de- ceased, containing 130 acres, more or less, adjoining E. R. Kay and James G. W. Kay, and containing 100 acres, more or less, adjoining the Home Place, E. R. Kay, James W. Kay and others. 2. Tract containing 53 acres, more or less, adjoining Home Place, Geo. L. Mitchell and others. 3. One-half cash, balance in twelve months, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage, with leave to anticipate payment. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
Hattie Watkins, Plaintiff, vs. Ralph E. Watkins, Thos. G. Watkins, et al., Defendants.—Complaint for Partition, &c.

PURSUANT to the order of Court herein I will sell at Anderson, S. C., on Saturday in October next, the following described lands to-wit: Tract No. 1, known as the home place, containing fifty acres, more or less, adjoining lands of Geo. L. Mitchell, E. R. Kay, and others. Also, Tract No. 2, not adjoining Tract No. 1, but nearly, containing twenty-two and one-half acres, more or less, adjoining Wm. Watkins, E. R. Kay, D. Smith, Perry Ashburn, and Johnson. 3. Tract No. 3, containing one and one-half acres, balance in one month, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
Wm. A. Williams, Administrator of the Estate of Nancy Williams, deceased, Plaintiff, vs. S. J. Fisher, et al., Defendants.—Action to sell land in aid of personal assets to pay debts.

PURSUANT to an order in the above stated case made in this Court, I will sell on Saturday in October next, in the County of Anderson, S. C., the following described tract of land, to-wit: The tract of land known as the home place, containing six acres, more or less, situated in Anderson County, S. C., and adjoining lands of Robert Thompson, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Moses S. Smith and others. Terms of sale, to-wit: Cash in hand, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

Judge of Probate's Sale.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Probate Court.
Wm. A. Williams, Administrator of the Estate of Nancy Williams, deceased, Plaintiff, vs. S. J. Fisher, et al., Defendants.—Action to sell land in aid of personal assets to pay debts.

PURSUANT to an order in the above stated case made in this Court, I will sell on Saturday in October next, in the County of Anderson, S. C., the following described tract of land, to-wit: The tract of land known as the home place, containing six acres, more or less, situated in Anderson County, S. C., and adjoining lands of Robert Thompson, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Moses S. Smith and others. Terms of sale, to-wit: Cash in hand, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
Bessie R. Taylor, Administrator of the Estate of S. J. Fisher, deceased, Plaintiff, vs. Marion R. Taylor, Annie Lueta Taylor, et al., Defendants.—Complaint for Partition, &c.

PURSUANT to the order of Court herein I will sell at Anderson, S. C., on Saturday in October next, the following described land, to-wit: That certain tract of land known as the home place, containing six acres, more or less, situated in Anderson County, S. C., and adjoining lands of Robert Thompson, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Moses S. Smith and others. Terms of sale, to-wit: Cash in hand, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
S. J. Fisher, Plaintiff, vs. S. J. Fisher, et al., Defendants.—Complaint for Partition, &c.

PURSUANT to the order of Court herein I will sell at Anderson, S. C., on Saturday in October next, the following described land, to-wit: That certain tract of land known as the home place, containing six acres, more or less, situated in Anderson County, S. C., and adjoining lands of Robert Thompson, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Moses S. Smith and others. Terms of sale, to-wit: Cash in hand, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

MASTER'S SALE.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
In the Court of Common Pleas.
S. J. Fisher, Plaintiff, vs. S. J. Fisher, et al., Defendants.—Complaint for Partition, &c.

PURSUANT to the order of Court herein I will sell at Anderson, S. C., on Saturday in October next, the following described land, to-wit: That certain tract of land known as the home place, containing six acres, more or less, situated in Anderson County, S. C., and adjoining lands of Robert Thompson, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Moses S. Smith and others. Terms of sale, to-wit: Cash in hand, with interest from day of sale, secured by bond and mortgage. Purchaser to pay extra for papers. R. M. BURRIS, Master. Sept. 7, 1892.

TRIAL BY JURY.

INSTEAD of a jury of twelve men, we propose to employ the whole population of the town, and simply ask them to read the testimony and make up their minds.

THE VERDICT.

Now for the testimony. Dr. Martin, of Atlanta, testifies that he has used Stuart's Gin and Buchu in his practice with fine results, and that he has even cured the disease of the kidneys with it after all other remedies failed.

Dr. Fontaine, of Rex, Ga., testifies that he has been prescribing Stuart's Gin and Buchu for some time, and that it is the best remedy known for kidney, urinary and all bladder troubles.

Mr. E. D. Moberly, of Atlanta, testifies that he has suffered for years with a kidney trouble, and that he has been cured by Stuart's Gin and Buchu. He says that he has found no other relief until he took STUART'S GIN and BUCHU. It made a perfect cure. We would add much of same kind of testimony, but space and time forbid. If you suffer, try a bottle—it will not disappoint you.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT. Notice is hereby given that the undersigned will apply to the Judge of Probate at Anderson, S. C., on the 15th day of October, 1892, for a final settlement of the Estate of S. B. Millwee, deceased, and a discharge from his office as Administrator of said Estate.

W. B. MILLWEE, Adm'r. August 31, 1892.

TEACHERS' COLUMN.

All communications intended for this column should be addressed to C. WARDLAW, School Commissioner, Anderson, S. C.

MEMORY GEMS.

"It is a way of calling a man a fool when no heed is given to what he says." "It is not possible to found a lasting power upon injustice, perjury and treachery."

We have plenty of school Registers now. Teachers or Trustees call and be supplied.

The Townville High School is open again under the supervision of Prof. J. F. Rice. He succeeded last year, and the prospects are brighter than before.

The examination for teachers will be held on the third Friday in October, which is the 21st day of that month. Teachers should have their certificates put in force, and not allow them to go out of date.

Some of the schools are using "Tarbell's Lessons in Language." We have not sufficiently examined the work to be able to pass upon its merits, but from what we have seen of it we are favorably impressed.

We have a "Grammar Chart," prepared by Rev. R. D. Hawkins, with which we are very much pleased. It is cheap, ($1.50) and will prove a great benefit to all who use it. We commend it to the favorable consideration of all teachers.

Mr. G. S. Goodgoin has charge of the Male High School at Williamston. He is a young man of promise, and we hope to see him succeed. This is a good location, and a school should be built up there that would command and keep the very best teachers.

Mr. Jas. A. Mattison's school, at Eureka, closed on the 16th inst. with appropriate exercises. We were present by invitation, and enjoyed the occasion very much. Mr. Mattison has done faithful and successful work at Eureka, and we regret to give him up, but it is only for a season. We shall be glad to see him return from Nashville to the work again. The patrons of this school should go to work at once to secure a teacher for next year. It is a good place, and deserves a good teacher, and we've no doubt will get one.

The male school at Pendleton is without a teacher. This is a good place for the kind of a teacher. It is in a small District, and so situated as to offer special opportunities for building up a first class high school for boys. They have a good school house, well furnished. They also have a good, brick dwelling in which the teacher could reside. Any teacher who wishes to apply for this school should call on or write to Mr. R. E. Sloan, who is chairman of the Board of Trustees. His postoffice is Pendleton, S. C.

We noticed a few days ago a statement that a certain school wanted a "Tillman Teacher." We hope and trust that the writer was mistaken, for we do not want to see this fishish enemy of everything it touches (factional politics) enter the school room. If a teacher has much respect for his or her calling, he or she would not apply for a position made vacant by the demand for a "Tillman Teacher." Teachers should hold their calling higher than that, and should consider an insult to the profession an insult to the school.

The teachers above all others are to be examined to the people, and we hope there is not, and never will be, in Anderson County a "Tillman Teacher." We do not care how many of the teachers may be for Tillman politically, but when one sinks to the depths of being a "Tillman Teacher," then we would hesitate before believing such fit for the school room.

"THOUGHTLESSLY."

"It is well to think twice; it is divine to act well." The great trouble now is that men do not think enough. We cannot say that they do not think, but often they do not think enough. Hence we frequently find men saying they "thoughtlessly" did this or that. In some cases this is true, in others men try to dodge the responsibility of their acts by saying they "thoughtlessly" did it. Children should be taught to not do things "thoughtlessly." Before an act is performed, if time will possibly allow, the consequences should be considered, and we would in this way avoid having some of the things that we "thoughtlessly" did. It is a poor apology to say to an injured friend "I thoughtlessly did it." The word "thoughtlessly" shows a want of consideration for others, and the children should be taught to rightly regard the welfare and interest of others. At the bar of eternal justice we cannot plead that we acted "thoughtlessly." "Be sure you are right, then go ahead."

A lady of Germantown, Pa., values her collection of cats at five thousand dollars.

Talking of patent medicines—you know the old prejudice. And the doctors—some of them are between you and you. They would like you to think that what's cured thousands won't cure you. You'd believe in patent medicines if they didn't profess to cure everything—and so, between the experiments of doctors, and the experiments of patent medicines that are sold only because there's money in the "stuff," you lose faith in everything. And, you can't always tell the prescription that cures by what you read in the papers. So, perhaps, there's no better way to sell a remedy, than to tell the truth about it, and take the risk of its doing just what it professes to do. That's what the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., does with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If they don't you get your money back.

BILL ARP'S TALK.

What's the Matter with the World these Days?

Atlanta Constitution.

It strains a weak mind to take it all in and keep it. With what the awful cholera across the seas and the famines in Russia and the presidential election and the Third Party and Hogg, Clarke and Company in Texas and Tom Watson and Black in Georgia and the coal miners in Tennessee and Sullivan and Corbett in New Orleans and the World's Fair and the strikes and hangings and lynchings and murders and suicides and rattlesnakes thrown on to fill up the columns, I don't know what will become of us all. The planet Mars must be on a rampage sure enough and is throwing down a few rocks to show that he is mad. We see that some more meteoric stones are falling out West. I reckon we had better quit reading the papers and take up the Bible awhile and go to meeting and draw our minds away from this unwholesome world of these things are over. Thank goodness that the prize fights are over for a season. That job is done. Now let us have peace. I reckon most men would consent to a sneaking desire to see a prize fight. I do, and it is one of the best evidences of original sin that I know of. I would like to be out of sight behind a curtain and have a peep hole and see how it was done. One time would do me, for with me it is curiosity mainly. If there was much blood I would retire early, for blood makes me sick. I expect I would take sides and want my man to whip. Original sin makes a man or a boy love to see a dog fight and a chicken fight or a bull fight or to run foxes with hounds. It is cruel and devilish and hard on the heart. A cruel boy will make a cruel man and I wouldn't want him for a son-in-law.

But age and reflection and the grace of God will change a man and drive out this original sin if he is willing. The danger is that before he is aware of it he becomes total depravity and then he is gone. A young man can indulge in some vice or passion until it is his very life and he can't quit. He can indulge a passion for gaming until it absorbs him and he is not fit to do anything else. What a miserable life it is that is bet away on races and fights and the turn of a card when a man is on his last bed that comfort is there in saying to himself "bet and bet and bet. Only this young man would only stop and think how much better is a useful life than to die a wreck and a nonentity!"

But I did not start to preach a sermon. I was only ruminating upon the spectacle that the world presents to those who see it just now as it revolves upon its axis. Human beings—men women and children dying in Persia and Russia by the thousands every day—dying of pestilence or famine—dying faster than they can be buried, and in Hamburg at the rate of 250 a day, and all business stopped except funerals and grave digging and all night long the muffled rumbling of the hearse and carts and ambulances and in almost every cottage of the poor the walls and groans of misery. Pestilence and famine are holding a carnival. These people are not our kindred nor our friends but they are human beings with hearts and feelings and affections like our own. God pity them! And as the world turns another scene comes to view where thousands of wild excited people are gathered to see two men punch each other until death or victory, and there others shout and yell and oaths and pan-demonium and betting high and fast and furious and like a shadow over all is the devil smiling and happy and his forked tail is wagging calm and serene. I ruminated over this and wondered. Suppose that death on the pale horse should suddenly have appeared in this crowd, or the destroying angel should have come with his glittering sword, or the east wind should have wafted there a breath of the pestilence that is raging on the other side—would it have violated the eternal fitness of things?

The trouble with all sporting is the company that one must keep who wishes to enjoy it. This trouble begins with the school boy at his games of marbles or ball and with the young man who is fond of baseball or billiards or cards, or the young lady who likes to dance. Some good pious people believe that all such things are sinful in themselves while some believe they become a sin only by association and by over-indulgence. Every man has the privilege of his own opinions upon these things and every patriot is responsible for the good conduct of his children; but still the preachers are right in warning and forewarning and if they do assume to know more than other people it is a pardonable presumption, for as a general thing they are against vice and folly in all its forms. Nevertheless a preacher is but a man and there is no greater tyranny than the tyrant of priestcraft.

I wonder what is the matter with the people and why they are so restless and excited and why they are so split up and torn up in politics. For the life of me I can't see any very great difference between our privileges and enjoyments now and what they used to be. Cotton is very low, but I remember when it was 5 cents a pound and we had had to haul it 200 miles to market. Salt and iron were 3 cents a pound and steel 75 cents. Those were hard times sure enough, but the people didn't complain like they do now. We have had good seasons this year and made good crops and had no pestilence and yet the people are not happy and I'm afraid are not grateful. There is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and no there is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and he's looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer