There is an old story that older people have of-ten heard. It is once that a slave owner old one of his slaves that if he would ind an ear of corn with an odd number frows on it he would make him free The poor slave hunted for years for an ear of corn that would make him free and had given up in despair. One summer when the ears in his master's field were ust beginning to take on grain the slave oulled down the husks of an ear and with his knife cut out a row. When the ear matured the gap had filled up, leaving on odd number of rows and no trace of the trick. The master kept his word and set the slave free .- Greenville News. -The Third Party people in North Carolina have shown themselves in their true colors.
