A Sad Case,

"Stories of conviction on circum stantial evidence are rife in the law books, and have afforded the plot of many a novel," said J. S. Haberling of New York, at the Lindell. "A Nowhere in the gospel of our Lord very sad case not of conviction, but almost as bad in its results; occurred in New York recently. A young lady of refinement, a stranger in the city, obtained employment as governess in a gentleman's family. One of her pupils, a girl of 15, lost a diamond ring. It was found in the desk of the overness. She declared that she had not seen it since it was last on the girl's hand, but she was hustled off to the tombs, and, unable to give bond, was kept there several days, exposed to companionship with the most depraved of her sex. She was taken to court in the black Maria with a negress and a white woman, both convicted felons, going to be sentenced. She was kept in the pen waiting for her case to be called, exposed to the impu-dent game of the horde of courtroom loafers. When her case was called, the court appointed a lawyer to defend her, as she was penniless. The prosecuting witness and her father told the story of the finding of the missing The presumption that the accused had placed it there was more or less strong until the lawyer began to cross-examine the owner of the ring. Guessing at the truth, by adroit questioning he drew from the unwilling witness the fact that she had often pried into the desk and dressing case drawers of the governess and that she had so been engaged an hour or so bethought of death. fore she missed the ring; and the further fact that the ring fitted loose-

was quite strong. Judge Baldwin was defending him, and seeing that the case was hopeless, Baldwin decided to chair, said : "What have you got to take advantage of Judge Dundy's read? I'm just in the mood to read weakness. He hunted up an old lady who had five children, ranging from 8 years to 8 months old, and had her impersonate the supposed wife and half responded sweetly, "Here's the children of the prisoner. All through the trial they sat, often weeping. The man was found guilty. Three days later, when the prisoner was brought up to be sentenced, the woman and children were brought in and Judge Baldwin, who is very dramatic, made a plea for the man and his family of little ones, who would suffer if the father was sent to prison. Baldwin wept, the Court wept, the prisoner pretended to weep, as did the children. When the Court had wiped away the tears he talked severely to the man and then gave him one day in jail and $10 fine. Later on, when he learned how he had been deceived, he became so angry that it was weeks before he whiting, gum and linseed oil, and then would speak to Judge Baldwin. - When paper horseshoes were first introduced into the cavalry service of the German army a few years ago they ex-cited a good deal of interest. Several cavalry horses were first shod with the paper shoes and the effect observed. It was found that not only did the lightness and elasticity of the shoe help the horse on the march. making it possible for him to travel faster and further without faigue than horses shod with iron, but that the paper shoe had the property of being unaffected by water and other liquids. These new sheets of paper are pressed close together, one above anoth-er, and rendered impervious to the mois-ture by the application of oil of turpen-tine. The sheets are glued together by a
