Terrible Marine Disaster.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—The Pacific mail steamer Colima was wrecked between San Francisco and Acapulco, and present indications are that over one hundred and fifty persons perished. Only fifteen persons are known to have been rescued.

The Colima was an iron vessel of 2,900 tons burden. She was built by Roach & Philadelphia and chartered from the city on the 15th inst. in command of Capt. J. F. Taylor. There were forty cabin passengers, thirty-six steerage passengers, forty Chinese and seventy officers and crew.

One of the steamers a dispatch received by the agents of the Pacific Mail Company, one of the steamer's small boats containing fourteen passengers and five of the crew reached the Mexican coast and was this party that telegraphed the news of the wreck. None of the remaining one hundred and fifty passengers and crew have been heard of.

The boat containing the rescued men was picked up at sea by the steamer San Juan, north bound to this city from Central American ports. The boat was put into Manzanillo, with the saved and, according to dispatches received since, at least two men are in search of other boats.

Immediately upon the receipt here of the news the Pacific Mail Company sent a dispatch to their agents at Acapulco to send the steamer Bartlett, which had just arrived there from Panama, to make a thorough search for the lost vessel, which it is thought are either adrift with passengers and crew or on the coast near the scene of the disaster.

The latest concerning the disaster is a private message which reports that there is a possibility that several more boats are adrift or have landed on the coast. The disaster occurred about fifty miles from Manzanillo, and between that port and Punta Prieta, a few miles from the Mexican coast. The Colima had been out several hours when the accident occurred.
