He is a great reader, and professional man, and on all occasions nothing new in the medical or surgical sought to publicly profess their deep gratitude and high admiration for his line escapes him, and he is as eager in his old age to use the knife as he was in his prime. He is also a genial companion, and nothing delights him more than to relate some of his experiences while in the service of the Federal Government during the war.

"The other officer alluded to was of a different type, but not a whit less brave than this companion in arms. He was brought in later on with a gunshot wound in his arm, which had shattered the bone and necessitated amputation. When he arrived at the hospital he was struggling like a madman to release himself from the attendants, who had placed him in the ambulance. The air was fairly blue with profanity. I never heard a man use such oaths before or since. He swore by all that was good and bad that he could whip 10,000 Confederates in 10 minutes and insisted that he be sent back to his regiment that tients whether or not they get further he might get satisfaction for the loss of his arm. I placed my finger on the wound and knew there was no hope for him. He caught my eye and realized at once his doom. 'All right, Doctor,' said he, 'move on to the next. Good-by.' And another brave fellow had crossed the dark river. By the side of him lay a youth of perhaps 18 -a rugged, raw-boned boy, evidently a farmer's son. He had been struck by a missile which had cut away the heel of his shoe and foot close to the bone, as clean as could be done with a sharp knife. He was crying and moaning with pain and fear that he would die. In fact, he felt sure that he would never see home again, and many messages were given me to send away. One of my assistants fixed him up in good shape, and six weeks after that he was with his regiment again."

Once upon a time, not so very long ago, a gentleman who had a beautiful garden thought that it would be very nice to have some bees; so he bought

But during that the County Supervisor, member exsix weeks he labors early and late to gather the honey dew and store it away in the hive for you and me, and for the young bees to eat the following winter, when they dare not stir out of the hive. Bees will travel on the wing six or seven miles to find make only about one teaspoonful of honey during its lifetime. So it takes an army of bees to fill one full of hon-

So the gentleman put this kind of comb in three hives; but in the other hives he left the bees to make the good old-fashioned kind of "honey in the honeycomb," that is so sweet and beautiful. One morning the gentleman found an angry buzzing the while. He knew bees were talking about it. The gentleman went to the hive and ook off the top and looked in, and the manufactured honeycombs was broken across, and the honey dripping down upon the floor of the hive. The gentleman thought of a way at once to help the bees. He pressed the broken comb together, and backed into its place in the frame, and then took clean, white twine, and tied the comb into the frame, and hung it back in the hivs. Then he went a short distance and watched and listened to see what the bees would do and say. The bees flew into and out of the hive and soon grew quiet, and commenced their cheerful, happy buzzing, without one note of anger.

The next morning, the gentleman went out again very early, and found the bees quiet and happy; but he saw something that surprised him very much. In front of one of the hives the short grass was white whith a white fuzz or lint. He examined it closely, and found that it was fine white lint. He said to himself : "This is the hive that has the mended ioneycomb in it. I will look in." He took off the top of the hive again, and what do you think he WINNSBORO, September 14.—That the lispensary system has a great many oeing watched with serious interest by all right thinking men. One argument against it was the tendency to corruption on the part of the Government, the temptation to make money by way of private tation to make money by way of private bonus, discounts, etc. The question which may some day arise is, whether it is better to have a "whiskey ring" in the Government with the legislative, judiciary and executive power prejudiced in ciary and executive power prejudiced in favor of the ring, or to have a whiskey ring which can be held in check by a Government not prejudiced in its favor. The question above is the suggestion of circumstances connected with the dispensary at Ridgeway in this County.

About a year ago, on the day that Pope and Tillman spoke at Ridgeway, the dispenser at that place, R. B. Lewis, was sick in bed. About 5 o'clock in the evening an ardent Reformer approached Governor Tillman and besought him to open

The whiskey was going out, and going without money and without price. Mr. Lewis was notified in person by Dr. Linder that he (Lewis) was ruined; that the whiskey was not being accounted for. Mr. Lewis sent Haynes word to close the place up. Haynes replied that it would take a battalion of United States troops to put those men out; that they were drunk and would listen to no entreaty. Various members of the three military companies in the County had stormed the fort and were holding the ground. The next settlement of dispensary account showed Lewis's books short about $58. Lewis stated that six or seven hives, and placed them in the loveliest corner of the garden, under an old apple tree. There was a large bed of mignonette and a small field of clover hard by.

The bees seemed to like their new home very much, and went to work books short about $58. Lewis stated that the shortage occurred on that day and requested the board of control to sue him in order that his record might be cleared.

Two members of the board of control, S. R. Rutland and J. F. Lyles, were in the Ridgeway dispensary at the time it was being relieved of its contents so freely, but the board it appears did not locare to act on the matter of adjusting this loss until Governor Evans had been conhome very much, and went to work loss until Governor Evans had been consulted. The shortage was "carried" until about April without being noted. Mr. Lewis refused to pay it, and told Gover-nor Evans he would not pay it. In order Now, this gentleman not only wanted the honey that his bees would make, but wished to watch the habits of the bees as well, and before giving you the story, I am going to tell you one sad little truth and a few facts about bees: A working bee lives only about six weeks after he begins his and Higgins voted to sustain, and Tenant,

What it Costs to Grow Cotton.

LAURINBURG, N. C., September 5 .- An extended discussion has been carried on for some time in the newspapers of this dispensive system has a great many features of improvement over the old bar room system is certain beyond a question. It is on trial, so to speak, and is being watched with serious interest by States, most of those engaged in it taking the ground that it cannot be successfully and other Southern States on the actual figures, when the interests on the money invested in the farms, horses, and imple ments was taken into consideration. But most of these writers have been theoretical farmers merely. I have obtained the following statement from Mr. S. M. Shaw, a well-known and successful farmer of this (Richmond) County, who does not make theoretical assertions or predictions, but states what he has actually accomplished in the cultivation o

the cotton plant. He says:
"I have given close attention to cotto culture for the last thirty years, and for the last seventeen years I have kept a regular set of farm books. I find the cost of labor in 1890 and 1894 to have been ernor Tillman and besought him to open up at once the dispensary at that place, about the same; fertilizers about 25 per cent. cheaper in 1894. In 1890 I sold my so as to accommodate persons going home in the County. Governor Tillman agreed crop for an average price of 8.76 cents. I made 23 1-2 bales of 500 pounds each for each plough on my farm. That crop cost me 3.54 cents a pound to put the cotton to the request and sent Mr. Lewis a written order to open up. Mr. Lewis put Mr. Haynes, who was his clerk, in charge of the keys, and it was not long before into bales. The taxes on my farm, the "the boys" were in charge of everything. wear and tear of implements, wear and tear of stock, rents or interest on my farm, were not included in the cost of "In 1894 I made twenty-two bales of cotton of 500 pounds each, over 200 bush els of corn, and nearly 1,000 pounds of pork for each one-horse farm. the average price received for that crop of cotton at 5.50 cents per pound; to produce it cost me 3.99 cents a pound, that is, to put it into bales ready for market -taxes, interest, wear and tear, etc., left out of the calculation as in 1890. "Now, to get at the actual cost of producing cotton, I have reduced the value of my farm one-third from what I was offered for it in 1890; I have estimated the wear and tear of implements and stock and find the net profit of my crop of 1894 paid me 5.23 per cent. on my investment. So, in order to get 6 per cent. on my investment, I ought to get six cents for my cotton. In other words, it costs at least six cents a pound to raise cotton in North Carolina, and it can be raised a that figure without loss. All over that is clear profit to the farmer. So, eight cents is a fairly good price for cotton, I should say. My fertilizers cost me $166 per plough. I do not think any man in this State can raise cotton cheaper than I, because I have one of the best adapted farms in the State for cotton culture, and the statements I saw from a Mr. Kinnon to the effect that he could raise it at 3 1-2 cents I do not credit. It is all talk to say that cotton cannot be grown in North Carolina for less than 9 or 10 cents. I shall be satisfied if I can get 7 or 7 1-2 cents for this year's crop, and I shall then make from 1 to 2 cents per pound clear profit on it, after deducting every kind of expense that enters into its pro duction. In Texas I suppose it can be New York Evening Post.
