TRUE AMERICAN LIFE.

entention That It Exists, In Its Bee Phises, In Our Smaller Cities. It is when we go into the smaller itles of our country that we find the real American life, the truest phases of American living, writes Edward W. Bok in an article on "Where American Life Really Exfsts." in The Ladies' Home Journal. One need only go into such charming and delightful home cities as Albany, Troy, Syracuse, Binghamton, Rochester and Buffalo in New York state, or in such spots of charming intellectuality as New Haven or Hartford in Connecticut, or Springfield, Worcester or Lowell in Massachusetts, to see how far removed from the truest and happiest way of living are the people of the larger cities.

American home life and every thing that is uplifting in American domesticity are perfectly fragrant in such cities as Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cleveland or Cincinnati. People live in these cit-ies as if they enjoyed living. The very exteriors of homes in these cities breathe forth a wholesome domestic atmosphere. A man of fair income in any of these cities lives like a human being in a home in which t e sunshine visits each side of his house during a day. For less money he has a house with ground around it than his brother of greater means who lives in a larger city and has only a brown stone chest of drawers in a closely built block into which the sun penetrates only through one side of his house.

The man of the smaller community is necessarily happier with such living, and his wife and children are the healthier for it. Life means something to a man living in this way; it means contentment and comfort. The quality of intellectual life of the smaller American cities astonishes one who finds it for the first time. And the secret of it lies in the simple fact that people in these cities have more time for the cultivation of mind, for the gratifi-cation of mental tastes. Literary clubs and neighborhood guilds have a deeper meaning than in the great

A woman's social life is absolutely refreshing and stimulating in these cities, and in direct contrast to the exhaustion of social gayeties of the large cities. But people come closer to each other, and their amusements are more satisfying, more harmonious. Then, too, the church comes closer in the fulfillment of its mission in our smaller American communities. The religious life is truer than in the large centers. The church is taken into the lives of its people, and its interests are their interests, spiritual and material.

Bathing In the Sea. See bathing had its origin in Eng. land before 1750, when Dr. Richard Russell published his treatise on the virtues of sea water. The healing virtues of the sea bath were not unbathing generally resorted to. There seems to have existed a horror of the sea; indeed, in mediaval times a compulsory dip in its waters was a sentence often passed on the pubilo offender. In the earlier decades of last century western Europe suffered heavily under "king's evil," the popular name for that tuberoulons affection which soourged all classes from peer to peasant. Dr. Russell, a Sussex practitioner, Having satisfied himself as to the efficacy of the practice, he began to prescribe for his patients with most satisfactory results. His treatise resulted in our coasts becoming largely patronized by the ailing, and the demand for seaside lodgings was soon a growing quantity. This gradually spread to the continent. Then hind him. The Prise Mule. From the time of Æsop's fables to the present time mules have been thought to have a peculiar wisdom that has assisted them in many emergencies, but the A. B. Smith company has one who each day at 4 o'clock a. m. and at high noon goes to the bell rope in the lot and rings the bell with as much gusto as a human being could. As we were doubtful of the mule's ringing regularly, we inquired of the negro in charge of the mule lot, and he sid. "Yaas, sah; dat mule kin pick Indianola (Miss.) Index.

A DRUGGIST'S BLUNDER.

An Awful Moment In the Experience of a

One of the proprietors of a drug store in Atlanta was not long ago a drug clerk in a small city. There were two drug clerks in the store at the time. They divided the time. one answering the calls at night and the other doing long hours.

"One night," said the Atlanta man, "I was in my room over the drug store. I couldn't sleep somehow, and I tossed about on my bed until I decided to pass the time reading. After a bit I heard some one come in the drug store below and heard my partner get up and wait on the customer. In a few minutes I heard the customer go out and everything was quiet again. but quiet only for a short time.

"Presently I heard my colleague below walking about uneasily, and I could tell by the nervous way in which he walked about that something was the matter. I went down and found the young man walking up and down the floor, great beads of perspiration standing out on his brow and agony written all over his

"'I don't know what on earth to do.' he broke out in absolute despain 'I made a mistake with that prescription. I was so sleepy I did not know, but somehow I kept thinking after the boy left that I had made a mistake, and I went to the arsenic and found that sure enough I'd put enough arsenic in that prescription to kill three men. For God's sake, if you think of anything that can be done, 'tell me quick.'

"His face was drawn and white, and his mind was at a terrible ten sion. 'Speak, speak, for God's sake, for the boy was in a hurry, and the man's already taken it, I'm afraid. "Where does he live?' I asked.

"His face fell and an expression of terror came over it. He drepped into a chair.

"'I don't know,' he gasped. "I sat down facing him and for what seemed an hour we sat there looking at each other, not speaking a word. What passed through our minds no human words can tell. We saw the dreadful effect of the mistake-death, disgrace to us, ruin to the establishment, criminal charge and forever afterward the frightful knowledge of having been criminal. ly careless. Black pictures flitted through our minds. It was an awful

"We started at every little sound. We listened for the cry of the family of the sick one. We could see the patient writhing in the throes of death-death brought on by a terrible, a criminal, an inexcusable mistake. The cold sweat stood out all over us. "There came a sound outside. We listened intently. There was a knock on the door. We both sprang to our feet. I rushed to the door.

"A small boy stood there crying. He held the remnants of some broken pieces of glass in his hands. He threw his arm over his eyes and oried as if his heart would break.

Oh. mister, ple sir,' he blubbered. 'I couldn't help it. I stumped my toe and-boo hoo! -fell down, and-boo hoo!-broke the bottle.'

"We both seized him in our arms. My comrade gave him the sort of an embrace that one gives to his sweetheart after a year's separation, and we wept on his neck. The way we set that boy up before letting him go ought to have set a premium on breaking bottles among the small boys of that town."-Atlanta Con-

Plenty of Boom In the Boots. In the German army the fatherand provides very roomy boots for its warriors. There is, however, a serious inconvenience attending the disproportion between the sizes of boots and feet. In very soft, tenacious ground the boots are left sticking, and the man goes on, casting an affectionate farewell glance be-

When the Eighteenth army corps, a few years ago, defiled before the emperor at Strasburg across a stubble field which rain had rendered very sticky and muddy, the boots of the horses went to and fro in the the infantry were pulled off by the hundred, so that a fatigue party had to be told off, amid great laughter, to gather up the lost property. In military history the occasion is still known as the boot parade.

Arti Brown's Mishap. Apropos of the babyhood of J. G. Brown, the artist, one incident should be recorded, because it left a lasting result which, in some degree, was an obstacle to the boy's success in the field of art. It is needless to declare that the obstacle has been gravely overcome. He was just old enough to be able to walk a little. One morning he was pattering round in the kitchen in all the glory of a pair of new shoes. New shoes are slippery, while new walking legs are not absolutely sure. On the floor of the kitchen was a boiler, full of scalding hot water, and with the cover off. Of course the time when the new shoes slipped and the baby legs gave way was when the child was near this caldron. Down he fell, his right arm went into the scalding water, and up went a prodigious howl of pain from the poor scalded haby. It was a frightful burn, and the doctor did not know how to treat it very well. "My mother says I oried from that burn for 19 months." Mr. Brown says. That it was a serious one is evident from the fact that his right hand has ever since been oramped and shortened, so that he can bend his fingers only very imperfectly. And that is the hand he has to use in painting. "In handling my brush I have to use it in one way rather than another on account of these contracted fingers," said Mr. Brown, "and that counts a little in the technic of my brushwork."-"The Child Painter, J. G. Brown," by John J. a' Becket, in St. Nicholas.

We remember the stories of the absentminded man who put his umbrella to bed and stood behind the door all night, and of another man who couldn't find his pipe when he had it between his teeth. Here is still another story to add to the list.

A prominent lumberman of eastern Maine was hurrying in company with a friend to catch a train, when he stopped suddenly and exclaimed: 'There! I've come away from the hotel and left my watch under the pillow."

"Let's go back and get it," said his friend.

"Hold on," said the lumberman. 'I don't believe we shall have time,' and he drew the lost watch from his pocket, looked carefully at the face of it, counted the minutes and add-"No. we shan't have time. Then he pressed on toward the station, saying, "Oh, well, I guess I can get along for one day without a watch."-Bangor Commercial.

Ungallant, A Russian paper institutes the following very ungallant comparison: 'Women in their childhood are like water; from 12 to 15, like lemonade; young ladies from 18 to 25, like champagne; women from 25 to 40, like liqueur; a woman from 40 to 50 resembles port wine; after their fiftieth year they turn to vinegar." -Geillustreerd Stuiversblad

Among the children of many countries the idea is inculcated that toads can spit poison. Several allusions are made in English literature to the further notion that in the head of toads may be found an antidote for the poison of its spittle.

Byron's household, according to Shelley, consisted, besides servants, of ten horses, eight enormous dogs, three monkeys, five cats, an eagle, a crow and a falcon, and all except house at their pleasure.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws is to be led by permanent ideals-that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him .-
