

VANITY OF ACTORS.

The Self Esteem of the People Connected With the Stage.

The self esteem of people connected with the stage is immense. There is no profession where this feeling is more developed.

Frederic Lemaire, notwithstanding his talent, could not endure the success of one of his comrades. In a melodrama he came on the stage holding in his arms his son, who had just been drowned.

But it is not actors alone who are vain; simple chorus singers and ballet girls have also their self-esteem.

But the waves had never been so much agitated. The director had to go and re-establish peace by means of vigorous kicks in the bosom of the ocean.

Soldiers, too, who sometimes take part in theatrical representations, do not always obey the actors.

One actor whose self love was wounded revenged himself in an original fashion. A hairdresser had declared in the presence of numerous customers that the actor had no talent.

It was thought that he was a victim of the opium habit, and the supposition proved correct. His servants were charged never to disturb him or enter his presence except when summoned.

Physicians, hastily called, worked on him, but their efforts proved futile. Death came in a few hours.

With a gradually improving system of irrigation the Egyptian cotton product is increasing and becoming more profitable.

There is no medicine in the world equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the cure of throat and lung diseases.

AN ECCENTRIC DIPLOMAT.

The Quaint Personality and Strange Life of Minister Fox.

The former representative of the government of Great Britain to this country, Henry Stephen Fox, of whom the good story is told that when he met acquaintances in daylight he remarked how strange was their appearance.

Mr. Fox proved an acquisition to the society of the capital, at least so far as to furnish a subject for society gossip, and it was not long before his eccentric habits, his peculiar attire and his brilliant witticisms were known not only in society circles, but by the general public.

Mr. Fox lived here in a large brick house on K street, west of what is now Washington circle. He was almost a hermit, going in official society only so far as duty required and receiving but few visitors.

It was thought that he was a victim of the opium habit, and the supposition proved correct. His servants were charged never to disturb him or enter his presence except when summoned.

Physicians, hastily called, worked on him, but their efforts proved futile. Death came in a few hours.

ALWAYS A PRESIDENT.

The Thoughtfulness of Wales When General Grant Visited England.

Grant's minister to the court of St. James being mortified at the manner in which ex-President Monroe was received at the many receptions to which he (Pierpont) was an invited guest, and though an ex-president, was often seated "below the salt," being preceded by young sprigs of the English nobility.

"I can cite you a precedent," replied Pierpont. "When Napoleon III was exiled, Queen Victoria received him in state, and he sat on her right as an emperor."

"I accept that motto," said Pierpont. "Once a president always a president."

"Certainly, Pierpont, it will give me great pleasure to honor General Grant." Taking a memorandum from his pocket, he erased an engagement and gave General Grant a reception the day after his arrival.

When the Prince of Wales visited America, in 1850, Edward Pierpont's was one of the 50 families delegated to entertain him, and his relations with the prince were of the closest.

The loss of his only son at Rome, who was a member of the diplomatic corps, was the sorrow of his life, and the Latin quotation "He touched the earth" was a suitable inscription, forwarded to the bereaved family by the associate members of the corps.

Dr. L. M. Gillam, who practiced medicine over forty years, originated, used and claimed that Botanic Blood Balm, (B. B. B.) which has now been in use about fifty-five years, was the best Tonic and Blood Purifier ever given to the world.

I have been afflicted with Catarrh for many years, although all sorts of medicines and several doctors did their best to cure me.

It is easy to find fault, but it's hard to tell what to do with it.

Jabbers—"I woke up last night and found a burglar in my room." Havers—"Catch him?" Jabbers—"Certainly not. I'm not making a collection of burglars."

A terrible prairie fire swept over a half-dozen Texas counties one day last week, destroying many thousand head of sheep and cattle.

TERRIBLE NIGHTMARE.

When a man wakes up at night with the idea that he is falling down, down, down from a great height—when he imagines in his sleep that he has lost his breath and can't catch it again—when he tosses and tumbles all night and can't sleep—when his mouth tastes bad in the morning and food is repugnant—death is his bedfellow.

When a man experiences these sensations and feels generally out-of-sorts, there is but one safe thing to do. That is, resort to the right remedy.

Honest druggists recommend it. The druggist who attempts to palm off upon you an inferior substitute, offers an insult to your intelligence.

"I am 54 years old," writes Mr. F. G. Bledsoe, of Leesville, Henry Co., Mo. "For 25 years I suffered the tortures of torpid liver, constipation and indigestion, which severely affected my nerves.

"For eight years I had very poor health," writes Mrs. M. E. Kitzmiller, of Bayard, Grant Co., Va. "The first two years I did not mind this bad feeling so much.

It would save doctor bills for any family to have a copy of Dr. Pierce's splendid thousand-page free book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," explaining the laws of life and health in clear and interesting language.
