BE EUDYARD KIPLING.

They tell the tale even now among. the sal groves of the Berbulda hill and for corroboration point to the roofless and windowless mission house. The great god Dungara, the god of things as they are, most terrible, one eyed, bearing the red elephant tusk, did it all, and he who refuses to believe in Dungara will assuredly be smitten by the madness of Yat-the madness that fell upon the sons and the daughters of the Buria Kol when they turned aside from Dungara and put on clothes. So says Athon Daze, who is high priest of the shrine and warden of the red elephant tusk. But if you ask the assistant collector and agent in charge of the Buria Kol, he will laugh-not because he bears any malice against missions, but because he himself saw the yengeance of Dungara executed upon the spiritual children of the Rev. Justus Erenk, pastor of the Tubingen mission, and upon Lotta, his virtuous wife.

Yet if ever a man merited good treatment of the gods it was the reverend Justus, one time of Heidelberg, who, on the faith of a call, went into the wilderness and took the blond, blue eyed Lotta with him. "We will these heathen now by idolatrous practices so darkened better make," said Justus in the early days of his career. "Yes," he added, with conviction, "they shall be good and shall with their hands to work learn. For all good Christians must work " And upon a stipend more modest even than that of an English lay reader, Justus Krenk kept house beyond Kamala and the gorge of Malair, beyond the Berbulda river close to the foot cil the blue hill of Panth on whose summit stands the temple of Dungara -in the heart of the country of the Buria Kol-the naked, good tempered. timid, shameless, lazy Buria Kol. Do you know what life at a mission outpost means? Try to imagine a loneliness exceeding that of the smallest station to which government has ever sent ycu-isolation that weighs upon the waking eyelids and drives you perforce headlong into the labors of the day. There is no post, there is no one of your own color, to speak to, there are no roads. There is indeed food to keep you alive, but it is not pleasant to eat. and whatever of good or beauty or interest there is in your life must come from yourself and the grace that may be planted in you. In the morning, with a patter of soft feet, the converts, the doubtful and the open scoffers troop up to the veranda. You must be infinitely kind and patient, and, above all, clear sighted, for you deal with the simplicity of childhood, the experience of man and the subtlety of the savage. Your congregation has a hundred material wants to be considered. and it is for you, as you believe in your personal responsibility to your Maker, to pick out of the clamoring crowd any grain of spirituality that may lie therein. If to the cure of souls you add that of bodies, your task will be all the more difficult, for the sick and the maimed will profess any and every creed for the sake of healing and will laugh at you because you are simple enough to believe them. As the day wears and the impotus of the morning dies away there will come upon you an overwhelming sense of the uselessness of your toil This must be striven against, and the only spur in your side will be the belief that you are playing against the devil for the living soul. It is a great and a joyous belief, but he who can hold it unwavering for four and twenty consecutive hours must be blessed with an abundantly strong physique and equable nerve. Ask the gray heads of the Bannockburn medical crusade what manner of life their preachers lead. Speak to the Racine Gospel agency, those lean Americans whose boast is that they go where no Englishman dare follow. Get a pastor of the Tubingen mission to talk of his experiences, if you can. You will be referred to the printed reports, but these contain no mention of the men who have lost youth and health, all that a man may lose except faith in the wilds, of English maidens who have gone forth and died in the fever stricken jungle of the Panth hills, knowing from the first that death was almost a certainty. Few pastors will tell you of these things any more than they will speak of that young David of St. Bees, who, set apart for the Lord's work, broke down in the utter desolation and returned half distraught to the head mission crying, "There is no God, but I have walked with the devil!" The reports are silent here, because heroism, failure, doubt, despair and self abnegation on the part of a mere cultured white man are things of no weight as compared to the saving of one half human soul from a fantastic

"When you have been some years in the country," said Gallio at the Krenks' table. "you grow to find one creed as good as another. I'll give you all the assistance in my power, of course, but don't hurt my Buria Kol. They are good people, and they trust me."

"I will them the word of the Lord teach," said Justus, his round face beaming with enthusiasm, "and I will assuredly to their prejudices no wrong hastily without thinking make. But, oh, my friend, this in the mind impartiality of creed judgment belooking is very bad."

"Heigh-ho!" said Gallio, "I have their bodies and the district to see to, but you can try what you can do for their souls. Only don't behave as you predecessor did, or I'm afraid that I can't guarantee your life." "And that?" said Lotta, sturdily, handing him a cup of tea. "He went up to the temple of Dungara-to be sure he was new to the country - and began hammering old Dungara over the head with an umbrella; so the Buria Kol turned out and hammered him rather savagely. I was in the district, and he sent a runner to me with a note saying: 'Persecuted for the Lord's sake. Send wing of regiment.' The nearest troops were 200 miles off, but I guessed what he had been doing. I rode to Panth and talked to old Athon Daze like a father, telling him that a man of his wisdom ought to have known that the sahib had sunstroke and was mad. You never saw a people more sorry in your life. Athon Daze apologized, sent wood and milk and fowls and all sorts of things, and I gave 5 rupees to the shrine and told Macnamara that he had been injudicious. He said that I had bowed down in the house of Rimmon, but if he had only just gone over the brow of the hill and insulted Palin Deo, the idol of the Suria Krol, he would have been impaled on a charred bamboo long before I could have done anything, and then I should have had to have hanged some of the poor brutes. Be gentle with them, padri

-but I don't think you'll do much." "Not I," said Justus, "but my Master. We will with the little children begin. Many of them will be sick-that is so. After the children the mothers, and then the men. But I would greatly that you were in internal sympathies with us prefer.' Gallio departed to risk his life in mending the rotten bamboo bridges of his people, in killing a too persistent tiger here or there, in sleeping out in the reeking jungle or in tracking the Suria Kol raiders who had taken a few heads from their brethren of the Buria clan. A knockkneed, shambling young man was Gallio, naturally devoid of creed or reverence, with a longing for absolute power which his undesirable district gratified.

"No one wants my post," he used to

And Gallio, the assistant conector or remaining toward sustus, even the country side, "cared for none of binting at his own conversion, but to the congregation of Dungara he said the district, and the Buria Kol loved darkly ... They of the padri's flock have him and brought him offerings of put on clothes and worship a busy god. Therefore Dangara will afflict them moist heart of the forests and as much | grievousi" till they throw themselves howling into the waters of the Berbulda." At night the red elephant tusk boomed and groaned among the hills. and the faithful waked and said: "The god of things as they are matures revenge against the backsliders. Be merciful. Dungara, to us, thy children, and give us all their crops!' Late in the cold weather the collector and his wife came into the Buria Kolcountry. "Go and look at Krenk's mission," said Gallio. "He is doing good work in his own way, and I think he'd be pleased if you opened the bamboo chapel that he has managed to run up. At any rate, you'll see a civilized Buria Kol.

Great was the stir in the mission. 'Now he and the gracious lady will that we have done good work with their own eyes see, and-yes-we will him our converts in all their new clothes by their own hands constructed exhibit. It will a great day be-for the Lord always," said Justus, and Lotta said "Amen." Justus had, in his quiet way, felt jealous of the Basel weaving mission, his own converts being unhandy, but Athon Daze had latterly induced some of them to hackle the glossy silky fibers of a plant that grew plenteously on the Panth hill. It yielded a cloth white and smooth almost as the tappa of the south seas, and that day the converts were to wear for the first time clothes made therefrom. Justus was proud of his work

"They shall in white clothes clothed to meet the collector and his well born lady come down singing 'Now thank we all our God.' Then he will the chapel open, and, yes, even Gallio to believe will begin. Stand so, my children, two by two, and-Lotta, why do they thus themselves scratch? It is not seemly to wriggle, Nala, my child. The collector will be here and be pained."

The collector, his wife and Gallio climbed the hill to the mission station. The converts were drawn up in two lines, a shining band nearly 40 strong. "Hah!" said the collector, whose acquisitive bent of mind led him to believe that he had fostered the institution from the first.

"Advancing, I see, by leaps and bounds."

Never was truer word spoken. The mission was advancing exactly as he had said-at first by little hops and shuffles of shamefaced uneasiness, but soon by the leaps of fly stung horses and the bounds of maddened kangaroos. From the hill of Panth the red elephant tusk delivered a dry and anguished blare. The ranks of the converts wavered, broke and scattered with yelfs and shrieks of pain, while Justus and Lotta stood horror stricken. "It is the judgment of Dungara!"

shouted a voice. "I burn! I burn! To the river or we die!"

Taught Him a Lesson.

In the life of Henry Bradley Plant is a story which shows that mercy may sometimes temper justice to good effect by awakening in an offender a loyalty which he has never before shown.

Mr. Plant was one day traveling in a baggage war when he saw an expressman, in handling a box marked 'Glass," turn it wrong side up. "Here!" he called to the man. "That box is marked 'Glass' and should be kept glass side up, as indicated." "Oh, I know it's marked 'Glass,' said the expressman, "but I never pay any attention to that." Mr. Plant said no more, but later, state was done in this case by J. " handkerchief and some other articles "No, sir." had been found behind some cliffs near

"Well, that was Mr. Plant."

"Then that means my dismissal." "I think it does. I shall have to dismiss you.'

Later the superintendent said to Mr. Plant, "I shall dismiss that man, of course?"

"No," said the president, "don't discharge him. Call him into your office and impress it upon him that that is not the way the company does its business. He won't forget it."

He did not forget it. No more loyal employee was to be found in the comtraced to a laundry down on Bush street kept by a man named Ware. This launpany.

Expected Too Much.

A well known man who gives much to charity was walking along Grant street when he was accosted by a "professional macer," who said he needed "a dime to get a bed." He was given a quarter. After that the man who gave it was marked. A few days later the same "macer" met him.

"Please, sir," he said, "will you give me a nickel to get a cup of coffee ?" He was given a dime. The following week the man was stopped again. This time the beggar wanted a "dime to get somethin to eat.'

"See here, my man," said the charitable one, "don't you think you are pushing this a little too far? It is not so very long ago that I gave you a quarter and again a dime. Isn't it time to stop asking?"

"What do you expect of a man, any how ?'' indignantly asked the "macer.' "Do you think I can live on 35 cents for two weeks?"-Pittsburg News.

long correspondence ensued between the proprietor of the secret and the officials of the bank, the former asking a large sum of money for his knowledge and the latter requiring actual proof of his ability to perform the alleged feat. Paragraphs began to appear in the newspapers, and public attention was drawn to what seemed a very extraordinary fact-that the thin tissue paper of which a bank note is composed could really be divided into two leaves. It became necessary to test the truth of this remarkable discovery, and so it was arranged that trial should be made with an actual note of the Bank of England. Preliminaries were settled, and a note, properly marked, so that it might be afterward identified, was submitted to the inventor. In the course of two or three days back came the note to the

Making a Dictionary.

Nearly every one has had the bright idea that it must be a tremendous amount of work to get up a dictionary, but few have any notion of the real size of the task. When Johnson got his famous dictionary started he calculated that with six assistants he could complete the task in three years. It took him nine years instead. He received the small recompense of $7.500, and nad to pay his assistants out of that.

Webster worked 24 years before his dictionary made its bow to the world. Webster was very punctilious in his definitions, and so painstaking that it was a wonder he completed the work when he did.

The words which give the compiler of a dictionary the most trouble are the little one-syllable Saxon words. Their history extends back into the Saxon period, and their meaning has become twisted in many directions. Words with pedigrees are the hardest to trace.

When a new dictionary is projected one man is selected as editor-in-chief, and he appoints his sub-editors. Then appeals are sent out to literary people in general for voluntary contributions in the nature of rare and curious words. There are over 1,000 people who have offered their services in the case of a dictionary now making. They are to read standard works, ancient and modern, in the search for curious words, their origin and meaning. These words written on slips of paper, are filed in thousands of pigeonholes. Over six tons of slips have been put away. This means 6,000,000 words.

But only 1,000,000 will be printed. The amount of work necessary to Because Gallio prided himself on his supreme disregard of human lifethough he never extended the theory beyond his own-he naturally rode 40 miles to the mission with a tiny brown baby on his saddlebow.

"Here is something for you, padri,' said he. "The Kols leave their surplus children to die. Don't see why they shouldn't, but you may rear this one. I picked it up beyond the Berbulda fork. I've a notion that the mother has been following me through the woods

"It is the first of the fold," said Justus, and Lotta caught up the screaming morsel to her bosom and hushed it craftily, while, as a wolf hangs in the field, Matui, who had borne it and, in accordance with the law of her tribe, had exposed it to die, panted wearily and foctsore in the bamboo brake, watching the house with hungry mother eyes. What would the omnipotent assistant collector do? Would the little man in the black coat eat her daughter alive, as Athon Daze said was the custom of all men in black coats? Matui waited among the bamboos through the long night, and in the morning there came forth a fair, white woman, the like of whom Matui had never seen, and in her arms was Matui's daughter, clad in spotless raiment. Lotta knew little of the tongue of the Buria Kol, but when mother calls to mother speech is easy to understand. By the hands stretched timidly to the hem of her gown, by the passionate gutturals and the longing eyes, Lotta understood with whom she had to deal. So Matui took her child again-would be a servant, even a slave, to this wonderful white woman, for her own tribe would recognize her no more. And Lotta wept with her exhaustively after the German fashion, which includes much blowing of the nose.

"First the child, then the mother, and last the man, and to the glory of God all," said Justus the hopeful And the man came, with a bow and arrows, very angry indeed, for there was no one to cook for him.

But the tale of the mission is a long one, and I have no space to show how Justus, forgetful of his injudicious predecessor, grievously smote Moto, the husband of Matui, for his brutality; how Moto was star Med, but, being released from the fear of instant death, took heart and became the faithful ally and first convert of Justus; how the little gathering grew, to the huge disgust of Athon Daze; how the priest of the god of things as they are argued subtilely with the priest of the god of things as they should be and was worsted; how the dues of the temple of Dungara fell away in fowls and fish and honeycomb; hew Lotta lightened the curse of Eve among the women and how Justus did his best to introduce the curse of Adam: how the Buria Kol rebelled at this, saying that their god was an idle god, and how Justus partially overcame their scruples against work and taught them that the black earth was rich in other

All these things belong to the history of many months, and throughout those months the white haired Athon Daze meditated revenge for the tribal neglect of Dungara. With savage cunning he Justus and Lotta fled to the collector almost in tears. "I cannot understand! Yesterday, panted Justus, "they had the Ten Com-alighted on the rocks above their heads Nala, once the pride of the mission, a maiden of 14 summers, good, docile and virtuous-now naked as the dawn and spitting like a wildcat.

"Was it for this!" she raved, hurling her petticoat at Justus. "Was it for this I left my people and Dungara -for the fires of your bad place? Blind ape, little earthworm, dried fish that you are, you said that I should never burn! Oh, Dungara, I burn now! I

He looked across the river to where the converts were still wallowing and wailing in the shallows, and the laughter died out of his eyes, for he saw that the Tubingen mission to the Buria Kol was dead.

Never again, though they hung mournfully round the deserted school for three months, could Lotta or Justus coax back even the most promising of their flock. No; the end of conversion was the fire of the bad place-fire that ran through the limbs and gnawed into the bones. Who dare a second time tempt the anger of Dungara ? Loyal and Subtle.

In its essence the following story found in the Rev. Dr. Newman Hall's autobiography, recalls an instance of flattery in a maid of honor in France, who, being asked by the queen what o'clock it was, answered, "What your majesty pleases."

The royal librarian, Woodward, at Windsor castle was showing the princess royal the large collection of miniatures. As Crowmell turned up she cried out:

"Oh, Mr. Woodward, you cannot like that man!" He replied, "Your royal highness must know that my admiration and loyalty to your royal highness' mother are such that I cannot but reverence the memory of the man to whose struggle for liberty we owe the unspeakable blessedness of possessing such a monarch on a constitutional throne.'
