WEDNESDAY, NOV. 22, 1899.

Bryan and Schley are the latest suggestions for the Democratic presidential ticket.

It's right thoughtful of the soap makers to organize a combine just as the people are getting ready to give all trusts a good lathering.

We commend the Haselden-Sellers method of "shooting off the mouth" to Major Dago Outz as an improvement on the Haselden-Outz plan.

It is now claimed that the Cubans are too illiterate to be capable of self-government, but they seem to have a correct understanding of the meaning of the word independence.

Vice-President Hobart died at his home in New Jersey Tuesday morning. He is the fourth Vice-President to die while in office, and all four of them passed away during the month of November.

The Kentucky election muddle is not improved, and will not be finally settled until Dec. 4, when the election commissioners meet to pass on the contests. Both sides claim a victory for their respective candidates by small pluralities.

In the recent election Ohio cast a majority of 50,000 votes against President McKinley's policy of imperialism. It was denounced by both McLean, the Democratic candidate for Governor, and "Golden Rule" Jones, the Independent candidate, and they received a total vote greater by 50,000 than was cast for the President's candidate.

Editors Clinkscales and Langston are making a magnificent journal of THE ANDERSON INTELLIGENCER. Its news columns would do credit to a city daily. - Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

We can return the compliment paid us by saying that among our exchanges there is no paper that we read with more interest than the old, staunch, reliable Chronicle, whose editorial page alone is worth the subscription price.

We of this generation hardly realize how recently private warfare, in the shape of the duel, has been suppressed. There are people living who remember when men of sensitive honor could with difficulty keep themselves, or be kept, from fighting, whenever they were insulted. Yet the duel has been practically abandoned by the English race, and is little more than a form among other peoples. In England and the United States not even soldiers and sailors fight duels; elsewhere serious duelling is confined to the military class.

It is now said that it was former Mrs. Hazen, now Mrs. Dewey, who made the Admiral promise to have nothing to do with politics, and thus settled the fate of the presidential boom in his name. Being familiar with Washington official life, she told him she knew what sort of criticisms would be passed upon even "the best man in the world" if he were to become a candidate for the presidency, and he replied that he was quite sure that the "dearest woman in the world" knew precisely what she was talking about; and that settled it.

The suggestion that the government may establish an armor plate mill at the next session of Congress in order to become independent of the mammoth concerns which have practiced extortion upon it so long, is enough to start to activity every Southern Congressman in the effort to secure its location in the Southern States. The government has, comparatively speaking, no building or construction interests south of Mason and Dixon's line, but now that there are signs of a reunited country, and as capital is rapidly finding its way into the Southland, the chances are good for us to secure some of Uncle Sam's capital by bestirring ourselves and being on the alert.

The most striking feature of Southern industrial development to-day, as reported by the Manufacturers' Record, are the continued activity in the enlargement of the established cotton mills and the building of new ones. It is especially noticeable that throughout the cotton mill districts of the South the new mills are being built very largely by local capital, and are to be managed by local people. The pre-eminent success of the textile interests of the South has encouraged the increasing investment of local money in new mills, and at the present time nothing else seems to appeal so strongly to the local people as cotton mill investments.

There is one trust under consideration which will convince the people that there are trusts and trusts, and that in some trusts there is much that is good. It is estimated that there are produced in this country every year 250,000,000 tons of cornstalks, practically all of which go to waste, since the few thousand tons used by the present cellulose factories hardly made a hole in the prodigious stalk pile. If all of these cornstalks were made up into the various products in which they can be used, the value thus created would, it is estimated, be in the neighborhood of $900,000,000 per year. It is said to be the purpose of the trust to make a market for this hitherto waste product by building a half dozen or more factories in the great corn belt, and adding to the number of its plants from time to time as the demand for its products increases. Wherever the factories are situated, of course, the farmers of the nearby territory will be much benefited. The price which the stalks will fetch, it is said, will be $3 or $4 a ton, and an average acre, it is claimed, will produce three tons.

We are gratified to observe that the Southern patriotic organizations are making a systematic effort to give the ante-bellum Southern Statesman and the Southern soldier justice in the histories taught in Southern schools. The South, through its Boards of Education, has manifested such an indifferent attitude on this important question that we are charged by the world with being recreant to our honored traditions and the glorious and illustrious achievements of her struggling heroes. The country school teacher, the graded school teacher and the college professor all should unite in a critical analysis of every history taught in their schools and report their criticisms to the Superintendent of Education of their respective counties. There is mental wealth enough in this class of citizens to force a just, fair, and impartial history of the South and her contentions. We recommend that Superintendent Nicholson request the teachers of the County to report to him along this line, and, in so doing, set the pace for other progressive sections.

Together with municipal ownership of its public franchises will come to Anderson the earnestly desired but much ridiculed anti-spit ordinance. The latter is quite ripe for discussion now, and might well be given a trial since it has proven such a desirable reform where it has been in operation. A more disgusting and nauseating sight can hardly be imagined than the sidewalks on some busy days, and now since Dame Fashion decrees shorter walking skirts for her devotees, the ladies, the city authorities must devise some other scheme for sweeping away this nauseating mess from the sidewalks, or else pass an ordinance against the filthy and careless habit. The other question will have to wait certainly until the State Constitution can be amended to permit cities to own public utilities. This question is becoming more heated, and, by the time the Legislature meets, sentiment will have so crystallized that the question of the amendment will have to be referred to the people for settlement. There is a steady, growing demand for lower municipal taxes, and to this end every city in the State should pull together to secure its own franchises upon the expiration of the ones now in force, or in the absence of a Constitutional authority no franchise should be granted for a longer period than four years. We are glad to note such a manifest interest in this question, not only in this State, but in others, and we read in it a sure sign of development and progress.

In Memoriam.

On the quiet Sabbath evening of November 12th, 1899, when the beautiful day was just merging into night, there passed into eternal rest the soul of our dear father, Benjamin Curtis Hard, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. He had been confined to his room and bed for nearly a year, and during that long season of suffering, which, at times, was intense, he never complained, but exhibited all through his sickness a degree of patience and resignation that was truly wonderful, and when like one utterly exhausted and wearied by constant pain, the end came, he calmly and peacefully passed into the heaven of rest, to be forever with his Lord.

The writer has been intimately associated with him for more than fifteen years, and during that time he has had the opportunity of studying closely the character of this good, unpretentious father in Israel. Dr. Samuel Lander, who conducted the funeral exercises, spoke of him as a Christian Southern Gentleman, in the fullest sense of the term. He was generous in gifts, tho' his means were limited, as well as in expression. No one ever appealed to him, so far as we have known, in vain. It may be customary to eulogize the dead, but in placing this little tribute of affection on the life of an honored Christian friend it is not intended as any formal expression of sentiment, but as an evidence of esteem and regard held for him by the writer and many others, who have suffered a loss in his death. He had a large family connection, and all through this life he was a constant and an ever-present reminder to his native city, and some years afterwards moved his family to Williamston, S. C., and purchasing a farm near that town, settled there, where he resided until he was called home. He was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South; he loved his Church, and tried to do his duty.

Brookside, (the name of the place) has sustained an irreparable loss. Every spot around the old homestead is dearly associated with him, and all about one can see evidences of his busy life. The writer always enjoyed being with him, and in studying his character, he strengthened his own. I could say more, but words cannot express the value of such a life, which must make its influence deeply felt on other lives and "He being dead yet speaketh." After a long earthly pilgrimage, rest time came, and, like a tired child, he fell asleep, and loving hands placed him by the side of his dear companion in the cemetery at Williamston.

Rest, Christian warrior,
Thy work's well done,
And now with the faithful
Thy reward has begun.

No pain nor sorrow,
No trials to share,
But safe with your Saviour,
In the home "over there."

Election of Officers.

Dickson; Vice-President, Cadet R. L. Sanders; Secretary and Treasurer, J. L. Sanders; Chaplain, Cadet J. B. Felton; Librarian, Cadet W. L. Alston; Censor and Critic, Cadet J. W. Martin. CADET.

St. Mary's Episcopal church at Colestown, the oldest in New Jersey, has been destroyed by fire. It was built in 1676 and was of great historic interest because of its age. The fire is supposed to be incendiary.

Crooked as a ram's horn, our house was! Straight as an arrow, that's what it is now! And straight as a woodpecker ever flew to his hole, we want you to come.

Yes, after two months of hard work, and push and rush we are at last in our new quarters, straight for business. For more than a month we have done our best, hauling in our goods during the day and marking them up at night, till now our big store in Barton Building, No. 36, Granite Row, is full to overflowing with such an assortment and such values as it has never been our pleasure to show you before. Always adding new lines, and this time we have more new things than ever before.

We have 420 pairs of odd pants, mostly fine goods, manufacturers' surplus stock bought at less than cost to make, and will sell you at a little the rise of half value—some at exactly half. Does your foot need protection? Then see what inducements we offer. We have determined to make the name Shoe carry with it a thought of our store. Are you satisfied to buy your Shoes at cost and +10 per cent. profit, or would you rather pay some one else 25 per cent. profit.

No we won't either, for we have some trunks to tell you about. A solid car load—the only car load of trunks you ever saw—in fact, the only solid car load ever shipped to this man's town.

Now, what are we going to do about it? We can't retail no car load of trunks at a profit on this market. So we are just going to cut loose and retail Trunks at wholesale prices till we cut the car half in two. Doubt it, you say? Well, that's no surprise to us. But will show you the price list or even our bills for the goods. Now, what do you say. But how do we pay the freight? Well, we get a cash discount, which a little more than balances that off. Now come on and do your shooting. Yours always truly,
