WEDNESDAY, JAN. 31, 1900.

The call issued by Chairman Butler, of the National Populist Executive Committee, for a meeting at Lincoln, Nebraska, indicates the millennial dawn in politics—the office seeking the man.

Legislator, Columbia, S. C.: Yes, sell the State farms and hire the convicts to the Counties. Fifty dollars net per annum is better than twenty realized last year as per Supt. Griffith's report.

The child labor bill died of premature and complicated labor. Labor and capital are on excellent terms in the South and need no sympathetic busy-bodies to lecture one on its duty to the other.

The fatality attending all caucused measures seems likely to envelop the Mayfield substitute for the Graydon dispensary bill. Bushwhacking as a success, is better practiced by our friends, the Filipinos.

Old man Billy Chandler, of New Hampshire, would be more than obliged for half a chance to wave a few bloody shirts around in Congress at this dull season. He's got the gore, but the South is making the shirts and paying no attention to her calumniators.

The Spartanburg Daily Herald has gotten out an industrial art edition that reflects great credit on the enterprise of the publishers. It is profuse-ly illustrated and descriptive, and contains short biographies of many of the leading citizens of Spartanburg. The money invested in such editions is money well spent.

Jeter C. Pritchard, the Senatorial featherweight from North Carolina, is receiving some very flattering and gratuitous advertising by reason of his silly vapors on the proposed constitutional amendment to suffrage in that State. When Jeter sets his head on getting his name in print, he never scruples at the means.

The Senate acted wisely in killing the compulsory education bill. We do not want to give the negro any more "book-larnin'" than is necessary to fit him for industrial training. Compulsory education doesn't provide training for the hand nor the heart, hence it will never succeed in the South. Train the negro to work at some trade and you do him a service; teach him grammar and rhetoric and somebody will have to kill him or he'll serve his apprenticeship on the chain gang.

It is a source of gratification to his constituents to note the good work being accomplished in the General Assembly by our able Representative, Hon. Geo. E. Prince. Already his influence is an unknown quantity, which must first be reckoned on when issues of moment are to be considered. His strong conservatism and convincing logic make a powerful combination; nor is he slow to get the ear of his colleagues when he has anything to say. The mantle of the lamented Murray has at last fallen on broad and graceful shoulders.

We congratulate Receiver Beattie, of the Blue Ridge Railroad, upon his new and improved schedule now in operation between this point and Walhalla. The earnest and determined efforts of Anderson's business men for some weeks past to get some improvement in our antiquated railway facilities has been generously met by the Blue Ridge people by a very convenient and pleasant schedule entailing upon them much extra cost. Anderson's duty now is to evidence her appreciation of the Blue Ridge's efforts by helping the schedule to pay and rendering it a permanent commercial necessity. Remember the Blue Ridge when routing shipments.

The difference between $80,000 and $100,000 and $34,938, the latter sum being the amount of phosphate royalties reported collected by the phosphate commission, is not a small item. The former figures are the amounts the State should have received as royalty under the resolution of the commission in 1897 fixing the rate at 25 cents a ton together with 50 per cent. of any price in excess of $3.00 per ton. The State having mined 121,073 tons of phosphate rock, should receive as royalty therefor at $4 to $5 per ton $80,000 to $100,000. The question is whether the phosphate commission is giving away annually $10,000 to $20,000 to the fertilizer people. If such is not the case, where is the $30,000 to $50,000? The State pauses for a reply.

The reduction of the privilege tax on fertilizers was a righteous move, for, viewed from any standpoint, it was paid exclusively by the farming class, while the beneficiary of the tax, Clemson College, is not an institution attended solely by farmers' sons. This mode of taxation is too nearly an approach to class legislation to be just and equitable; besides, the tax raised by the old rate gave the College such a surplus that it would be richly productive of rank extravagance were it to continue. We think the rate still too high, inasmuch as the Act only contemplated the raising of such a sum as would defray the expenses of analysis. In taking this position we are merely registering our disapproval of any kind of class legislation, and our conviction that all State educational institutions should be provided for by a general levy, and provided for well at that.

There can be nothing improper in the proposition, and much good might be accomplished by it, and that is in the interest of the public library to solicit a contribution from Mr. Andrew Carnegie who has contributed to more like institutions than any other man living. His conditions may require the building by the city of a suitable library building; but if he should so require, Anderson stands ready to build it, and a handsome one at that, if he can be induced to make as handsome a contribution as he has made to other cities not a great deal larger than Anderson. Personal appeals are most effective, but as a tentative procedure, we would recommend to the Library Association the wisdom of addressing him on the subject, and for further action as to a personal appeal be governed by the nature of his reply. This is an opportunity which we should grasp and with proper manipulation receive a magnificent reward. Let's have a Carnegie Library.

Jim Orr! Does Mr. Blaise, a Representative in the General Assembly of one of the best Counties of the State, not know who Jim Orr is? In what was evidently intended to be a highly dramatic performance in one of his habitual harangues against Cotton Mills last Saturday this traitor student of Gamaliel tore his hair, kicked over a table, backed his ears and brayed in deep, resonating tones, "Who is Jim Orr?" Upon the humiliating confession of ignorance of the history of such a citizen, statesman, jurist, and financier as Colonel James L. Orr, we accept the tacit argument of Mr. Blaise that he himself is a stranger in these parts, and if such brains or settlements as his will bear enlightenment, we answer that Colonel James L. Orr is first of all a gentleman—of brains, principle, honor; a man with more sense in a minute than a stable full of Blaise's calibre in a year; a man of courage, whose honest convictions and not selfish ends or political preferment regulate and determine his actions. His utterances emanate from the mind of a student—a scholar, if you please—and not from an animated puppet. If he espouse a cause it is from conviction and not for reward. If he assume to be a leader, he is a wise and faithful general, bold, intrepid in the face of danger, not a howling, braying ass "a seein' things at night." His home is in the hearts of the people; there his name as a hero of 1875 as well as of 1900 will be implanted when such effervescent bubbles as Mr. Blaise will be lost forever on the rolling tide of memory.

A well conducted business men's association, board of trade, improvement club, or an organization under any other name, having for its object the forwarding of the interests of the place in which it is located, is a great factor in pushing the claims of the town to the front and making it boom. Every town has a large amount of latent enterprise lying dormant, awaiting the opportunity for exercise. There are also many desirable business and manufacturing enterprises seeking locations which would be warmly welcomed and substantially encouraged if some medium were provided through which the citizens and those seeking investments could confer and negotiate. The phenomenal progress of all the "magic cities" of the South and West is mainly due to the efforts of these organizations. Let Anderson have a well supported business men's association, composed of wide awake, go ahead, progressive citizens, who will make known to the world the inducements our town offers for the location of manufacturing industries, and other enterprises which will employ labor, make business for our merchants and furnish a home market for the products of our farms. The time is now ripe for this movement. A great change is being wrought in manufacturing circles. The exigencies of competition and the conflicts with the question of transportation and other economic questions have convinced owners of manufacturing plants that it will be good business policy to establish themselves in communities convenient to the raw materials in the smaller cities and towns, where real estate is cheap and expenses low. Anderson has done very well the past few years, but with a live organization she can do more in the future.

The recent loss by farmers of this County of several bales of cotton by stealing and their inability to give such a satisfactory description of the cotton as to enable one to identify it, is an object lesson forcibly teaching the pressing need for a more accurate and detailed record of the crop. Equally as strong arguments can be urged on the line of keeping track of lien cotton and to aid in its identification. The provision could well be made in an amendment to the present law requiring the buyer to keep a detailed record of each bale, by requiring the ginner, also, to keep such a public record, and to brand the producer's name and the ginner's private mark and number on each bale. Each ginner should be licensed by the Clerk of the Court, and a private mark assigned him for his exclusive use. He should be required to make sworn monthly reports of the number of bales ginned by him, which compiled report is to be forwarded to the proper State officer. We have been handling this cotton traffic in a most bunglesome manner heretofore, and much loss has been entailed on planters and traders as well thereby. So long as cotton is king, and so long as the lien law remains on the Statute books, so long will cotton be the basis of credit in this country. This being true, we can not guard the integrity of that credit too zealously, but should hedge it about with every condition which can impart strength to it and make it gilt edge as far as it goes. Such an arrangement, if followed by all the cotton raising States, would, in addition, give accurate statistics regarding the status of the crop and incidentally rob Mr. Neill of a fat head job. The amount of money official figures would save the South over Neill's unscrupulous manipulation of estimates would well compensate for the added expense incident thereto. We commend the views herein to the very thoughtful consideration of the Legislature, and more especially to our own delegation in that body, with the suggestion that the subject receive the attention it merits at this session of the General Assembly.

ALL we ask is a comparison of prices, and we feel sure your good judgment will instruct you to buy from us. Now is the time to buy FLOUR—the only thing which has not advanced. We have by far the largest stock we have ever carried, and a little money at present prices will buy a lot of Flour. ACID PHOSPHATE and GUANOS.

Every one knows how much they have advanced. Well, we placed our orders last Fall for these goods, and are in a position to save you money on them. Wishing all our friends and customers a happy and prosperous New Year, we are Yours truly,

(NEXT TO POST OFFICE.)

Farewell Old Year and Howdydo to the New.

Have you turned your back on the old year, the happy sweet old year of 1899? Have you forgotten her smiles and her joys, her hopes and her sweet promises? Have you forgotten with what care and with what pride you nursed and petted her—when the latest young thing—in years? You made her many promises, some of which you kept, but now you have turned your back on her. And so have we. We are making all our promises to the year 1900. We look to her for a harvest of pleasure and an increased business. But can we do more than the old year gave us? To this we say, watch and see. We would remind you that we are not a firm that retrogrades. Our motto is the other way. The young blood that stirs our enthusiasm ever and anon does not allow a backward step or even a halt.

"Onward and upward" is inscribed on our hammers. "Push" is our watch word. "We underbuy, we undersell," is our pass word, and "Down with competition," is our battle cry. We ask you to join hands with us in our New Year resolutions—the more hands the bigger the circle.

Trunks and Valises we handle in car lots, and make wholesale prices on them to the retail trade. Why pay higher prices when you know where we are. One gallon Glass Oil Can at 20c each, Brass Hand Lamps 10c, Stand Lamp, 14-inch high, 18c. Bowls and Pitchers at 50c set. A big white Chamber for 25c.
