A Citizen of Anderson County Visits Hartwell.

The Hartwell Ga. Son of the 20th ult. says: "Mr. George Schrup, a clever citizen of Anderson County S. C., dropped in to see us Tuesday. It had been over a quarter of a century since we had seen him, but we knew him instantly. Mr. Schrup had come south from western Maryland a few years before the war. His sympathies were with Dixie, and he became a Confederate soldier. At the second battle of Manassas he received a severe wound, and carried the ball in his person for many years after the war, when it was finally removed by a distinguished but skillful surgeon in London, and he now carries it in his pocket. A Confederate veteran, he was found in the same battle of Manassas was killed, fighting gallantly for the second time. About 1870, he came to Mr. Schrup's place in Hartwell. It was then he had a fine place in the road, and now he has the largest place in the county. He has the minds of a philosopher on the war, by the way, is of Pennsylvania Dutch extraction, and can talk German like a native. Shortly after he came to Anderson he went into a store kept by a German Jew to make some purchases. The proprietor, not knowing him, told the clerk in German not to let him have the goods on credit. Right there is where he made a mistake, for George heard and understood him and gave him a tongue lashing that was very much "feutonic" for his appreciation, and going into the next door bought about $50 worth of goods, for which he paid the cash, and the Hebrew merchant—by goshus, he was madder as a vet hen."

Don't Throw Away Your Roots and Bulbs.

Among the interesting lines of work placed upon at the meeting of the W. C. T. U. yesterday afternoon at Miss Hubbard's was one in which we need the assistance of our outside friends. This: Instead of throwing into the street to be trampled under foot the surplus roots and bulbs found in the flower yards of our city at their Spring cleaning, we wish the ladies to send them to Mrs. Blackley, Mrs. Von Hassel, or Mrs. B. F. Wilson, as is most convenient. We invite any persons who have the means or the inclination to buy flowers, to call on these ladies for them. This is the modest beginning of a Village Improvement Department, which, we trust, in time will secure to every cottage of our city, a flowering and alluring, and beautifying, beautifying influence of flowers.
