It's good to wander back again
Among the old home folks;
It rather catisfies a man
To hear the same old jokes,
To hear somebody say, "I knew
You when you were a kid,"
But some one always tells you of
The foolish things you did.

Your heart beats lighter, as it did In long forgotten days,
When at some well remembered spot
Reflectively you gase,
But it seems queer that all your good
And noble deeds are hid
And people only call to mind
The foolish things you did.

They telk of others who've gone out Inte some foreign lend, They tell of things these other folks Have done, and they seem grand, But when it comes to talk of you Their minds cannot be rid Of the belief you'd like to hear The foolish things you did.

You know you've done a thing or two Which show you've got some sense, But every time they talk of you They're certain to commence With tales of "What a fool you were With tales of "What a foot you were
When you lived here—a kid;"
They have forgotten all except
The foolish things you did,
—Baltimore American.

A Tale of Shakertown, Hy. BY ARTHUR PENDENNIS ST. JOHN.

Comononomonomonomonomonomono

The wind rose early that October morning and came over the meadows, shaking showers of red leaves from the elms. Little Sister Cynthia came out to me to the dairy with her Shaker bonnet pushed off her glossy hair, rustling the heaps of leaves as she walked and stopping to listen at the sound as if she liked it.

"What are you doing, child?" I asked, for of late I had come to fear for her, she was so young and so taken up with noticing ordinary things, like the catbirds that had a nest out by the spring, or the way the hills looked when they were spotted all over with shadows. My heart ached sometimes when she would turn her great shining eyes to me. She was sanctified, I knew, but it didn't seem safe for simple Shaker folk to be seeing something out of the ordinary in everyday things.
"What am I doing, Sister Caroline?
Why, just listening," she said.

"I don't see much sense listening to a lot of dead leaves rustling," I answered. "I always feel gloomy and uncomfortable until they're raked up and set "That's the reason I like it," she said, "because it sounds solemn." "You'll find enough solemn things in this world without hunting up dead leaves," I answered. "You are likely to hear a solemner and awfuller sound before long."

"What do you mean?" she asked. "They are getting ready to fight," said, pointing over the hills. "Brother Paul has just told me that there is go ing to be a great battle. They will maim and murder each other." "How terrible!" she said, her lips "Why do men do such quivering.

Before I could answer her there came the clatter of horses, and a party of soldiers rode by, with young

Henry Pendleton at their head. pity he was born into wickedness to be

"He doesn't look wicked," she said as the young officer waved his cap

"Nay, Cynthia," I returned, my fear coming back; "think not of man's looks. It does not become a child of the church.' "Why, I never think of him, Sister Caroline," she said seriously. "I never saw him but once or twice, when he came over to the village for Brother

Paul. I can't even remember what he is like except his voice when he laughs and his brown, curly hair." "Ah, my child," I answered, "remem ber that love is just and leadeth to damnation! Do not iet the thought enter your heart." "Ob, Bister Caroline," she said, with a shudder, "you know I could sooner bring myself to do murder than to yield to the awful lust you have told me of!" And she covered her eyes, as if that could shut out the thought. Cynthia was molding the little butter pats and printing them, when the battle began. We could hear the sound of the cappon like faroff thunder over the bills. At first the peals were few and far between; then they grew faster until in the middle of the afternoon. when it was an angry roar, sullen like a storm in August. The men were plowing in the fields, and I could see them stop at the furrow's end to speak to each other. We women tried to go about our tasks, but generally met together to shake our heads over the wicked men who were shooting and murdering. Cynthia seemed to feel it more than all of us and when the roar grew louder shuddered as one with a

The sun went down in a smoky haze, all red and bloody. Then there was a pause, the very wind stopped still, and suddenly a long, deep call ran off to the south, louder and flercer than the rest. Then all grew still, and the darkner came on swiftly. Cynthia was sitting with me, and when we heard no more she breathed a high of relief and said, "At last." As she went to get the can-dles a solitary hosseman clattered at daybroak there were the tramp of many soldiers and the clank of arms in our peaceful village. We left our break-fast half eaten curselves to give them food and drink. I would have Uynthia, for some were rough men, wild eyed and smoke begrimed, but all came out with the rest and even wall without qualling among the wagons where the wounded lay grouning.

With these rode Brother Paul, looking haggard, as one who had not alept.

He stopped a wagon in front of Center House and bade me make his room ready for his friend, Henry Pendleton. "How?" I exclaimed in sudden dismay "I's he has " ers he burtr "Yea; shot through the breast," he

Cynthia paled as one suddenly dizzy, and I, too, felt sick at heart.

"Isn't it horrible, Sister Caroline?"
she said as we went in to fix the bed.
Then with her usual thoughtfulness joined me in caring for the hungry soldiers. The young man slept when the doctors left him, and, sitting there with her sewing, she looked up from time to time at his pale face. Her tender heart was touched as she watched him lying there wounded unto death.

"So young," she thought, "and so sorely wounded. Yea, and I will pray for him." And she went down on her knees by the bed—her own bed—all her guileless heart going out in a plea for mercy. Then the young soldier opened his eyes and, dazed with sleep, thought the kneeling figure his sister.
"So you have come, Alice?" he said.

putting his arm around her neck. "Nay!" she exclaimed, starting up in affright. "It is I, Sister Cynthia."

When I went in the next afternoon. he was lying with his eyes closed, smiling to himself sometimes as one in a reverie. Cynthia was bending over her sewing and did not look up when he greeted me. God forgive me for it, but I could never look on Henry Pendleton without wishing he had been born my son. There was a taking way about everything that he did: just the way he wished you good morning was enough to put you in a good humor all day.

We had so many wounded soldlers left with us that I could not let Cyntida be long out, but she came back even before I finished a little sewing. "Sister Cynthia," he said as she entered, "I am going to ask you to do me a little favor. I want you to write a letter to my mother for me." "Yea," she said, half breathless from her walking. It was a brave letter, making light of his wound and full of cheery plans for getting a leave of absence. I listened to his comforting love words as he urged her not to come back into the enemy's country, where it was dangerous. It sounded new and strange to me, too, and I did not wonder that Cynthia's hand shook. Poor lad, how pale he looked as he lay there! I could not help smoothing his pillow as I went out. Cynthia came down after awhile to mail his letter, and hunted me out. "Sister Caroline," she said seriously, "did you ever see my mother?"

"No, child," I answered, a little hurt, for had I not been a mother to her these 20 years, and loved her more than if I had begotten her in iniquity? She turned away a few steps and then came back.

"Sister Caroline," she said, "you have been a mother to me, and I haven't loved you half enough." And she put her arms around my neck and kissed me. I suppose I was a foolish old woman to fold her in my arms and weep over her as I did.

She went back up stairs to the wounded man, but Brother Paul had come in and was talking to his friend. Cynthia walked slowly on to my room. "Paul," she heard him say. "play for me; I am sad lying here." I dld not know then that music was the tie of friendship between them. I had never seen the violin, for Brother Paul bad played in secret the beautiful but ungodly songs, and as for Cynthia she had heard only the little organ in the meeting house that Paul said was cracked, and, poor child, it was no wonder that she fell now under the dered his own berth for the night to spell of that ungodly music and heard things she had never dreamed of. It was like getting glimpses into a new world, where all the beautiful things were you had ever heard or seen. But there was pain mixed with the pleasure, and it gave you a sort of yearning as he changed to a song to somebody he called Annie Laurie. I am an old woman and hate ungodly music, but I stood there with one foot on the step and listened like one in a spell. How much more it must have meant to Cynthia! It isn't strange the idea came to her that in some way she had missed something in life, a beautiful and spiritual something altogether desirable. She sat there with her eyes fixed on one cloud that was golden still in the gray twilight and prayed to God for the unknown something. So I found her when I came to see why she was late to supper—Cynthia, who was ever prompt in the least of her duties.

The next afternoon we were in the workroom down stairs when I heard Brother Paul's step. Cynthia looked up at the door twice, then, after he was outside, got up suddenly and ran after him. I wondered much, for among us men and women have no needless communication with each other. I heard her call his name, and he was just at the window when she came up, breath-

"Brother Paul," she said, "do you know-Annie Laurie?" "Yea," he said, turning quickly. "Why?"

"Is she very beautiful?"
"Yea," he said, "very." And I could see a curious smile on his lips and a light in his eyes. I did not notice that Cynthia caught her breath quickly. I was so taken up with the thought that Brother Paul was in danger of that strange woman. "You haven't told me why you asked." he went on.

Then Cynthia's eyes fell, and she stammered something and came back into the house before he could answer. He looked after her as if he would follow and tell her more, but instead turned and walked of rapidly.

As I was solve up stairs the next morning i stopped on the landing to est, for I was spent with much watch-

"Sister Cynthia," I heard the young soldier say, "I must ask you to writed hoping to gain strength mysel?, but"— He stopped, and I noticed that his voice was weaker.

"Yes, certainly," she said, and I seard her getting the paper. "I am easily," she added after a pause. "Is "No," he answered and grew slient.

"There is such a thing as pure love," he said presently. "A man can care for a woman for herself, for the soul of her; he can work for her, suffer for her, die for her, if need be. How can this pure feeling be confounded with that foul thing lust? Don't you see what I mean?"

"Yea," she said softly. "And I am not asking you to do her who wrote and spoke as though he were face to face with the other one; his voice grew full and round again, and the tones of it made me tremble as I sat there on the steps. When he came to close and say goodby, I could not bear it and stole softly back down stairs.

her lashes were still wet with tears. that, thickening, hung drearily above the empty world, where the wind blusbleak meadows with her eyes bent to the ground.

He grew restless and feverish through last, just as the gray day was slipping off over the hills. I went to my own room for awhile, and soon I heard the bed, and presently I heard her speaking in a low voice.

I was glad she didn't say love. "Yes," said Brother Paul, with a sudden anxiety in his deep voice.

"He wanted you to know that hislove was pure; that love can be pure." trembling. "You"- She stopped suddenly.

"Yes." He paused and then was interrupted.

ringing again, "my dear Louise, I knew you would come." His hand was outstretched, and Cynthia took it without hesitation. Hurrying in, I could see the peaceful look on his face as she bent over him.

"It hurts me to breathe, Louise," he said presently. "Lift me up, won't you?

"I am going now, Louise," he said, and, raising his arm, he brought her head down until her lips touched his. His breath came deep and peaceful, and then Cynthia unclasped his arm and laid him back on the pillow dead; but a new light shone in her face. The unknown something had come, and she knew it.-Louisville Courier-Journal.

Sir William Harcourt once visited a man-of-war lying off the Hampshire coast. After dinner, the weather proving rather rough, the captain, a small, dapper man, suggested that Sir William should sleep on board and surrenthe ex-chancellor of the exchequer.

Next morning the captain's sailor servant, who knew nothing of the change of berths, brought a cup of coffee to the cabin door and knocked once or twice without receiving an answer. Somewhat alarmed, he opened the cabin door and asked:

"Don't you want your coffee this morning, sir?" The only reply was a growl, and the frightened sailor saw a gigantic figure turn over under the bedclothes. Dropping the coffee, he rushed to the ship's surgeon, exclaiming:

"For goodness' sake, sir, come to the captain! He's speechless and swollen to ten times his natural size!"-London Tit-Bits.

Ruskin and Plevna.

George Trevelyan mentioned. that once, when walking with a lady, he had met Ruskin, and, in the hope that the latter might say something characteristic, he addressed the great man, asking if he bad heard the news.

"What news?" was the reply. "Plevna has fallen." "Plevna? I never heard of it. I know nothing later than the fourteenth century."-Grant-Duff's "Notes From a Diary." Youthful Diplomacy.

The grocery man on the corner re-lates that a couple of days ago a little girl entered his emporium and, timidly laying down a dime, asked for 10 cents' worth of candy.

"It's for papa," she said. "I want to s'prise him when he comes home." The grocery man proceeded to dig out some of his stock when the little girl interposed. "Don't give me that kind. Give me caramels. I just love caramels!" "But I thought those were for papa," the grocery man remarked.

"I know," explained the little girl, "but when I give them to papa he'll just kiss me and say that 'cause I'm such a generous little girl he'll give them all back to me. So you'd better give me caramels."—Memphis Scimi-

Hang Them Up. At an inquest which was held recent-ly on the body of a child who had been found standing in front of the fire with his clothing in flames the coroner said o nad often remarked that the only way of keeping children out of mis-chief was to chain them up, but then they would probably hang themselves with the chain.

The Chinese have a capital plan. They put their children in sacks with holes for the head and arms and hang them up. It must be a comical sight to go into a house where there is a large family and see all the children hanging up on the wall London

Continuous Perference.

Diggs-Poor Macker, after his wife died he married her dressmaker. Blggs-Thought to get rid of her bills, I suppose?
Diggs—Yes, but the plan didn't work.
He's still paying them, and they are

WAITING FOR DEATH.

THESE FOLKS ALWAYS KEEP THEIR BURIAL CLOTHES READY.

Some of the Odd Customs That Are Adhered to Among the Old German Farmer Families In the Eastera Part of Pennsylvania.

The burial of an old lady at Klein feltersville, not long ago, with her 63-year-old black wedding gown for a hroud, brings to notice a queer east Pennsylvania custom which prevails among German farmers. Nearly all the people, old and young, have their shrouds and graveclothes all ready when death comes. The old people especially have all arrangements for their funerals made and written out in all details. Indeed it is a common thing to find a special bureau drawer set apart for the graveclothes. One custom is to keep every vestige of the wedding outfit for the interment apparel. Gown and undergarments are in many cases worn but once by the bride, and then laid away to wait for her death. Gray silk is much in vogue for wedding gowns, as the color is preferred for burlal robes to white or black.

Where wedding gowns are not saved the women folks make their own shrouds, cutting them out, sewing and trimming them. To borrow a shroud pattern is nothing unusual. It passes from farmhouse to farmhouse. Long winter evenings are taken up with getting graveclothes ready, so that when a person dies all the friends need to do is to open the death drawer and there find written instructions as to the place of burial, the kind of grave and coffin, the same of the minister who is to officiate, the text of the sermon, the three hymns to be sung, the pallbearers, the gravestone and its inscription and all about the graveclothes.

This fashion makes it very easy for the friends to decide on the funeral arrangements. Some old farmers go so far as to state exactly what calf and how many chickens shall be killed for the funeral dinner and who is to be hired to take care of teams and feed the horses of the visitors.

Not only do the elderly women provide a grave or death drawer, but young wives and young girls do the same thing. They begin early in life to accumulate their death trousseau. Sometimes elaborately trimmed garments, stocks and slippers are carefully wrapped in oil paper and stowed away. At times some of the white garments have become yellow with age. Silk wedding gowns, if they lie in folds, are very apt to go to pieces, and for this reason such gowns are placed in bags and hung up on the wall.

On rainy Sunday afternoons many a housewife on the Pennsylvania German farm spends an hour or so looking through her death drawer to see that nothing has been left unprovided for. If she attends a funeral and sees something new in the shape of a collar, piece of lace, handkerchief, elderdown blanket, embroidery or anything else that may strike her fancy, she'll buy it on her first visit to town and put it in her death drawer. Where a young wife is specially fond of a certain perfume, she'll buy a small bottle, the contents of which will be used when she is buried.

The old folks will frequently make out a list of small articles they want prayer book or Testament, spectacles or a thimble. One most unusual request was that a plate, cup and saucer, knife, fork and spoon should be placed in an old woman's coffin. She had used them for 70 years and did not wish any one else to use them when she was gone. This, like all other requests found in the death drawers, was

Some old people invariably direct that their old house dog shall be shot and buried after the funeral. It is nothing unusual to find a written request that a certain person shall sing a special solo at the funeral, either at the grave or during the taking of the final leave of the remains. Some request that their face shall be well covered before the coffin lid is screwed on for the last time. Others do not want this.

The death drawers are always kept locked, but the family know where the key is found. Each drawer is regarded as sacred, and no one save the owner, for any consideration, would venture to open it. The men folks occasionally have death repositories, but they are not so careful as the women are. The old men have their wills and final instructions very carefully written out, so that no mistake can be made.—Cor. Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Sickness Comes High. Sichness comes high, as is proved by German records in regard to sick insurance, which is compulsory upon workingmen. Nearly 8,000,000 persons in that country insure against sickness, and in one year a third of this number reported sickness of some kind or other, the average duration of sickness being 17 days. Reckoning wages at 50 cents a day, this means a loss in wages alone in one year of more than $22,500,000. Then, of course, there always is extra expense connected with sickness, such as doctors' bills, medicine, special food and sometimes special care and maintenance. These records do not relate to infants or to the old and infirm, but only to working persons during the working period.

Shoes of Horses.

A celebrated veterinary surgeon de clares that nine out of ten of our worn out horses are only worn out in feet or in legs, because of some foot disease, and that all but a fraction of that num ber owe their premature age and incapacity to our system of shoeing, not merely bad shoeing, but the iron or steel shoe.

-The greatest number of people ever killed by an earthquake since the dawn of history was 190,000. The date of the terrible disaster was 1703. and the scene of the most violent disturbance was at Yeddo, Japan, and

AE FOND KISS BEFORE WE PART.

Ae fond kise, and then we sever Ae fond kiss, and then we sever:
Ae fareweel, alas, forever!
Deep in heart wrung tears I'll pledge thee,
Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee,
Wao shall say that fortune grieves him
While the star of hope she leaves him?
Me nae cheerfu' twinkle light me;
Dark despair around benights me.

Never met or never parted, We had ne'er been broken hearted.

Fare thee weel, thou first and fairest!
Fare thee weel, thou best and dearest!
Thine be ilka joy and treasure,
Peace, enjoyment, love and pleasure!
As fond kiss, and then we sever;
As fareweel, alas, forever!
Deep in heart wrung tears I'll pledge thee!
Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee!
—Robert Burns.

FAMOUS DUELING GROUND.

One of the most picturesque and beautiful spots in New Orleans and replete with historical incidents is the Oaks, the Chenes d'Allard, as they were called of old. They are now part of the City park and a favorite resort for the children of the creole quarters, dozens of swings being attached to the massive live oaks, which shade several acres of ground.

The land was formerly the plantation of Louis Allard, a very learned French man of early New Orleans. It was bought by the great philanthropist, John McDonough, and finally passed into the hands of the city and was dedicated as a park. Its most eventful history was in advance of its park days, when it was practically waste land. Lying as it did on the shell road to Bayou St. John and Lake Pontchartrain, within easy distance of the city, yet deserted and uninhabited, it afforded the very spot for the duels so frequent among the flery creoles and no less flery Americans of New Orleans in antebellum days. Here, under the shade of a primeval forest of gigantic oaks, either with pistol or rapier, more especially the latter, the difficulties between "gentlemen" were fought out under the strictest rules of the code of

At these times New Orleans, al though to a large degree cosmopolitan, was essentially a creole city and bound by the creole habits and ideas, and one of these ideas was that a slight or affront could be wiped out only by blood shed in a duel. The result was to produce the greatest punctillo among men A blow was strictly forbidden and sufficient to debar the striker from the privileges of the duello. A gentleman who would so far forget himself as to strike another was exposed to the ig-nominy of being refused a meeting on the field of honor.

Most of the duels had their origin in the ballroom, where to brush rudely against a man was often deemed sufficlent cause for exchanging cards. Some were political, some the result of breaches of politeness or etiquette. Chevalier Tomasi fought a duel with a native creole over the proposition that there were larger rivers in Europe than the Mississippi, each man being willing to risk his life for his home river. Several duels are reported from mere excess of spirit, because the night was so good for an assaut d'armes. In the winter of 1857-8 the opera proher army of supporters, and to hise his favorite was supposed to justify any creole in handing his card to the offender and demand a meeting at the Oaks.

Most of these meetings were secret, known only to the friends of the principals. It was only when some one was killed or seriously hurt-and not always then-that the facts of the duel became known. The duello continued in Louisiana as more or less a custom of the country until about 20 years ago. An occasional meeting is held even today, but they are growing scarcer, for the police now interfere and arrest duelists, whereas of old they kept out of the way. The oaks are among the finest in the United States, some of them shading nearly an acre of ground, and each oak has a dozen traditions or stories of the duello attached to it, romantic and bloody .- Leslie's Weekly.

Infury Plus Insult.

Mistah Johnsing-Dit niggah Pompey am in trubbel again. Mistah Jones-Sho, now! What am de 'flichshun dis time?

fron safe. robbah.

Mistah Johnsing-Naw! Pomp he didn't dun rob de safe, man! It wah laik dis: Dey wah liftin de safe up in a big buildin wif a rope, an when dey dun got de safe up tuh de top story de rope braked. Dat niggah wah a-standin roun, an de safe dis lit on top his haid-it did-Mistah Jones-Fo' goodness' sake! Mistah Johnsing-Yes, an dat fool Pomp's haid dis nachurly smashed dat safe intuh small pieces. Now dey dun bro't sewt again Pomp fer lolterin .-Obio State Journal.

Rare Books In the Vatican.

The oldest library now in existence is that of the Vatican, and it probably contains more literary treasures then any other. It belongs always to the reigning pope, and only he can give permission to enter. Though there are only 225,000 volumes, they are the rarest in the world. The Vatican library has the only known copy of the New Testament written before the end of the fourth century; the original Dante. the oldest existing copy of Virgii and a Terence which goes back to the fourth century.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. The Kind You Have Always Bought

The fact that God postpones his

- Enjoy what you have, and do not be envious of those who have more life is said to be greater than in any other country on the globe.

miles of new streets added to the city of London, which is now 12 miles across in one direction and 17 in an-- To smile, to bow, to lift the hat, similar ones have accomplished. - Big Girl-My little sister's got a new doll that squeaks when you press it. Little Girl (nose put out of joint by the baby)-My muvver's got a new doll that squeaks whether you press it - The recent sale of four cars of choice unshorn fed Western sheep at Chicago at $6 per 100 pounds meant the highest figure touched since 1993, when 6.75 was paid. The sheep weighed 132 pounds and were sent in from Winona, - On the authority of the greatest manufacturer of dental supplies in the country there are over 40,000 ounces of pure gold worked up annually for dentists' use for material filling teeth, in plates and solders, the value of this gold approximating $1,000,000.

-"Young man," said an old gentleman, "my daughter is too young to marry. A girl of her age cannot be sure of her own mind in a matter of such importance." "I fully realize that," replied the young man, who had just secured the fair young one's consent. "That's why I don't want to able to determine, was in use 2,000 vears before the birth of Christ, and was even then not in its infancy. In the State collection at the British Museum, there is the head of a lion moulded in glass bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the 11th dy-four kittens, all alive and fastened together by skin and cartilage-is attraching much attention at the home of John Finnecy, South Oil City, Pa. The kittens were born a few days ago, but Mr. Finnecy did not discover their peculiar formation until he noticed that the mother cat was neglecting them. When he reached into the box and took up what he supposed was the top kitten to feed it, the whole family came ont like a bunch of grapes. The kittens are rather lively, have strong voices and are apparently well developed, but all are joined together at the abdomen, near the hindquarters, giving their legs free movement. There is no deforplaced in their coffin, such as an old duced an epidemic of duels. The two mity of the heads, bodies legs or feet.

three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under soon. the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last of birth, and suf-fered but a few hard pains. This lini-1/1/2 will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above let ter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering, Mother's I'riend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of tor. a few days.

Mother's Friend

Druggists sell Mother's Friend for $1 a bottle The Bradfield Jugulator Co., Atlanta, Ga. Send for our free Illustrated book.

Bridge Notice.

WILL let to the lowest responsible bidder on Saturday, the 5th day of May heal, at 10 o'clock s.m., the building of a Bridge over Beaverdam Creek, on new road leading from Bradberry's Store by Wooten's Mills, in Fork Township.

abip.

Reserving right to accept or reject any or all bids. Successful bidder will be required to give bond for faithful performance of work.

J. N. VANDIVER,

Co. Supervisor A. C.

MONEY

WE HAVE MONEY TO LEND on Land in this County on easy me valuable City and Country Real Estate for eale, and can lend a reasonable amount on purchase price of same, if desired. SIMPSON & HOOD, Attorneys. April 11, 1900

NOTICE.

ALL persons are hereby warned not to make any paths or roads, cut any timber, commit any depredations of any sort or trespass in any manner or way on my lends in Anderson County. I mean what I say and will prosecute any trospasser to the full extent of the law.

J. E. HORTON. April 18, 1900

"COTTON Culture" the name of a valuable illustrated pamphlet which should be in the hands of every planter who raises Cotton.

Send name and address to book is sent FREE.

GERMAN KALI WORKS, 93 Nassau St., New York.

SPECIAL SALE OF

IANOS AND ORGANS FOR THE NEXT THIRTY DAYS-

C. A. REED

Will sell any of the following High Grade PIANOS and ORGANS at prices as low as can be obtained from the Manufacturers direct :-

KNABE, WEBER. IVERS & POND. CROWN. WHEELOCK. LAKE SIDE and RICHMOND.

Also, THE (ROWN, ESTEY and FARRAND & VOTEY ORGANS. Prospective purchasers will find it to their interest to call and inspect my Stock or write for prices. We also represent the leading makes-Sewing Machines

At Rock Bottom figures. Respectfully, THE C. A. REED MUSIC HOUSE

D. S. VANDIVER. E. P. VANDIVER J. J. MAJOR. ANDIVER BROS. & MAJOR DEALERS IN Fine Buggies, Phaetons, Surreys, Wagons, Harness Lap Robes and Whips, High Grade Fertilizers.

Bagging and Ties. ONE hundred fine new Buggles just received. Come and look through them. They are beauties, and we will treat you right if you need one. Car load "Birdsell" Wagons on handthe best Wagons built. Car White Hickory Wagons to arrive Yours, for vehicles, VANDIVER BROS. & MAJOR. W. G. McGEE.

SURCEON DENTIST. OFFICE—Front Room, over Farmers end Merchants Bank—

ANDERSON, S. C. NOTICE

I have a considerable number of small unpaid Accounts on my books. I am notifying each one of amount due, and unless paid I am going to place them in officer's hand for collection. J. S. FOWLER.

Jan 3, 1900 Notice Final Settlement.

THE undersigned, Executor of the Estate of R. F. Wyatt, deceased, hereby gives notice that he will on the 19th day of May, 1900, apply to the Judge of Probate for Anderson County for a Final Settlement of said Estate, and a discharge from his office as Execu-

J. W. ROSAMOND, Ex'r

Notice of Final Settlement. THE undersigned, Administratrix of Estate of James O. Moore, dec'd, hereby gives notice that she will on the 12th day of May, 1900, apply to the Judge of Probate for Anderson County for a Final Settlement of said Estate, and a discharge from her office as Administratrix. MARY A. MOORE, Adm'x.

April 11, 1900 42 5

April 11, 1900 42 CTATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, ANDERSON COUNTY

Whereas, J. T. Haynie has applied to me to grant him Letters of Administration on the Estate and effects of Sarah E. Haynie, deceased.

These are therefore to cite and admonish all kindred and creditors of the said Sarah E. Haynie, deceased, to be and appear before me in Court of Probate, to be held at Anderson Court House, on the 12th day of May, 1900, after publication hereof, to show cause, if any they have, why the said administration should not be granted.

Given under my hand this 20th day of April, 1900.

By R. Y. H. Nance, Judge of Probate.

April, 1900.

R. Y. H. NANCE, Probate Judge.
April 28, 1900 43

she offered to give up her room to the "YOU DID." "Nay," she said, and her voice soundyoung soldier, for it was larger and ed far away. Ah, why did I not go in then? Why So they carried him in and laid him dld I sit there, a poor, weak, old womon the little bed in Cynthia's room. It was Brother Paul himself, though, an, and listen with tears in my eyes to his beautiful love words, so tender and who left her to nurse his friend and gentle and sad and brave. He forgot

> Cynthia came cown presently, and The next morning was unnaturally still, with bits of tender blue sky between the fleecy mists. Soon a wind blew up, drawing one wide, filmy cloud across the sky-a gray, cold cloud tered through leafless trees. The young soldier was worse. His breathing was slow and heavy, and now and then a faint moan passed his lips. Cynthia sat watching him with the lines drawn tight at her mouth and her big eyes tense. I sent her out, ' ut soon saw her coming back across the the afternoon and talked in broken scraps about his home and the days when he was a boy. He fell asleep at Brother Paul's familiar step. Cynthia motioned him to a seat at the foot of

"There was something he wanted to tell you, Brother Paul," she said. "Perhaps I ought to do it, for he may talk of it in his delirium." She paused. "He cares for somebody-a woman."

"I know it already," he said, his voice about to speak when the young soldier "Louise," he said, his voice clear and Cynthia put her arm under him and lifted him until his head rested on her own bosom. Then he drew a long breath and smiled.

faithfully carried out.

- Albion, Ind., has an economical genius in the person of James Hyde. He makes his own teeth out of hick-

I'll ne'er blame my partial fancy; Naething could resist my Nance; But to see her was to love her, Love but her and love forever. Had we never loved sae kindly, Had we never loved sae blindly, Naver met or never parted, leans Park Known as The Oaks.

Mistah Johnsing-Dey am a man dun bro't sewt again Pomp fer brakin his Mistah Jones--De low down niggah

Bears the Chart H. Thickey

ory wood and holds them in place settlements with men is no sign that with a wooden handle. He is able to he means to let these settlements go eat the toughest meats.

than you have.

- In Norway the average length of

- It is said that every year sees 20 to beg pardon, to say "thank you," cost nothing. No one will ever know the vast good that these words and

- Glass, as far as research has been

- A remarkable freak of nature-

A Wife Says:

child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours ment is the grandest remedy ever made."