Death of Mr. A. P. Hubbard.

Mr. A. P. Hubbard is dead, and in his death Anderson loses one of her best citizens. He had been in feeble health for several months, and a few weeks ago his disease developed into inflammation of bowels, which prostrated him on his bed. Since then he has been gradually growing weaker, and at times was a great sufferer. peath came last Saturday night and relieved him of his sufferings. Mr. Hubbard was in the 59th year of his age, and was born and reared in Pendleton. A few years preceding the war his mother and family moved to this city, and here he has ever summer and his home. Though all the same she liked his pleasant manners and compliments.
All no doubt have heard the story of the lady whose throat was swollen so the doctors said she must die because the could not swallow anything. In All no doubt have heard the story of the lady whose throat was swollen so the doctors said she must die because she could not swallow anything. In her hearing the husband asked, "Have you tried her with a compliment?" The absurdity of the question amused her so that she laughed convulsively, which broke the abscess in her throat and she recovered. The husband insisted that it was the hint of a compliment that cured her. There is quite a difference between flattery and compliments as all know. The intelligent mind rejects flattery as something gross and unrefined, but even the sterner sex does not he sitate to swallow a delicate compliment and relishes it. Right here I will thank Mr Goodgion for his compliment to the astuteness of the ladics, whom he says "cannot easily be deceived in love or politics." I agree with him that if women had the right of suffrage they would not vote for a candidate whose only qualification was "pleasant manners." But such manners, I think he will admit, helps greatly to win the votes of the poople. A diamond in the rough has the intrinsic value of the diamond cut and polished, but we admire the latter much more.

Southern women are not clamoring for the right of suffrage like our more energetic sisters of the North, neither do I pose as an advocate of it. But I nak for the sake of information if women have education and can organize Missionary Societies, Woman's Clubs, and other societies and carry them on intelligently and profitably, why could they not go under the escort of husband, son or brother to the polls and cast their votes for the man who in their estimation was most worthy of the office? Would it make them less modest than presiding over societies and conventions or standing before a rived audience and lecturing on worthy subjects, as some of our best and noblest women do?

We are of the opinion that the most honorable way for a man to become an office holder is for him to go before the people in a primary election, and if he pleases a majority of the voters he will most "ssuredly become their nominee. We taink some arrangements should be made for the election of Magistrates at the coming primary. There is no fairness in the way they have gotten the office heretofore, and we think it time to make a change. In the past all that was necessary to entitle a man to time to make a change. In the past all that was necessary to entitle a man to the office of Magistrate was for a few of a man's friends to write out a petition and attach their names thereto and forward it to the Governor and he would make the appointment. ### Election of Magistrates.

MR. EDITOR: In your last issue you had an editorial calling attention to the matter of electing the Magistrates of this County at the prinaries. You are certainly right, and in justice to the people the County Executive Committee ought to make arrangements for it. It is being done in other Counties, and there is no good reason why it should not be done here. If the people are competent to select a Governor or United States Senator, why not entrust them with selecting their Magistrates and release our Representatives in the Legislature from what is sometimes an unpleasant duty?
