MOTHER EARTH'S METHOD OF FILL- TWO CIVIL WAR ANECDOTES OF THE ING HER RAPACIOUS MAW.

Great Chunks of the World That May Be Swallowed Up at Any Moment as Others Have Been Before In Our Planet's Pitiless Traps.

When one reads or hears of some sudden and violent alteration in the crust of this planet of ours one instinctively puts it down to something in the way of a volcanic cutburst. In most cases it is so. But not always. Mother Earth has many fashlons of building up what she likes and getting rid of what she is tired of.

one hardly wonders that Indian tribes who frequented the shores of the Columbia river used to worship as the "All Devouring One" a great cliff near the Cascades, which for many years past has bee . steadily advancing upon the river, with the evident intention of blotting out its bed and forming a huge lake above. This will inevitably happen. The mountain, which is 2,000 feet high and eight miles long, has been proved to be moving forward and downward at a rate of one to three feet a year. The rallway track, which runs along its base has to be constantly altered. The reason of this ponderous landslide is that the mountain rests on a layer of soft sandstone, which is steadily giving way.

The village of Sainte Foy de Tarentaise, in eastern France, seems doomed to be ingulfed. The base of the hill on which it stands is being eaten away by the rapid waters of the Isere. The houses, some of them, show cracks rivaling those of our Cheshire Northwich. Some day there will be a "short, sharp shock," and Tarentaise will no longer exist.

Islands go and come so constantly that none but the admiralty keeps count of them. Submarine volcanoes are responsible for most of these disappearances, but others are harder to account for. Metis island, for instance, in the south Pacific, bore no sign of volcanic action about it. It was charted in 1880, its highest point being 150 feet. In 1899 it had gone-vanished utterly without leaving a trace. On the site of another small guano island off the coast of southern California recent soundings showed 50 fathoms of water. Tangier island in Chesapeake bay was fortified by the English fleet in the war of 1812. It has sunk steadily, till now those fortifications are under water.

The shifting sands of the great desert are as bungry as the pitiless sea itself. Many of the smaller cases in the Sahara have disappeared from sight in an hour or two, buried deep by the deadly simoom.

Some 400 miles southeast of the old city of Kashgar, far out in the yellow desolation of the desert of Gobi, the great Swedish explorer Sven Hedin saw something projecting from the smooth side of one of the long dunes. It was the wooden roof of a house. Further investigation showed that it was but one of thousands. A teeming city of highly civilized Aryans bad long existed on this spot until the earth had tired of it and wiped it out.

Until Dec. 18, 1811, the eastern part of Craighead county, Ark., was one of the most beautiful and fertile stretches of prairie imaginable, interspersed with tracts of lovely woodland. Pretty rivers ran between high clay banks, and the country was rapidsettling. On the morning of Dec. 19, in place of rivers and rolling prairie, a great lake rippled in the sunlight. In the night the whole region, 120 miles long and 60 wide, had sunk 20 to 40 feet. Today the weird lakes of the Arkansas sunk lands offer the most beautiful scenery and some of the best sport in all the southern states.

Nothing is too big or too small to escape the maw of our hungry globe. Quicksands are the traps she spreads for smaller fry., Probably the worst and most dangerous in the world are the "shotts" of the Sahara. These are perhaps the dregs of some prehistoric sea. Now they are covered over with a thick crust of salt and sand. Whole caravans have walked unconsciously into these deathtraps and been quickly swallowed up. Reclus, the great French authority, declares you can sound these quicksands to a depth of 300 feet without finding bottom.-London Mail.

Scared the Beast.

The extraordinary skill with which Sir Edwin Landseer painted animals was due not merely to his mastery of the brush, but also to his intimate knowledge of the animal world.

One of his many talents was the power of imitating to perfection the cry of any creature with which he was fa-

One day when the artist happened to be the guest of Lord Rivers he was requested to go and see a very savage deg that was tied up in the yard. As Landseer approached the growling beast he dropped quietly upon his hands and knees and then crawling forward snarled so alarmingly that the dog, overcome with terror, suddenly snapped his chain, jumped over the wall and was never seen afterward.

The most lonely highlands of our rational territory are the sparsely wooded sierras of western New Mexico. The clank of the woodcutter's ax echoes through the steepest glens of the European Alps and southern Alle' ghanies, but in the Sierra Mesilla, west of El Paso, there are valleys where the moan of the wind in the branches of the rock pines is the only sound heard for days together. A kind of marmot is the only habitant of these solitudes and rarely leaves its burrows before noon. Birds are extremely rare, though a silent vulture now and then finats across the sky on its way to the cave labyrinth of the Gila valley.—In-lianapolis Press.

Flowers bloom in the Sandwich islands all the year round; therefore, it is believed that that country is more deserving than Japan of the title, "Flowery Kingdom."

Every steamer that leaves Japan for the United States carries from 200 to 700 Japanese.

OUR HUNGRY GLOBE. IMPULSIVE SHERMAN

UNION GENERAL.

His Rough and Ready Treatment of an Ugly and Brutal Teamster -- A Remark From One of His Own Men Which He Did Not Resent.

"Yes, Sherman was very impulsive," said the captain. "I saw Uncle Billy in a great act down at Blg Shanty in June, 1864. The army was working its way toward Atlanta, and it was raining as only southern clouds could rain on Uncle Sam's soldlers when wagons were behind and there was no shelter. General Sherman's tent had been pitched near the road, and the general had just taken off his heavy boots and put on a pair of snow white stockings and loose slippers and otherwise made himself comfortable when there was an uproar on the road near his headquarters.

"A man who had been whipping the mules of his team to make them pull became exasperated beyond endurance, and, using the butt end of his heavy whip, began to club the mules over the head. He was so brutal that some of the soldiers passing protested, and this increased his rage. The screams of the belabored mules, the curses of the enraged teamster and the shouts of the soldiers made a din like a riot, but the brutal benting went

"Suddenly the flap of General Sherman's tent was thrown aside and the figure of a tall, bare headed officer in fatigue dress, white stockings and slippers was projected through the rain into the center of the melee. This was General Sherman, and without a word he seized the irate teamster by the ear and fairly lifted him from his feet. There was instant quiet. The mules down in the mud waited for the next blow. The teamster, recognizing the ear puller, was limp as a rag. The boys in the road stopped to see what Uncle Billy would no next. "For a minute you could hear nothing but the patter of the rain. Then Sherman, still holding the teamster's ear in a way to make the fellow stand on his toes, turned and marched his prisoner to the rear, called the officer in charge of the guard and ordered that the beater of mules be properly punished and never be given charge of another team. As the general turned toward his tent after this exploit the passing regiment gave him a cheer, and the philosopher of our company remarked: 'That's better than any cussin I ever heard. Uncle Billy is a master hand at ear pullin.'

"On another occasion I saw Sherman around Kenesaw. The night was as dark as they make them down in Georgia, and we marched all night without talking, under whispered orders, the men being guided in the line of march by bunches of white raw cotton pinned on the shoulders of those in front. Canteens and haversacks were tied close so there would be no rattling, and dreary dark, dropping down in the road to rest whenever there was a stop. This is the most exasperating sort of a march, and the men were in no pleas-

The natural inclination is to go forward as rapidly as possible. The men who set the pace in front are suddenly halted, and the men following crowd upon them, expecting that there will be a delay of only a minute. Instead there will be a delay of an hour, which to the men in the rear seems without reason or excuse. Then suddenly there will be a forward movement at a breakneck pace, then another halt without explanation, and a tiresome standing in ranks. In this case there was the added bewilderment of following silently the cotton pods on the shoulders of the file leaders, the exasperation of sudden stops, and the further exasperation of being compelled to keep quiet, so when daylight came the men were in a swearing mood, and they swore.

"It was the habit with all men, particularly if they were themselves inclined to excesses, to be very severe upon officers who became intoxicated. Nothing gave them so much satisfaction as to find an officer drunk along the line of march and to indulge in severe comments. With the coming of daylight the rule as to silence was suspended, as the divisions were then going into position. As our regiment marched rapidly to its appointed place we passed occasionally a sleeping officer. Every time the boys would remark, 'Another officer drunk.' As we approached the main line we passed an officer asleep in a fence corner. Some fellow in our company shouted; "There's another officer drunk." "The men were greatly surprised to see the sleeping figure assume a sitting posture and to hear the voice of terribly tired and sleepy.' Instantly came the reply, 'Bully for you!' and the men went forward into line feeling a kinship with their commanding general. He had not resented the remark, he bad not sworn at the men who made it, but he offered the excuse which they would have offered, that they were tired and sleepy. These two anecdotes explain why Sherman was so near to his men. He would not see a man or a mule abused, and he held himself as a commanding general to a close sympathy with the men in the ranks who were to fight his battles."-Chicago Inter Ocean.

SCANDAL MONGERS.

A Scathing Denunciation of the Most Despisable of Human Vultures.

Talk is cheap. This is the on-year in politics and the spell-binders will soon be entertaining the dear people at the court houses, at the cross-roads and the big spell binders, such as Bryan and Roosevelt, will meet their open air meetings. Of course each side putting their best light upon their own principles and policies, the other side doing the came for theirs, and both magnifying the faults and bad policies of the other. I don't believe much that one politician says about another politician of different politics from himself. Really, I don't believe much I hear "no-how." Like Bill Nye when he was caught snoring. A gentleman punched him and said, "Wake up, your snoring disturbs us." Bill replied, "I was not snoring." The man replied, "You were snoring, sir." Bill said, "How do you know I was snoring?" "I. heard you," said the gentleman. "Law," said Bill," "you can't believe half you hear these days." I am by politics like I am by scandal mongers. You can make a heap of allowance, and then, as the negro says, "'low some more before you get it straight." Saint James said. "The tongue is an unruly evil and full of deadly poison and setteth on fire the whole course of nature and it is set on fire of hell." The average person does not weigh his words or appreciate what he says. It is also true that the average hearers do not give much weight to words and assertions. A hog at his slop, the dog eating bologua sausage, a vulture at work on the carcass are so much higher animals than scandal mongers that they ought not to be mentioned in the same week. or the same year, or the same decade. The scandal monger is sometimes male and sometimes female, and sometimes just a plain "it." I don't know whether they belong to the genus homo or not. They are no more like decent people than a buzzard is like a bald eagle. I think some people talk too much because they have got nothing else to do. I think some people talk in a different mood. We were making because they are on such a low plane a night march, swinging to the right that they would like to talk other people down on a level with them. Ninety-uine times in a hundred a scandal monger is talking about his betters or her betters. I would rather be scratching when I was not itching than to sit down and listen to a scandal monger, and as a rule the one who hour after hour we moved through the listens to scandal is no better than the one who does the talking. It is as true to-day as ever, the purest characters have suffered most from this tribe ant mood when it began to grow light. of vultures. Each community has "Any night march is very trying. some noble wife, some good mother or daughter that has been the prey of these scandal mongers. They are to

If there is anybody I love to run after and associate with it is the people who keep their tongue from evil and their lips from speaking guile, who backbite not with the tongue nor do evil to their neighbor. "The perennial fight between Western cattle men and sheep men is a study for both the psychologist and the economist. At first glance, the interests of these great divisions of the live stock industry would appear to be n common. But, in truth, this can never be. Cattle and sheep can no more occupy a range in common than audiences in the great auditoriums and oil and water can float coherently. She had better do nothing than do The cow puncher hates the shepherd something wrong. with a hatred that is deep and ofttimes picturesque, and the herder begirts himself with artillery and sullenly stands on the defensive.

"The trouble between the cattle and sheep industries mainly proceeds from is the one and the only preparation the natural differences between two classes of live stock. Cattle are home keeping in their habits. They are as hard to lose as a house cat, unless, per-chance, the cheerful and unreckoning rustler happens along. A range cow naturally will 'run' where she was born. Her owner and his cowsboys the cause of nervousness and headexpect to find her within easily defined limits, usually along some certain cattle trail that starts at a watering place and leads back to higher ground. In ordinary weather, if water be easy of access, about all the cattle will be found some time during the day along just as recommended.' the creeks, in the shade or luxuriantly hock deep in the mud. The night is spent back on the feeding ground. Drive the cow away, even a hundred miles, and back she will drift, though her return be to a feeding ground by far the worse. Back home she will come, though it be to starve and die.

"Sheep, on the contrary, are necessarily nomadic. They are gregarious, 'bunching' by instinct. One man with his dog can care for even 4,000, though only half that number is usually allotted. A flock of sheep is about as devastating as a prairie fire. Where it has passed the grass is gone, even to the roots, the sage brush is defoilated and the track so recks with the sheep's peculiar oder that cattle and horses avoid the ground for weeks afterward. And the herds in their ceaseless journeying never follow one another. To use a pat military expression, they come 'en echelon,' in a path parallel to and abutting one edge of the strip devastated by the preceding woolly army. Thus, if one flock eat out a half mile strip, ten flocks will leave a barren area five miles wide. The better the feed the slower the rate of travel. The flock moves on when the grass is consumed. No diagram is needed to show the effect of such a raid on a cattle range. The rage of the cattle men is not hard to imagine.

"A quarter of a century ago, when the Wild West was virgin land and pasture, there was plenty of room for both cattle and sheep. But as the of untenantep or unclaimed land has PROF. T. R. LANGSTON, shrunk, the two branches of live stock have been driven in upon each other more and more, until they are now in contention for possession of the same field. Little by little the herders and punchers have been forced from the plains up into the mountains. Western Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas, the western portion of Oregon and Washington, and all of California, which were once free ranges, have become less and less available. Even Colorado and Utah and a portion of Wyoming, because of the advance of farmers and miners, afford a constant ly shrinking pasturage. Both sheep men and cattle men have been obliged to seek the high and untenable lands in the mountains, where the forests and the watersheds are the only sections that afford sufficient feed. "The struggle between them, therefore, is waged chiefly in what is known as the plateau region of the continent. From lower New Mexico and Arizona and Western Texas northward to the American boundary, and from the Eastern Montana line westward to the summet of the Cascade Mountains, the sheep men and the cattle men are fighting for the control of the remaining ranges. The sheep go into the verdant meadows of the forests, and the cattle men seek to expel them. The cattle men occupy some section where the grasses are succulent, and the water plentiful, only to find the sheep working into the same district, cropping the grass to its roots, and tainting the air with the smell which the cattle cannot endure. The closer settlement crowds in upon the formerly unsettled lands the more bitter becomes the antagonism. Frequently it breaks out in brief shooting matches, in which the cattle men generally prove themselves the more expert. More often it culminates in strained sentiments and press reports of 'trouble threatened between cowboys and sheep herders.'
