The Sugar trust has scored again its last previous victory having been when it persuaded McKinley to shift on the Porto Rican tariff question. This time the result will be more serious. Under the Dingley law, when any foreign country grants a bounty approach the people of the community to sugar grown within its borders, the United States lays a countervailing duty equal to the bounty on that sugar if imported into the United States. Such duties have been imposed on German, French and Holland sugars. Russia, which has recently begun to export sugar gave no bounty and has been exempted from such taxation, a fact that caused much discontent in the European countries just named. This, however, would have been of little importance, had not the Sugar trust also found that its interest would be injured if Russia was allowed to Browne. develop her trade in that material. Some Russian sugar comes over ray, but most of it comes in such a condition that no further refining is necespetition with the trust. Hence the latter set to work to devise some excuse for barring it out, and with the present subservient administration to back it, easily found one. Russia charges an internal revenue tax on sary, thus entering directly into comcharges an internal revenue tax on sugar grown there and remits this when the sugar is exported. The Scoretary evidently failed to consider that, if this be a bounty, the United States also pays bounties on nearly every article taxed by its internal revenue laws, as it remits these duties when the goods so taxed are exported. Yet the United States has never been accused of paying a bounty on whiskey making, for instance. A commercial war with Russia is likely to follow this unjust

QUALITY IS A STRONG POINT WITH ME!

WITHOUT QUALITY to back up my claims to your attention all the very low prices here wouldn't mean much. It's the combination of Popular Prices with the Best of Qualities that makes Bolt's Bargains, unusually inviting. I print some cases in point. Take Heinz's Pickles and other appetizers, for instance. They're of the fluest grade, yet I'm selling at same prices, or less, as usually asked for inferior goods.

Heinz's Loese Pickles, IOc. Doz.—Sour Cucumber, prepared just right. Crisp and reliable and of good size.

Heinz's Cucumbers, Sweet, IOc. Doz.—Same, grade, same quality as the sour but they are sweet ones. Many folks prefer them that way.

Heinz's Sweet Mixed Pickles, 25c. Quart.—Can't find finer, for the simple reason that finer do not exist. Freshly put up, and cheaper to buy this way than if they were bottled—no bottles to pay for.

Heinz's Chilli Sauce. 18c. Bottle.—Ideal Chilli Sauce, this Particular folks have said it's as fine as any home-made can he. It ought to be, the same things are in it, and it's made expertly.

Heinz's Tomato Ketchup, 15c. Bottle—In 8-oz. bottles, same size as lots of grocers want as much as 20c. for—some want more. Made of the choicest selected ingredients, and warranted to put an edge on the dullest ap-
