EATING AT NIGHT.

If Judiciously Done, It Will Help to

It was formerly thought that food taken at bedtime created indiges-tion and had dreams. While un-doubtedly rich and hearty food is inappropriate at the time chosen for repose, a light nourishing repost at night often conduces to sound aleep by drawing the blood away from the Physicians are now advising a bedtime meal for weak, nervous and emaciated people. Although the demand made upon the system is naturally much less than during the waking hours, there is a wasting away of tissues consequent upon the suspension of nutriment for many hours. Food taken at dinner is digested at bedtime. Often one is restless and wakeful at night because the stomach is empty.

Says a well known physician:

"Man is the only creature I know of who does not deem it proper to sleep on a good meal. The infant instinctively cries to be fed at night, showing that food is necessary during that time as well as through the day, and that left too long without it causes it discomfort, which it makes known by crying."

If you crave it, eat a light, easily digested meal at bedtime, and the long hours of sleep will work out for you a problem in addition, instead of subtraction, of adipose tis-

Not What He Meant at All.

Politeness, it is true, must have its origin in a kind heart and a desire to please, but tact and thoughtfulness and quick wit are also essential to good manners.

A very stout hostess who was entertaining a large company one evening turned to a group of young men standing near her chair and smilingly asked: "May I trouble one of you young gentlemen for a glass of water from the pitcher on the table?"

Several of the young men hurried to comply with the request. One who was particularly active succeeded in reaching the table first.

As he handed the glass to the hostess she complimented him on "Oh, that's nothing," he said. "I am used to it. I got into many a circus and menagerie when I was a boy by carrying water for the ele-

It was only when he saw the expression on the lady's face and noticed the silence that the young man realized what he had said.

Mr. Havelock Ellis in the course of his researches into the causes of death of great men and into the ailments to which they were subject finds that gout is a preponderating ailment of genius. The list given of the victims of gout is a long and in-teresting one. It includes John Milton, William Harvey, Isaac Newton, Samuel Johnson, Savage Landor, W. R. Hamilton and last, though by no means least, Darwin himself. Epilepsy has long been known also as an ailment associated with a high order of brain. Napoleon, Mohammed, Lord Herbert of Cherbury and Hamilton are cited as examples of the epileptic tendency. Julius Cæsar might probably have been added to the list, while Swedenborg is claimed by alienists as also belonging to the epileptic division.—London Standard.

Fancy That Old Stuff !

Her good man was ill, and Mrs. Bogelby had been out to get the best luxuries her slender purse could afford for him. When she returned, her hands trembled so with indignation that she could hardly untie her bonnet.

"It all comes of bein' poor," said the old lady to her husband. "I jist stopped a minnit at the Riches to tell 'em as how you wasn't gettin' any better, and Mrs. Rich said she was sorry and wanted me to bring you a bottle of wine."
"Did you bring it?" asked the ailing man eagerly.

No; I heard her say it had been layin' down in the cellar ever since 1855, and when she offered it to me I jist walked off without sayin' a word."-London Answers.

The Glowworm's Light

The English glowworm is the wingless female of a winged beetle. Some suppose that the light she bears is bestowed for her protection to scare away the nightingale and other nocturnal birds. Others, however, believe that the gift of brightness is the very lure by which her foes are assisted to discover and devour her. Much speculation has been indulged in as to the nature of the glowworm's light, which is not put out by water or seemingly capable of giving forth any heat. It has been asserted that the light diffusing substance contains phosphorus, but this has never been proved. Certainly it is incapable of communicating ignition to any-

TIPPED THE PORTER

Way an American Evened Up Matters In a French Hotel

"Powelson, the pioneer of American photography in a business sense, was a born humorist," said a prom-inent New York photographer the other day. "I believe he might have been a rival of Mark Twain if he had turned his attention that way. Many years ago I went over to Europe with him on a business trip, which turned out to be one of the pleasantest jaunts I ever had.

"They have a custom, or had, in the French hotels of sticking a number of candles in your room and charging you a franc each for them, whether you lighted them or not. Powelson never got reconciled to that. One day just before we left a certain hotel he said to me, looking round our room, 'Cooper, do we have to pay a franc each for all these candles?

"I said that was the usual charge. "And all those porters and waiters down stairs will expect to be tipped too?'

"I believe they will,' I sc d. "How much?"

"'Oh, about a franc, I suppose.' "'All right, then.'

"He didn't say any more at the time, but next morning when we were getting ready to start I saw him taking the candles out of the candlesticks and putting them in his pocket. When he got down stairs, Powelson pulled one of those candles out of his pocket and handed it to a porter who was waiting for a tip from him. 'Here's a franc for you. You can cash it in the of-fice."—New York Times.

A drum of an extreme repulsiveness of nature is one used by the lamas of Tibet at some of their church ceremonies. For this the craniums of two skulls, preferably children's, are taken, and over the concave side of each is stretched the skin of a snake. 'The two skulls are then cemented at their vertices to either side of a wooden disk covered with a cotton cloth, the stretched skins being outermost. These drums are often ornamented by having the heads of devils and such like hor-rors, the more repulsive the better, painted upon them in red and blue colors. The method employed in playing them is rather curious. To the wooden disk between the two halves a cord is fastened, by which the drum can be suspended and then rapidly rotated. Two short cords with knobs at their ends hang down in such a way that as the drum revolves they strike alternately on either face and thus produce a regular "tum, tum." - Good Words.

A chick a few hours out of the shell, an English zoologist tells us, has five distinct calls. Its cry when it loses sight of its mother is entirely different from the note with which it signifies that it is hungry. After being fed it utters another call expressive of its desire to be covered and to sleep. The cry of THE C fright is a kind of "chir-r," which is used also by the hen as a warning call and never fails to bring the brood scampering to her. The clucking of a hen to her chicks is familiar enough to most people, but few know that, although there may be scores of hens in a farmyard clucking at once, the voice of each will be unmistakable to her particular brood, and, moreover, every hen will know which is her own family among a whole cluster of other chicks.

Australian Slang.

A paper in Western Australia has been bewailing the uncultured "accent" adopted by "educated" children in the "Westralian" state schools. In proof of this such examples are given as "'ee-yuh" for "here," "partickler" for "particular," "bin" for "been" and "seen" for "saw."

It is pointed out, however, that in other parts of the Australian continent a more objectionable form of language, the use of slang, predominates. A head is a "top piece" or a "napper," eyes "lamps" or "ogles," an ear is a "lug or a "paddle box," a mouth is a "kisser" or "mush," a face is a "dial" or "phiz," and legs are "dutches,' an abbreviation of "Dutch pegs."

Parepa Rosa a Coquette.

Parepa Rosa was an accomplished coquette with her audience, and she understood the public thoroughly. Good natured, vivacious and warm hearted when before the footlights, she was also shrewd and methodical in her business transactions, a combination that is seldom seen in an artist, and this fact was of material advantage later in dealing with her manager. Almost invariably upon manager. Almost invariably upon her first appearance in an opera she would furtively "size up" the audience, indicating, as a Cleveland paper once said, that "she was counting the house before beginning her performance."—Cosmopolitan.

THE OSTENDE CLUB.

its Gorgeous and Spacious Gambling Saions Are Exclusive.

At Ostende the admission fee is 20 francs, which operates to exclude nearly all persons excepting those who wish to play, whereas at Monte Carlo the gambling rooms are generally overrun with curious specta-

Nevertheless at the height of the season the gorgeous and spacious salons of the Ostende club are generally crowded with men and women, in about equal proportions, and the regulation evening dress of the men and the toilets and jewels of the women make the scene about the tables as dazzling as it is de-moralizing. Roulette and trente et quarante are the favorite games, the former generally for low and the latter for high stakes.

The minimum stake is 5 francs, and the maximum is 2,000 francs. The maximum limit is frequently played by the more experienced and reckless gamblers, and the total winnings and losings of a day or a night are undoubtedly of enormous proportions. Just what these proportions are is known only to the inside management. That they are uniformly large can be readily in-ferred from the fact that it is no uncommon thing to see a single player win or lose 250,000 francs at a single sitting. With hundreds of players at the tables, playing day and night, with chips representing all the way from 5 francs to 1,000 francs, it is not difficult to reach the conclusion that upward of 1,000,000 francs are daily lost and won at these tables, and they are generally lost by the players.

No doubt the game is fair and square enough, as such games go. It is not necessary for the proprietors of gambling establishments at Ostende or elsewhere to take any unfair advantage of their patrons in order to win their money. Their main reliance is on the recklessness and foolhardiness of the average gambler, who never knows how to stop playing until he has lost his last sou .- Forum.

Knew How It Was Himself.

Not long ago in Perthshire, Scotland, a woman was driving her husband down a narrow lane when on turning a sharp corner they encoun-tered a brewer's cart. Neither had room to pass, and in most disagreeable tones the woman said:

"He must go back, for I shall not. He ought to have seen us before entering the lane."

"But, my dear," replied her husband, "how could he with this sudden turn in the road?" "I don't care," said the woman haughtily. "I shall stay here all night before I give way to him." The driver of the cart overheard all the conversation and said re-

One of the most recent cases, that of a young man up in Glasgow walking ten miles to visit his father, and of an even better known case, that of a young Welsh lady walking three miles on a cold night in her nightgown without awakening, up-set many of the previously acepted theories.

It had been thought that expo-sure to intense cold as well as intense heat would awaken the sleepwalker, but in these cases, which are well authenticated, it appears that this opinion, while correct possibly in the main, is not always so.

Overheard. An anecdote from Short Stories suggests how far a bore may throw his beams.

Two men-we may assume that one was a Frenchman-were riding together one day through Paris. One was exceedingly clever, while the other was correspondingly dull. As is sometimes the case, the latter monopolized the conversation, and his talk was fast becoming unendurable when his companion saw a man on the street far ahead yawning openly.

It is not probable that the dulbut his companion's exasperation must have found momentary relief.
"Look!" he exclaimed. "We are overheard!"

The Object of Opera. "Yes," said Mr. Cumrox, "we always attend the grand opera."
"What for?" asked the man who

- The Cowthrope oak is the largest in England. It is reported to be over 1600 years old, and its branches cover half an acre. At the close of the seventeenth century, according to Evelyn's "Sylva," it was seventy-eight feet in circumference at the base of the trunk. Since then a quantity of earth has been placed around it as a support. It is estimated to contain at the present time seventythree tons of timber.

His Sweetheart's Letter

A Colonel, on his tour of inspecion, unexpectedly entered the drillroom, when he came across a couple of soldiers, one of them reading a letter aloud, while the other was listenng, and, at the same time stopping up the ears of the reader.

"What are you doing here?" the exaled officer inquired of the former. "You see, Colonel, I'm reading to Adkins, who can't read himself, a letter which has arrived by this afternoon's post from his sweetheart."

"And you, Adkins, what in all the world are you doing?"

"Please, Colonel, I am stopping up Murphy's ears with both hands, because I don't mind his reading my sweetheart's letter, but I don't want him to hear a single word of what she has written."

Catarrh has become such a common disease that a person entirely free from this disgusting complaint is reldom met with. It is customary to speak of Catarrh as othing more serious than a bad cold, a simple inflammation of the nose and throat. It is, in fact, a complicated and very dangerous disease; if not at first, it very soon becomes so.

for young girls on the threshold of womanhood, has been invaluable. When they become pale and languid, the eyes dull, aching head, feet and hands cold, appetite gone or abnormal, obstructed periods and painful menses, and their systems generally run down, they need building up, and their blood needs cleansing.

Bradfield's Female Regulator for women is particularly valuable and useful owing to its tonic properties to build up the system, and as a regulator of the menstrual flows. Painful, obstructed and suppressed menstruation permanently relieved and all diseases peculiar to her genital organs are cured by it.

Regulator clears the complexion, brightens the eye, sharpens the appetite, removes muddy and blotched conditions of the skin and cures sick headache to a certainty by removing the cause.
