WEDNESDAY, MAR. 12, 1902.

Dun gives the number of failures in the United States for February as 1,104 and the aggregate amount involved $11,287,211.

William C. Whitney has retired from business at the age of sixty. There are numbers of knowing ones who are of the opinion that he is getting ready for the presidential lighting to strike him in 1904.

Roosevelt the other day refused to appoint a negro postmaster in Georgia upon the ground that the appointment would be displeasing to a majority of the patrons of the office. Now and then Teddy has a lucid interval.

The farmers begin the work of the year with a great deal of cheerfulness and with a vim that will overcome all obstacles. If they are blessed with good seasons an abundant harvest will reward their toil and place them on their feet again.

Dr. Karl Lietz, a German scientist, has discovered a process by which water can be made to burn like oil. The ingredients of the substance which causes such a wonderful change in the properties of water are said to be non-explosive, and will produce heat and light twice as strong as petroleum.

We have received the first number The Educational, a magazine which takes the place of the Carolina Teachers' Journal. It is a creditable publication. It is published by McGhee & Davis in Columbia, and should be liberally supported by the teachers throughout the State.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution in which the general public is really most interested is that for the popular election of United States Senators. The unanimous passage in the House of Representatives a few weeks ago of a resolution looking toward its adoption has revived the general discussion of the project.

Thos. J. Adams, who for the past twenty-eight years has owned, published and edited the Edgefield Advertiser, has withdrawn from journalism. Mr. Adams has given the whole plant to his daughter, Mrs. Florence Adams Mims, and the paper is now edited by her husband, J. L. Mims. We wish the Advertiser continued prosperity under its new management.

A committee of Charleston's citizens went to Washington last week, and President Roosevelt assured them that he had no idea of abandoning his trip to the Exposition. This committee went for the purpose of insisting on his coming, as it was rumored that he would not visit South Carolina just now on account of Jim Tillman's telegram to him. The exact date of the President's visit will be announced in a few days.

Charles Broadway Rouse, the millionaire merchant of New York, died at his home in that city on Monday 3rd inst. He was born in Maryland, but was doing business in Virginia at the outbreak of the war. He entered the Confederate army, and made a fine record as a soldier. He went to New York in 1865 with not a cent in his pocket, and by industry and perseverance built up one of the largest wholesale houses in this country. He was a liberal contributor to all public charities and especially to the Confederate veterans. He built a monument in New York at his own expense to Confederate soldiers, gave $100,000 for a Confederate monument at Richmond, Va., and will give $100,000 for a memorial hall to the old soldiers as soon as a like amount is raised. His death will not effect this last gift, and it will be given as soon as the conditions have been complied with.

During the past quarter of a century vast sums of money have been expended for the advancement of education in the United States. Some of that money has done good and some of it has been worse than wasted. There has been a woful lack of system and method, and a great deal of the money has been expended in a way that could not possibly yield satisfactory returns. The wealthy philanthropists of the north have at last turned their attention to systematic work in the educational field. John D. Rockefeller and others are behind the movement to organize the educational work of the United States, especially in the south, on a larger scale than ever yet attempted. Back of this movement is the southern educational conference, of which Mr. Robert C. Ogden is the leading member. Several million dollars will be put into the general fund and it will be carefully and judiciously exended by those who understand the best ways in which to use it. The educational donations of the future are not to be squandered nor are they to be directed aimlessly. Every dollar given for the advancement of education will have a definite channel into which it will go, and will be directed and handled by men of thorough experience in all the different lines of educational work.

Turn on the X Ray.

Editor Intelligencer: All the theories advanced in favor of and upholding the Senior Senator from South Carolina, will crumble and vanish when placed under the X Ray.

The assertion of the editor of the Daily Mail in a recent article, that "Senator Tillman did not make such a charge against him, (meaning Senator McLaurin) though he expressed a belief founded upon circumstantial evidence, but that belief is shared in and has been expressed by thousands of Democrats in this State because they have seen him at the Republican picnic counter and acting as the almoner of Republican bounty, and they see no other Democratic Senator from the South doing that," is as unfounded as all other flimsy arguments used in shielding the Senior Senator. Here is the language used, as furnished by the Associated Press, where Senator Tillman said in reply to Senator Spooner. "You know," he shouted, shaking his finger at the Republican side, "how the votes necessary were secured."

"How were they secured?" demanded Mr. Spooner.

"I know, if the Senator does not," replied Mr. Tillman.

"I have received information in confidence from that side of the chamber. I know from that that improper influences were used in getting those votes." "Name the man," insisted Mr. Spooner, "upon whose influences were brought to bear. It is due the Senator and due the country that he name him. A man who impeaches another in confidence is a coward. If the Senator knows of any man who has been improperly influenced he should name him." Is this not plain enough to any one who can read and understands the English language?

Mark these words, Mr. Editor, of the Senior Senator "I know," &c. By what right does the editor of the Daily Mail assert that Senator Tillman did not make any such charge?

If a man makes a charge in such positive terms as "I know," then he should prove what he knows, or else admit that he did not know. If he knew, why did he not prove it when it was demanded of him? It is therefore very evident that he did not know then, does not know at present; and that anger, malice, jealousy and the disposition to "rule or ruin" predominates in his ambition to announce himself "Czar of Tillmania."

If a physician is called to the bedside of a person in a dying condition, and the physician believes that a few more hours or days of hope may help the patient, although at heart the physician knows that there is no hope whatever, he is justified in telling such a patient and those around him that his case is not a serious one; this could not justly be called a lie; but when the physician arrives at the bedside of a person dead, and he knowingly or wilfully tells that the dead person is alive, that would be called a lie. Why raise such a howl about the Junior Senator when the Senior Senator has been affiliating with Populists, free silver Republicans, middle-of-the-road and all other factions for the sake of manipulating South Carolina's vote on 16 to 1 in his 'vest pocket'? Does the editor of the Daily Mail remember the Senior Senator's first trip to St. Louis sometime in 1893 to find out where he was "At," and how three years later he boasted openly that he carried South Carolina's vote in his 'vest pocket'? Does he remember how in the last campaign in this State the Senior Senator openly insulted all the ministers of the Gospel for the sake of defeating the anti-dispensary sentiment? Yet this Ben Gall Tiger is to be worshipped and praised for all these slanders, abuses, and most unfounded charges he sees fit to inflict on all who cut themselves loose from his coat-tail. Honor to whom honor may be due is a beautiful as well as a just maxim, but it would be unjust to bestow it on one who in a representative capacity misrepresents the well-thinking, fair-minded, conservative element of this State. One might undertake to defend his nephew "Jim" with some grace on account of it being his first offense, but his uncle "Ben" has a world-wide reputation as a slanderer, better known as the associate of Mary E. Lease, Pitchfork, Miscarry Nation & Co., and cannot be excused.

Now, as to the other sentence of the same article in the Daily Mail wherein the editor states: "He is perfectly safe (speaking of McLaurin) in demanding an investigation, for no direct proof of bribery can be brought. If he made a deal the man with whom he made it is dead, but he has Republican 'rocks' in his possession all the same." This is also one of the many vile insinuations, slanders and unjust charges freely made use of by the Apostles of Tillman when his and their infamy is exposed, or rather when they have not the manhood to admit, that he or they are wrong. Shame upon our civilization, that a citizen can with impunity slander the dead when he knows that the dead cannot defend himself. It is not because Wm. McKinley was President of the United States that the offense of unscrupulous slander is graver than if it had been the humblest citizen of this country, but because the editor of the Daily Mail knows that Wm. McKinley cannot answer his charges, even if they were true, that he is making them all for the sake of shielding his "Master." It is not only unbecoming for any man to shift the blame or responsibility to the grave, but irreligious, immoral and cowardly. If our city fathers would do the right and proper thing, they would send a respectable delegation to Charleston at the expense of the city, for the purpose of expressing the same sentiment in person to the President of the United States as was sent to the White House from Gaffney, S. C., saying: "We must emphatically repudiate Lieut. Gov. Tillman's message as no voicing the sentiment of South Carolina's citizens."

Such a delegation from each town and city from this State would be gratifying to the extent that our Chief Executive could return more convinced than ever that we have been most shamefully misrepresented and that we are not "Tigers," at least all of us not blind. O. Geisberg.

Spring is here with all its blooming beauties, and to make every one glad and happy.

Miss Lessie Wilson is with her sister at Denver, waiting on her sick baby. John Holder is on a business trip to Williamston and Pelzer.

Eugene Mitchell celebrated his 19th birthday by having a music entertainment at Will McClellan's on the night of March 7th. Music was well furnished, and a large crowd was there to wish Eugene many more bright and happy years to come and a prosperous journey through life. That night will be a time that will always be remembered by all who were present. Mr. and Mrs. McClellan did all that was in their power to make us enjoy ourselves, which we did until about 11 o'clock, when we departed for our homes, wishing friends and loved ones a fond good night and many pleasant dreams.

Mrs. Lawrence Kay, of Six-and-Twenty, was mingling with friends and loved ones here a few days ago. The farmers will get out of heart if it don't clear off, but we must work with willing hearts. If it is God's will for it to rain we must let it also be ours.

Lawrence Kay, of Six-and-Twenty, visited his daughter, Mrs. Nora McClellan, of this place.
