

FEMINE INTUITION.

Incident That Emphasized Woman's Traditional Attribute.

The intuition of woman is proverbial. Whatever man is willing or unwilling to accord to her, he must admit that her intuitive faculty is amazingly acute.

Two passengers on an Amsterdam avenue car who attracted most attention the other day were a woman and a man. She was exquisitely dressed.

Now, there was not one man in that car who did not feel the woman had made a mistake. There was such an air of respectability about the old man it would not have seemed unnatural in him to reject, even resent, the proffered money.

Ropes of Human Hair.

The young fellows who make their living by gathering the eggs of sea fowl on the rocky island of St. Kilda, one of the Hebrides, consider themselves rich if they are possessed of a rope made of hair from the head of the girl they love.

A Cough Remedy.

For an irritating throat cold and rasping cough an old fashioned home remedy that has received the indorsement of more than one physician is worth noting.

Stuck to His Prisoner.

There was an Irishman of the Thirty-sixth Indiana who while on the skirmish line at Dallas saw a good chance to capture a Confederate," said an old veteran.

Never Mind, me boy,

Pat. I left a million back over the hill there. Go yourself and fetch one of the lads over and take him to General Gross."

A Wrong Diagnosis.

A song with the title "There's a Sigh in the Heart" was sent by a young man to a young lady. But somehow or other the paper happened to fall into the hands of the girl's father, a very unsentimental physician, who exclaimed somewhat crossly:

"What unscientific rubbish is this? Who ever heard of such a case? The man who wrote it must be insane."

He wrote on the outside: "Mistaken diagnosis; no sigh in the heart possible. Sighs relate almost entirely to the lungs and diaphragm."

Her Subterfuge.

"Mary Ann asked me for a reference."

"Did you give her one?"

"Yes, I did. I didn't want her to go away mad."

"What could you say?"

"Why, I said everything that's nice about her."

"How could you? You said she was dreadfully incompetent."

"Well, I called her Belinda all the way through it, and whoever reads it will think she must have stolen it from some other girl."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

UNCROWNED QUEENS.

Seven of Them Have Sat Upon the Throne of England.

English history shows that there were several queens of England—just seven of them, in fact—who were never crowned.

Margaret of France, the young second wife of Edward I, was obliged to forego all the splendors of such a pageant because her royal husband, forsooth, could not afford the expense of a coronation.

King Henry VIII. took most of his wives without giving them the ceremony of a coronation. But in his case there were so many of them that his course might have been deemed a wise economy.

Henrietta Maria, the young and pretty wife of Charles I, went without a coronation not from necessity, but from choice.

Caroline of Brunswick was denied the pleasure of a coronation not for financial reasons nor for religious principles, but because her spouse, George IV., particularly specified that he wouldn't have her share in his honor.

Would Try the Old Masters.

A reputation for wit is like a rolling snowball—it gathers from within. He who possesses the reputation for witty stories shall have witty stories added to him, so to speak.

And here is another. It is probably quite as true as some of the others. An acquaintance met the lady on the deck of an outgoing steamer.

"What, off for Europe again? What is the errand this time?"

"I'm going to have the dear girls' portraits painted."

"Why not in America?"

"Oh, I've tried all the American artists in vain. Now we're going over to see what the old masters can do."

Remembering His Enemies.

Mr. Edward Wortley Montagu, son of the famous Lady Mary, endeavored to be very sarcastic in his last will and testament. After some insignificant bequest "to my noble and worthy relation, the earl of..." he adds: "I do not give his lordship any further part of my property because the best part of that he has contrived to take already."

Must Aim Low.

An individual went into a second-hand clothes shop and asked to try on a suit of clothes. Putting on a coat and vest, he pointed up to a high shelf and said:

"I think that pair of trousers will just suit me."

The dealer got up the ladder to reach them down, and while there the man ran out, still wearing the coat and vest and followed by the dealer, shouting: "Stop thief! Stop thief!"

A gamekeeper who happened to be passing leveled his gun and was going to shoot when the dealer yelled:

"Shoot him in the trousers! The coat and vest are mine!"—London Answers.

A Distinction.

Lord Coleridge was driving toward his court one morning in his brougham when an accident happened to it at Grosvenor square.

"And where be they?" said the innocent looking caddy.

"What! A London caddy, and don't you know where the law courts are at old Temple Bar?"

"Oh, the law courts, is it? But you said courts of justice."

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger.

A heated argument is one of the things a wise man quickly drops.

OCEAN DERELICTS.

The Fanny E. Wolston Roamed Ten Thousand Miles.

Perhaps it is the natural instinct to personify every craft that floats; perhaps it is because they were once the domiciles of living beings that makes human interest in derelicts universal.

The most notable derelict was the Fanny E. Wolston, a three masted schooner, lumber laden, which was abandoned Oct. 15, 1891, and was last seen in 1894. She drifted at least 10,000 miles, following the great circle in a zigzag way.

Then there was the Fred B. Taylor, a schooner cut in half off our coast by the steamship Trave. The people on the Trave waited to see the two parts sink; but, strangely enough, they remained afloat.

The Fatal Age of Fifty-six.

Among men and women of genius there seems to be a strange fatality connected with the age of fifty-six.

Some of the most renowned characters of the world have died on reaching that limit, including Dante, Hugh Capet, king of France; Henry VIII, Henry IV. of Germany; Paganini, Alexander Pope, Marcus Aurelius, Frederick I. of Prussia, Maria Louisa, empress of France; Saladin, the great sultan of Egypt; Robert Stephenson, Scipio Africanus, Roman general; Helvetius, the philosopher; Henry II., the first of the Plantagenets; the elder Pliny, Julius Caesar, Charles Kingsley, Juan Pina, Spanish general and statesman; Henry Knox, American Revolutionary general; Van Tromp, Dutch admiral; Abraham Lincoln, Marryat, the novelist; George Whitefield, founder of Calvinistic Methodism; Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, favorite of Queen Elizabeth; Johann Gaspar Spurzheim, German physician and phrenologist, and Frederick II. of Germany.—St. James Budget.

Bronze Very Ancient.

Bronze, spoken of in the Bible as brass, is of very ancient origin. We have little or no notion how the ancients got copper, but in all probability large quantities were formerly found in the metallic state, just as we find it now in the neighborhood of Lake Superior in America and Baikal lake in Siberia.

Rather Ill Timed.

At a recent wedding in New York at which the bride had retained her "maiden meditation fancy free" a number of years beyond the usual marrying age the organist most thoughtlessly or most ungallantly played as a prelude to the arrival of the wedding party, "Tis the Last Rose of Summer," thereby causing a visible smile among the listeners.

A WALKING STICK.

The Way to Utilize It in Measuring Different Heights.

A walking stick is an invaluable article to accompany you on a walk, for it can assist you in other ways than in aiding you to progress. Suppose you want to measure the height of a cliff, a church steeple or some other tall object, and the sun shines not, and therefore no shadow is cast.

People who live much in the open, as do ranchers and farmers, can generally tell time fairly accurately by the sun, and some, although the feat is seemingly more difficult, can tell time from the length of the shadow thrown by the sun.

Why Ice Floats.

Did you ever wonder why it is that ice, being formed of congealed water, floats, and why on some still lakes it begins to form at the bottom before it does on the surface? Scientists explain these enigmas this wise: Ice is specifically lighter than water just about to freeze and therefore floats in it.

An Extraordinary Prayer.

A volume of reminiscences by Dean Hole quotes the following extraordinary prayer as offered by a loyal but certainly injudicious English clergyman on behalf of Queen Adelaide, the wife of William IV.:

Crab Soup.

A recipe for crab soup said to have descended straight from Martha Washington herself is found in an old manuscript recipe book: Fifteen crabs thrown into boiling water alive. Boil until done; meat picked up fine; put into two quarts of water in which a pound of melting butter has been heated.

Soldiers in Peace Times.

Under favorable conditions of peace the mortality among soldiers is practically the least known, with a death rate of only five in every 1,000. Compared with a soldier's life the placid days even of a clergyman are full of danger, for his death rate is eleven in 1,000, or more than twice as great as that of his military brother.

Contentment should be measured by the number of things you are willing to do without.

Selfishness is the result of a misdirected search for happiness.

Fireproof buildings are provided with fire-escapes just the same.

Stick to the Truth.

The following bit of rural philosophy was overheard in a farmyard in the east of England the other day: "James, my son," said a man who stood mixing the milk and water, "you see what I'm a-doin' of?"

When Brown opened the front door one morning and found a strange baby in a basket on the front steps, he picked up the bundle, and as he carried it to his wife he was heard to remark: "Some men are born babies, some achieve babies, and some have babies thrust upon them."

St. Louis has a peculiar sect in the shape of a community of sand-eaters, composed of seventy-five men and women.

Sleepy grass is found in New Mexico and Siberia. It has a most injurious effect on horses and sheep, being a strong narcotic or sedative, and causing profound sleep or stupor lasting 24 hours to 48 hours.

Samuel Snell, of Holyoke, Mass., has a strange hobby. Though 73 years old and wealthy, he devotes all his spare time to the making of stone coffins.

There is a sweet girl anti-cigarette circle in Pratt county, Kansas, which is credited with the issuance of the following ultimatum: "The lips that draw the cigars shall never pause beneath our snouts."

Sweetheart (cooly): "Not, you must take only one, George." Swain: "But one from one leaves nothing. Let's make it one each and tie."

Possibilities of genius are few when compared with impossibilities.

Only a fool man believes that a woman believes everything he tells her.

A small boy with an armful of snowballs can make a strong man tremble.

When a man starts for a dentist's office he usually strikes a tooth-hurty gait.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill.

The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe.
