WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1902.

THE STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION.

It was our good fortune to attend the twenty-eighth annual session of the South Carolina State Press Association in the grand old historic city of Georgetown on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, and to say that it was one of the most interesting and enjoyable meetings ever experienced by the members but feebly expresses it. From the opening to the close there was not a dull moment in its proceedings, and during the recess hours the members were entertained in various ways in royal style by the genial citizens. The reception committee met the members and their lady relatives at Lanes, 36 miles from Georgetown, and we were assigned to the hotels and homes of the citizens as their guests. From our arrival to the time of our leaving everything was at the command of the editors free of cost. The writer was assigned to the Windsor Hotel, and "mine host," Capt. J. B. Wilson, left nothing undone that would tend to our comfort and pleasure.

As we alighted from the train Tuesday evening the first thing to greet our eyes was a long banner stretched across the street with electric lights bearing welcome words to the Association. All the business houses along the main thoroughfares were decorated with flags and bunting, and the cordial greetings of the citizens made every member of our party feel at once that we were in the hands of true friends.

Wednesday morning the Association convened, and most cordial addresses of welcome were delivered by Hon. W. D. Morgan, the genial and energetic Mayor of the city, and Hon. Walter Hazard, Chairman of the Reception Committee and President of the Board of Trade. President Aull, in behalf of the Association, responded in his usual happy style to these addresses.

An excellent and interesting program had been arranged for the meeting, and nearly all the members who had been appointed to prepare and read papers on the subjects assigned them came well prepared to perform their duty. The subjects, of course, were only of interest to the journalists, and were handled in a way that every member present received new and practical ideas about journalism. The subjects of the interesting papers brought out other topics, which were generally discussed, the members giving their experience in various lines of work in the newspaper office. The meeting continued through the three days, two and three sessions being held each day.

Wednesday afternoon the annual inspection and parade of the Georgetown Fire Department took place. This was witnessed by the members of the Association, and it was the general opinion of every one that the city has just cause to be proud of her fire department. That evening a dance was given by the Palmett Club. At the close of the business session of the Association the younger members went to the dance hall and spent a pleasant hour or two.

Thursday morning the Association had a busy and most interesting session, and in the afternoon the members boarded a steamer and had a delightful trip around the bay and to the islands near the city. An abundance of refreshments were on board and, of course, we all partook of them freely. Many points of historical interest were pointed out to us on this trip, and the only regret of the entire party was that daylight did not last a few hours longer.

On Thursday evening Hon. J. E. Boggs, of Pickens, delivered the annual address before the Association. His subject was "Loyalty," and his address was most entertaining and instructive to the large assembly who heard him. He was followed by Col. John J. Dargan, of the Darlington Herald, who had been requested to deliver a short address on the history of South Carolina. Col. Dargan is well posted on this subject, and he ably and eloquently handled it.

On Friday the sessions were equally as interesting as those of the preceding days, and much business was transacted. The Association had three pressing invitations for the next annual meeting, one of which was from J. T. Harris, proprietor of the White Stone Lithia Springs, which was referred to the Executive Committee with instructions to accept under certain conditions. During the day the following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year: President, E. H. Aull; Vice Presidents, J. C. Garlington and Ed. H. DeCamp; Chaplain, Rev. W. P. Jacobs, D. D.; Secretary, C. C. Langston; Treasurer, August Robt. Executive Committee, J. M. Knight, J. E. Norment and J. W. Raggsdale. Friday afternoon carriages were sent to our place of meeting, and in company with the committee the press gang enjoyed a ride through the city and visited the plant of the Atlantic Coast Lumber Co., the largest lumber plant in the world. J. Pierpont Morgan, the great financier of New York, is at the head of the Company, which has a capital of $6,000,000. This Company employs more than 2,000 men, and turns out more than one-half million feet of lumber each day. The very latest improved machinery is used in the plant, and it is a most interesting sight to watch the work in the various departments. From the time a log is taken from the river until it is loaded in finished lumber on the cars or steamers it is handled by automatic machines. We saw one machine handling six logs and throwing forty-eight full size pieces of lumber at one time. The dust and shavings fell into flues and were fanned half a mile away into the furnaces to be used as fuel for propelling the monster engines. It is worth a trip alone to Georgetown to see this immense plant.

The closing feature of this most interesting meeting was the banquet Friday night, given by the citizens complimentary to the Press Association, and it was, beyond a doubt, the grandest and most sumptuous it was ever our good fortune to participate in. It was 10 o'clock when our party, escorted by a large number of the citizens, entered the banquet hall, and it was in the small hours of the morning when we came out. An elaborate menu was served in fine style, and it was relished and greatly enjoyed by every guest. President Hazard, of the Board of Trade, presided, and the toasts were responded to most eloquently and interestingly. The menu covers were of green card, printed with gold. Each card bore the legend of the occasion, and each of the editors' names was written in gold under a pen of gold, making a most valuable souvenir of our meeting there.

Saturday morning the members of the Association took their departure, some going to Charleston to participate in the closing exercises of the Exposition, some to their homes and some to visit friends or relatives in other towns. The unbounded hospitality and kind attention of the citizens of Georgetown will ever be cherished in the hearts and minds of the members of the press gang who were so fortunate as to be their guests on this occasion.

Georgetown is one of the oldest settled towns of the State, and is now a live, progressive city of 6,000 population. Like many other cities in the State, she has in the last decade imbibed new life and has a bright, promising future. She is the terminus of one thousand miles of navigable rivers, and has an annual commerce of $8,000,000. In and near the old city are many places of historical interest to be seen. Some of the old colonial residences are still standing, among them the house where Lafayette, the gallant Frenchman, spent his first night in America in 1777. This same house sheltered Washington, Monroe and others. It is a stately mansion, and the old furniture, the Parian marble fireplaces, costing $500 each, still stand as they did more than a century ago. Our only regret is that we did not have time to visit all of the historical places in and near the city.

We know we speak the sentiment of every member and the ladies who accompanied them that this was one of the most enjoyable meetings in the history of the Association. We know it will be no trouble to get the press gang to go back to Georgetown again when the opportunity offers itself.

The Democratic congressional campaign committee met recently in Washington for the purpose of framing campaign issues. The subjects of trusts, the tariff and the Philippines were discussed. Silver was not mentioned and the avoidance of this question indicated the desire of the executive committee to map out a campaign on lines different from those of the last two national campaigns. The outcome of the meeting was the resolve that the main issue is to be the tariff and the trusts, with the Philippine question a good second.

The Board of Trustees of Clemson College will hold another meeting at the college to-day. Speculation is rife as to just what will be done at this meeting, but the matter of President Hartzog's resignation will likely come up for settlement. It is not known whether another president will be elected or the present one retained. Everything has been moving quietly at the institution since the settlement of the recent difficulties with the sophomore class.
