

GOV. HEYWARD'S STATE POLICY.

Next Chief Executive Has Plans Well Outlined.

Walterboro, S. C., Nov. 10.—Following his nomination in the Democratic primary in September last, Capt. D. C. Heyward, who was chosen at that time as the nominee of the party, gave expression to the opinion that inasmuch as he had not been formally elected Governor, being only the candidate of the party, he felt that it was premature for him to give any definite expression as to his purposes or plans and that he felt that it was more within the bounds of propriety for him to await the election of November 4 before giving his attention to those matters which come within the sphere of the Governor.

This course on the part of the Democratic nominee was entirely proper, and his determination to abstain from any public announcement of an official character, or to take up the consideration of those matters which pertain to his office was appreciated and endorsed by the public. Although it is generally recognized that the nomination in the September primary in South Carolina is tantamount to an election, and has almost become to be regarded by our people, nevertheless such is not actually the case, and the indiscretion of a candidate of one of the political parties planning his course of action and giving public utterance as to his purposes before he was actually elected will readily be seen, and the wisdom of the course pursued by Capt. Heyward appreciated.

The election of last week, at which time the unanimous vote of the State was cast for him, however, removed these restrictions of propriety, and inasmuch as he is now legally the Governor-elect—requiring only the oath of office as necessary to make him in truth the Governor of the State—it is natural and proper for him to give his thoughts and attention to the manifold duties which confront him, and to be planning to put into execution those ideas and purposes which he trusts will materially advance the interest of the State in every branch—agriculturally, mechanically, educationally, morally and industrially.

In the hope of giving to the readers of The Evening Post some suggestions as to what the Governor-elect purposes doing, your correspondent called upon him at his comfortable home in Walterboro and solicited from him some information along the lines indicated above. Gov. Heyward kindly informed your representative that the returns of the evening of November 4 were not as anxiously secured as were those of August 26th (September 9th, and), strange as it might seem, he was not in the least nervous as to the result. He felt grateful, however, for the way his friends had turned out and cast their ballots for him, even if it was merely a preliminary matter.

"I realize already," said Gov. Heyward, "that the office to which I have been elected is no sinecure. To faithfully and honestly discharge the duties which devolve upon me will be my constant aim, but it will call for the exercise of unceasing and earnest efforts, and I am relying on my friends throughout the State and on all patriotic citizens to support me in my efforts, letting past differences be forgotten, and each and every one contributing to the bettering and upbuilding of the State we all love so dearly. I can not hope to escape criticism nor can I expect to have my administration be devoid of mistakes, when it is remembered that the Governor is called upon to make appointments in localities with which he is almost altogether unfamiliar and has to depend on the recommendations which are handed to him it will be just how likely it is for a poor appointment to be made, especially when a community will sometimes make the application of parties they personally know to be unfit for the office to which they aspire. It will be my purpose, as I have already announced, to rely upon the recommendation of the several county delegations in making county appointments, violating this rule only for good and sufficient reasons. Should I find the recommendation of any delegation is such that it is clear that they are not acting for the best interest of the community but are using the trust placed in them for selfish purposes or to advance their own interest at the expense of their communities' welfare, I do not feel bound to accept their recommendations then, or thereafter, the sole object being to give each county the officials and appointments desired by them and best calculated to accord them the most acceptable service, and I believe, as a general rule, the will of the people can best be obtained through this medium than attempting direct appointments on a pledge which may be given to me by the means of petitions and other means.

The bettering of the common school system is a matter which is giving Gov. Heyward some consideration, and he is endeavoring to devise means which the opportunities of placing a fair education within the reach of every hamlet may be facilitated and affected.

Reared in the country and familiar as he is with plantation life, Captain Heyward is thoroughly conversant with the need of improved educational facilities, and while an advocate of higher education, he realizes that there are able exponents in and out of the Senate and Legislature who will look after the interest of colleges and universities, so he will devote himself for the present to fostering and aiding the schools in the rural districts.

Where Cotton Oil Goes.

Several days ago we published an extract from a letter of a correspondent of the New York Sun who wrote about the industrial progress and growth of the cotton manufacturing industry, in connection with which he gave some interesting facts and figures about the cotton seed oil industry, which we quote, as follows: "The conversation of the cotton seed into oil and other by-products, such as feed and fertilizer, is one of the most important collateral branches of manufacturing industry here in North Carolina, for that matter. "Except down in the southeast, where a small percentage was used for fertilizing purposes, the old-time planters used to throw the cotton seed away as so much sheer waste. Out of this seed there is now squeezed in the South every year from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 gallons of oil worth from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

"But this is not all. There is something like $15,000,000 more in the hulls, which sell for $4 a ton; in the meal, which sells for $20 a ton, and in short lint attached to the seed which sells for two cents a pound. So that what the southern planters of the past used to throw away the southern planters of to-day convert into from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 every year. The oil is distributed pretty much all over the world in one form or another. About 500,000 barrels of it go to Chicago every year to make lard, another 100,000 barrels go to the same city to make soap, 40,000 barrels of it go to the Mediterranean and France to come back here and spread all over the world as fine olive oil, for 10 per cent. of real olive oil will give it just enough nutty flavor to take away at least a little of the taste that tells of its origin down here in Dixie.

Then 200,000 barrels of it go to Holland every year to make that pure Holland butter of which the Dutch are so justly proud. The coast of Maine fish dealers take 20,000 barrels of it a year, for it is a fact well-known to all epicures that the imported sardine is only at its best when it is prepared in pure olive oil—and that, by the way, is one of the reasons there are such large exportations of the cotton seed product to France every year.

All this, however, only touches Charlotte in a general way, for at present there are only two cotton seed oil mills here, with a capital of about $500,000 and using between them 300 tons of seed a day. A ton of cotton seed will turn out about forty gallons of oil, so that Charlotte's output of the oil is about 12,000 gallons daily. There isn't one person in a thousand and even of those who are engaged in the growing and handling of cotton who had any idea of the various uses to which cotton seed oil is put, or of the varied demand there is for it, or of the quantities consumed in lines of business in which it plays such an important part as a factor. The facts and figures bearing upon this in this extract give some idea of this and also fore-shadow the possibilities there are in this industry.—Wilmington, N. C., Star.

Fish Flour in Norway.

A great deal is done in Norway to improve and preserve the provisions produced in the country and to procure a market for them abroad. The fisheries represent one of Norway's chief industries, and quantities of fish are sold at very low rates, particularly during summer. One way in which these are utilized is by means of an invention which quickly dries and pulverizes the flesh of fresh fish. The resulting product, called fish flour, is easy to transport from one place to another and has great nutritive value. A new and profitable branch of industry might be established in America, by utilizing fish in this way.

— Circulars are being mailed broadcast over the country by the executor of the estate of the famous Charles Hill who died recently leaving $142,000 in cash. The circulars describe certain repair marks on the watch by which it is hoped to find the jeweler who made the repairs and ultimately the real name of Charles Hill. It is almost certain that Hill was living under an assumed name, hence this effort to find the real heirs in the case.

The Rev. Dr. R. P. Johnson, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, of which John D. Rockefeller is a leading member, holds that baptism was not essential to church membership. The practice of taking people into churches without baptizing them is common among Baptists in England, and the pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church, in New York city, thinks the practice should become general here.
