One of the greatest robberies of the season was perpetrated in Madison Avenue, New York, on Friday night last, when burglars entered the house, and carried off a small tin box with $164,-000 in stocks and securities.

Dr. Marion Smas, a native of South Carolina, has won such fame in France and Great Britain, as an accomplished surgeon, that the French Emperor has conferred upon him the Cross of the Legion of Honor. He spends his time between Paris and London; his family residing in the latter place.

The Alabama Legislature has undertaken to tax Harper's Weekly out of circulation in that State, by requiring $50 for the right to sell "any pictorial or illustrated weekly, or any monthly paper, periodical or magazine, published outside the limits of this State, and not in a foreign coun-

To Advertisers.

If any business man in Charleston, or anywhere else, doubts that "THE DAILY NEWS" is the best medium through which to advertise in this State, we invite him to call at our office, and we will take pleasure, as a matter of business, in exhibiting to him our lists of bona fide subscribers, as well as our daily sales.

EVPORTS OF COTTON

Below we present to our readers a tabular statement of the exports of Cotton from this port to foreign and coastwise ports, commencing on the 1st day of September, 1865, the beginning of the commercial year. This table will embrace the weekly exports of Cotton, and also the total exports to each port, foreign and coastwise.

In view of the great importance of reliable data in reference to this great staple of com- sult from our experience, and satisfaction, merce, we shall bestow great care and attention upon the revision of this table, as well as the monthly and quarterly returns of the commerce of this port which we have recent-

UNSEATING SENATOR STOCKTON.

The action of the Senate of the United States, so-called, in unseating Mr. ROBERT STOCKTON, Senator from New Jersey, which has been announced to us by telegraph, affords another reason, in addition to the many we already had, for the question our phrase suggests, of the right of that body of the office it assumes to exercise. It is but in name the Senate. The President has declared that the Senators from the South are entitled to their seats, and that it is not, therefore, the Senate without them. The Radical majority in that body have themselves declared that the States of the South could not secede; that they have never left the Union; therefore, and of consequence, that their Senators are members of that body, which is not competent to act without them. It is a fact that the Senators from ten States, acknowledged Commissioner Barrs, in New York, has his tion, in wicked and perverse infringement upon that body-no single word, not inspired by a .A whale, measuring fifty-six feet in length and sense of party interest, and in repudiation of conduct of that majority,-its warrant in the sentiments they utter,-and in this act of excluding Mr. STOCKTON for the reason only that he is not of their party, is a proclamation to the world that their character is not only real, but is avowed; that party power is the object and condition of their senatorial officethat they have no aim beyond, and that every

That this is the moral of their recentact, can beautifully delicate, is destroyed, and most of the hardly be disputed. They acted in this matter under the sanction of their oaths. That evidence, which was sufficient to convince the members of the Democratic party and a portion of the moderate Republicans, that Mr. STOCKTON was entitled to his seat, left the ultra-radicals under the political conviction that he was not. It were simple to suppose that this was more than a political conviction that they thought Mr. STOCKTON was unfitted for his seat for any other reason than that he was not of their party. It does not matter what were the facts in the case. The concurrence of all the Radicals in one opinion in reference to a fact, about which so many doubted, was not an accident-it was not the just impression of the case before them. It were simple to place. England is troubled by the Fenians, and suppose that they were not drawn to that concurrence by a sonse of party interest, and that they have not leclared, and that they did

> It is too late, perhaps, to excite the interest of our readers by evidences of the indisposition of the Senate or Congress to act as the legislature of the country. They have so constantly exhibited the party character, and our readers are already so familiar with the facts to be presented in support of this assumption, that it were ordinarily a waste

There are seventy-two Senators, twenty-two of whom are excluded from their seats by the majority who happen to have possession of the hall. Of those remaining, some are absent, some sick, and less than the half of them, therefore, and not more than onethird of the whole body, have availed themselves of the opportunity to determine who shall be co-members with them, and seizing the Government of the country, are indicating the purpose to use it in the establishment of their own power.

From his recent act it would appear that hese misgivings are gratuitous. It now appears that he has veered no single point from his proposition at the beginning of the restoation movement. What he said then, in lain and simple language, he acts up to now. Without unnecessary demonstration he moves teadily right on-every step in the direction f his object—and saying once that he would ather be right than President, now being President, he exhibits still that it is his purpose to be right. And it is a source of profound satisfaction to our people that the physical powers of the Government are yet in the hands of one who evinces so persistent a purpose to use them only in vindication of Constitutional liberty.

new and complete stock of GOODS, comprising everything usually kept in a first-class HAT, GAP, and STRAW GOODS HOUNE, to which he invites the attention of purchasers. Representing the manufacturers of many styles of the goods, and having unusual facilities for obtaining all of his goods from first hands, he feels confident that merchants visiting this market can select from his stock at the New York jobbers' prices.
N. B.—Having secured the services of Mr. A. S. J.
PERRY, of the old house of Johnston, Crews & Co., and Mr. E. T. BROWN, of the house of F. D. Fenning & Co., they would take pleasure in receiving a call from any of their old friends.
