as the supreme power of the land. We are now about giving the world an example of a new species of oligarchy. But the Military Reconstruction Bill so directly and palpably abrogates every vestige of constitutional liberty in the Government of the United States, and from the immense interests immediately, at stake, it so entirely overshadows every other Act of the late Congress that this Tenure of Office Bill has received but little attention anywhere.

Its provisions were, perhaps, principally aimed at the Cabinet officers, the President's advisers, who are thus made entirely irresponsible to the President; and yet, most singular to say, the President is held responsible for the sots of these his ministers. Could the force of unreason further go? The President in his Veto Measage reviews the language of the Constitution on this subject, and also the practice in the Government from its foundation, together with the legislation bearing on the matter, and the opinions of the chief judicial minds. As early as 1769, it was attempted to enact a Bill of this character. The Freedent's contemperated the Constitution, vis. That the President shall have no post to principal continuous of the constitution of the constitution. It was maintained that there are certain causes for which persons ought to be removed from office, without being guilty of treason, prihery or malfassance, and that the mature of things demands that he chief the force of the Constitution. COV. PEIRPOINT'S MESSAGE.

We publish to-day the Message of Gov. PERPOIN

It is a document of extreme views respecting the situation, and we only print it that our readers may learn what is transpiring in Virginia. The press of Richmond do not assail the Message. They seem disposed to consider its arguments:

indeed, as has always been the case with Virginians they evince a disposition, in this dark hour, to come squarely up to the necessities of the occasion, and to consider the sad condition of their State

ANDREW JOHNSON.

It is not often that power has to be thrust upon men. Far more numerous are the instances where ambitious men have "waded through slaughter to a throne, and shut the gates of mercy on man-kind." This grand, noble, and very exceptional at titude has been occupied by the President, almost ever since his alevation to his present high position. The Freedman's Bureau Bill, we believe was the first legislative act of the 39th Congres proposed to confer great power and very extensiv patronage upon the Executive. This self-abner tion and entire disinterestedness was exemplifi in a still more remarkable manner in the history of the recent Reconstruction Act. On the one hand, Mr. JOHNSON saw power, absolute and irre-sponsible, conferred upon him, such as no mon-arch in England has possessed in five hundred years; on the other, in case he refused to affix his

THE TENURE OF OFFICE BILL.

In The Naws of yesterday we published this bill, vetoed on Saturday last by the Fresident, but which has nevertheless since become a law Congress passed the bill over the veto, without debate, as though there could be no kind of reason for listening to objections to it from the Executive. If this were the first act of legislative numpation on the part of the Thirty-ninth Congress (instead of being one of the last), it would have
