These letters, amounting to nearly four thousand, have been burned in his presence.

Somebody has been reading in a scientific journal an account of a curious and recent invention de-nigned to catch eafe burglars. The depredator no sooner commences, in perfect ignorance of the se-cret arrangements, to force open the door, drill the lock, or move the safe, than by so doing he sends a telegraphic dispatch to the nearest police office, architecting the number registered in the, police books of the bouse in which the robbery is, being effected. an account of a curious and recent invent

Some years ago the State made an appropriation to erect a monument to General Purram, on condition that the people of Windham county raised an equal amount, which they failed to do. The Edinburgh Courant is authority for the following statement in regard to Queen Victoria as an author: "The preface to the collected speeches of the late Prince Consort, if not actually written of the late Prince Consort, if not actually written by her Majesty, was at least 'inspired' by her, and her reputation for literary skill has on several oc-casions given grounds to reports that her Majesty, has intended that her name should be included in the roll of 'royal authora.' A rumor of this kind is again current, and we understand that it is very, generally believed that her Majesty is actually pre-paring a book of her own composition for the tress."

What's the difficulty? The members of the last Congress yoted themselves a bounty each of $4000, why may not the present members vote themselves $40,000 and purchase residences? No harm in a vote if it should come. Congress is the Government, and the Government is omnipotent.

The London Lancet has some gratifying intelligence for the fair wearers of "chigmons." THE MILITARY BILL.

The passage of the supplemental Bill reported from the Judiciary Committee of the Senate will relieve us of the necessity of any discussion as to what action the government of the State should take in the execution of the Military Bill. When passed, and, the indications are that it will be very soon, it makes it the duty of the Brigadier General commanding the Department to establish a register of legal voters, to provide the necessary machinery for such registration, to issue a call for a Convention, and to regulate the details of the election for that body. Tases powers may be delegated to the Provisional Governor, but it is not worth while from the uniticipate whether he should accept them. This will, of course, depend very much upon the relations between the Military Commander and the Governor, and, in this State, we can safely leave the decision, should it ever become necessary, to the intelligence and patriotism of our present authorized to limit, or to abrogate, but on the great principle of the Bill, the right of Congress to prescribe the mode of restoration of the unre-presented States, and the terms which may be imposed in the exercise of that right, the Suprem Court will never undertake to pass its solemn judg The sacrifies which we are called on to make is indeed a great one—greater, we may say without exaggeration, than has ever open forced upon tree people. But it is of the last importance for dis to understand its extent, to see how far it is the necessary consequence of our failure, and whether the elements of even this radical change can be somicolled for good. Since the formation at the Constitution the population of the South has been divided into two classes—the free white and tion in Congress, this latter population had reall no existence. The relation between them and local laws of the Strive in which they lived, but their presence had no effect whatever upon those great principles of civil right which determine the character of a national government. That this is so, is evident from the fact that the great mass of the owners of these slaves—the political population of the South—have always been in party affiliation with the Democrats of the North; that is to say, what way does do emanging the the caye, with a consequent right of suffrage, sfeet this relation? What right does it take away from the free white new which he formerly necessated? What new political element does it add to those constituents when have hitherto gone to make up what is known as the American avalent of the proposition? Our readers must bear in mind that we are no our reasons must bear in mind that we are not discussing now the effect of this change upon our social habits, our local laws, nor our rela-tive strength as compared with other States, THE UNDERSIGNED

If we find conselves made this change, if we had, by State laws, conferred this right of suffrage, does any one for an instant suppose that we would have considered such a change a revolution? Indeed, if such a change could have been gradually effect-ed by the means of a property qualification, negro-suffrage would have become a het without even attracting attention. because it will enable us the more readily and the more successfully to meet the real difficulties and dangers which this change threatens. When at the close of this war, the couventions of the Southern States gave effect to the emancipation proclamation of Lincoln by their respective paston promamaton of Lincoln by their respective ordinances, four million of people, formerly slaves, were declared free, and by consequent leg-islation were placed on a footing of civil equality with their former masters. Their rights of per-son and wornerly were berneated. on and property were respected, their marriages lectared valid, their contracts made binding, their declared valid, their contracts made binding, their wills lawful. They were given the right to form associations among themselves to hold public meetings, to petition the Legislature, to agitate and to be agitated. They were taxed for the support of the Government of which they were madeitizens. It was clear that such a mass of people, with such rights and with the perpetual discussion of such rights and with the perpetual discussion of such rights by public opinion abroad, the influence of which could not be excluded, could not be held in a condition of such rights the form of several trades. aim of such rights by public opinion abroad, the influence of which could not be excluded, could not be influence of which could not be betald in a condition of perpetual tutelage. The public mind of the South, was, we think, prepared for the gradual admission of these people to polizical rights. A system of qualified suffrage, embracing the requirements both of property and intelligence, and which would have made this right the reward of industry, thrift and honesty, would have men to violent and persistent opposition at the South. But before a discussion of this subject could develope Southern feeling and opinion, this Bill has precluded all opportunity for the temperate achievement of a sure and safe result, and has given the right of suffrage to every male in the State who is over twenty-one years of age, and who has resided tretve months within its limits. What are the consequences and what are the dangers of this legislation, are the questions we propose to discuss.
