Gold closed in New York at 34⅛c. Cotton was heavy, and declined ⅛c; Middling Uplands quoted at 31½c.

Cotton closed in Liverpool easier, at 13⅜@13⅝c. for Middling Uplands.

A ton of merchandise is carried from Liverpool to this country for £7, whereas a ton of letters costs £3584. When shall we have cheap ocean postage?

A gentleman in Boston, who prefers that his name should not be known, has given $100,000 to found a theological school (Episcopal) at Cambridge. E. S. Rand, Esq., Hon. R. C. Winthrop and Judge J. P. Putnam are appointed trustees of the fund.

The Nova Scotia Parliament met on Saturday. The Governor's speech congratulates the House upon the prosperous and peaceable condition of the Province and the success of the confederation amendment. A lively session is anticipated.

An exchange says: Mr. Senator Wilson wants the Government to take charge of the bounty due the negro soldiers, because they have not sense enough to take care of it themselves. He then wants the negroes to take charge of the Government.

The N. O. Times of Saturday says: The officers of the French frigate Megere, who are stopping at the St. Louis Hotel, are said to bear dispatches announcing to the Emperor Napoleon the complete retirement of the French troops from Mexico. The intelligence will be telegraphed direct.

The New York Tribune has a telegram from San Francisco, March 16, saying that Gen. Horan, imperialist, commanding the City of Mexico, addressed a proposition of arrangements to Gen. Lyuca, Republican, commanding Cuernavaca, to surrender the city. The Liberals are in peaceful possession of Acapulco.

The ex-Grand Duke of Tuscany has sent in a claim to the Italian Government for the restoration of his personal property, which he values at about 50,000,000 of livres. Among the articles he claims are three Raphaels, and a great number of exquisite works of art in silver, gold and precious stones.

During the late cold weather, on the Ogdensburg frontier, Richard Kane was detected, as stated, in smuggling liquor from Canada. One of the beams in his sleigh rack was bored about seven feet with a two-inch augur, and contained about three gallons of whiskey. It was so constructed as to deceive the most prying eyes, and was discovered by the merest accident.

The population of London is over three millions, which is considerable larger than the population of all England in the day of Richard II. The London of Shakspeare's time was a village; even in the reign of James I it was but 153,000 inhabitants. In 1810 it had increased to 1,000,000; in 1831 it swelled to 1,500,000; in 1849 it had passed 2,000,000, and so has gone on until now, when it numbers 3,000,000 and upwards.

The Rio Grande Courier has the following extraordinary puff: "The pistols used on the occasion of the recent 'duel' on the 'other side,' were from the well-known establishment of Wekel & De Gress, of this city. All gentlemen who wish to do likewise' can find a splendid assortment of most approved arms—also, ammunition of all kinds—at their house, on Elizabeth street."

The Columbus Sun says: "We have been kindly furnished with the following statement of the shipments of Sea Island Cotton from the ports of Jacksonville and Palatka, Fla., from the 1st of September, 1866, to the 15th of March, 1867: Shipped from Jacksonville, 6200 bales; shipped from Palatka, 3300 bales: total, 9500 bales. Of the went to Charleston, and 2300 bales went to New York. Much of the New York Cotton was shipped via Charleston and Savannah.

The Rusk (Texas) Observer says: "Capt. Vering has deposited in our office a deer skin, the hair of which is pure white. The animal has frequently been seen by hunters in this vicinity, during the fall and winter, and was killed by Mr. Stafford, one day last week, about five miles from town. It is also his opinion that this unusual color of the hair was caused by extreme old age, and that it was nearly blind from the same cause, its eyes presenting a very glassy and unusual appearance.

Earl Derby has officially announced in the English Parliament that the Turkish Government has granted all the demands of the Servians, and that Servia is now practically free. Turkish accounts claim a victory of the Government troops over the insurgents in Thessaly. As regards Crete, we are told by cable dispatches that the Turkish Government has consented to the return of the Cretan exiles, that the reforms in favor of the Cretans will be hastened, and that the Candian deputies have reached Constantinople.

M. Paul Hedonin, of Rouen, a member of many learned societies, has invented an apparatus to which he has given the name of "Electro-Bathometer," which can determine with exactness the depths which have hitherto remained unknown. Some experiments have probably already taken place near Paris. The depth of the Seine, and that of the Bois de Boulogne, are not, indeed, immeasurable by the old method, but M. Hedonin wishes to prove that he can ascertain correctly with his apparatus any depth whatever. The shock of his sounding lead against the bottom determines a magnetic current which indicates at the surface, with electric promptitude, the precise instant of contact.

The trustees of the Peabody Fund for the education of people in the South, says the New York Evening Post of Monday, are to hold an official session at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this week, when it is expected that Mr. Peabody, the donor of this splendid fund, will be present to give his views on the disposition of his princely gift. The majority of the trustees will dine together to-morrow, and Mr. Peabody, who is now the guest of General Wetmore, has selected at the Fifth Avenue Hotel the apartments of the distinguished gentlemen composing the Board of Trustees. The session promises to be a very important one, as the benefits of the fund are at once to be directed to the purpose for which it was designed.

The New Orleans Price Current, of the 9th, publishes the result of its information collected regarding the past season's sugar and molasses crop. It gives returns from 328 plantations the aggregate product from which is given at 36,787 hogsheads. There were 347 plantations under partial cultivation, and the estimates, from the whole, range from 39,000 to 42,000 hogsheads. The estimates from the molasses crop reach 63,000 barrels, at 65 gallons to the hogshead, on a basis of 40,000 hogsheads, comprising 40 gallons to the barrel. The plantations under cultivation before the war are numbered at 1291; the crop of 1861-'2 (the largest ever raised) was 459,410 hogsheads.

Mr. Peabody's Gift to the London Poor.—From the statement of the trustees of this gift for 1866, it appears that the original fund has been increased by the earnings of interest and rents to the extent of £15,416 8s. 11d., making the sum total of the trust to the end of December, 1866, £165,416 8s. 11d. The buildings at Spitalfields and Islington continue to be fully occupied. The sanitary condition of the buildings continues highly satisfactory. Four blocks of buildings, affording accommodation for one hundred and ninety-five families, have just been completed at Shadwell, and named, like those at Islington, Peabody Square. These, when filled, together with the others now occupied, will contain about four hundred families, numbering about two thousand persons.

According to a return just issued by the Prussian War office, the total number of troops brought by Prussia into the field during the last war was 569,076. Of these 442,466 belonged to the standing army, 129,025 to the reserve, and 97,588 to garrisons. At the close of the war there were still 100,000 troops, consisting of 80 squadrons of the Landwehr, 33 fourth battalions of the army, and nearly the whole of the Landwehr of the second ban who had not been called into the field. The Landwehr was thus distributed: 24 infantry battalions, of 802 men each, were attached to the first corps of reserve; 52 squadrons of cavalry to the cavalry of the line, and 92 infantry battalions, 14 squadrons of cavalry, 120 companies of artillery, and 26 detachments of pioneers were employed in garrisons.

CHARLESTON.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 21, 1867.

ANDREW JOHNSON ON REPUDIATION.

Our Northern exchanges are very much exercised at a letter published in the New York Citizen of the 9th instant, written from Washington by its editor, Gen. Halpine, ["Miles O'Reiley"]; and giving the particulars of a conversation he had with the President on the subject of the national debt. Mr. Johnson holds that repudiation is inevitable if the present policy of Congress continues. But, on so important a topic, we prefer to give his own words:

We are drifting toward repudiation; and the moneyed aristocracy of the national debt—the very men whose interests are most jeopardized—are so blind that they are practically helping to accelerate, not check, our course in this downward direction. We need the industry and enormous possible products of the lately revolted States to help us in bearing our heavy burden. We need confidence and calm—we need internal harmony; and above all, we need a return to the unquestioned supremacy of the civil laws and constitutional restraints, if our debt is not to be repudiated within the next half-score of years. * * * *

"No party as yet—and possibly no party for some years—will openly hoist the banner of repudiation. But a majority of those who shaped the legislation of this last Congress must know—unless they deceive themselves, or are too ignorant to appreciate their own acts—that we are drifting in that direction, and that it is by their votes we have been swung out into the downward stream. Doubtless, some of them would either be, or affect to feel, horrified if to-day branded as repudiationists—just as, in the infancy of the Freesoil agitation, it was considered a bitter slander if the 'Freesoiler' should be styled an 'Abolitionist.' There are steps in everything, and the term of reproach to-day will be worn as a feather in the cap some years from now, unless the true conservative wisdom of the country can be awakened—and rapidly—from its asphyxiating dream that our 'national debt is a national blessing.'

"And look at the effect of the Reconstruction Bill just passed over my unavailing veto! I mean its peculiar effect as a step in the direction of repudiation, and not its general effect as a high-handed measure of Congressional usurpation, striking out of existence so many States, and establishing a military despotism over more than one-third of our geographical Union. This Bill suddenly adds four millions of ignorant and penniless negroes to the voting force of the country—an accession of just so much strength to the party whose interest it is, and must increasingly become, to favor repudiation as a policy. To secure the public credit, our effort should be—if that were possible—to restrict, rather than to extend the right of suffrage; for money rapidly aggregates in a few hands, and whenever the men who have an interest in seeing that our national debt is paid, shall have become out of all proportion few compared with those who have an interest in its repudiation, the votes of the many will carry it; and the debt of three thousand millions will be struck out of existence by ballots, just as rapidly and utterly as the similar amount invested in Southern negroes has been abolished during the recent war under showers of bullets."

Of course the Radical press is indignant. They cannot say that the President is wrong either in his premises or in his conclusions; but still it is contended he ought not to give utterance to such views; as if his commenting on so stupendous a fact could make the slightest difference in the course of events. Instead of heeding his warning voice, he is abused as a wilful and malicious prophet of evil. The New York Tribune of the 11th says:

We protest against the President's imputation on the morality and honor of the negroes. Many of them may be ignorant; yet they know that the national debt is the price of their freedom. There may possibly be found a low caste negro here and there whom the Copperheads can seduce into voting for repudiation; but no colored person who has any self-respect or regard for his reputation would associate with or countenance such a scandal to his race.

If ever repudiation shall be attempted in earnest, the national debt will be found to resemble the farmer's stone wall five feet thick and four high, so that it was higher after it fell down than before. To repudiate is to desert, when it comes back or national bank, all the deposits in savings as well as other banks, all the receipts of railroads, &c., &c. There are not five legal voters in each hundred that would not be impoverished by the bare attempt. The mere suspicion that they might attempt it if fully in power, will considerably help to keep the Copperheads in the minority for many years to come.

The Tribune is doubtless correct in assuming that repudiation of the national debt would swamp moneyed men everywhere; but it should remember that the number of those who have nothing to lose is always greater in every society than those who have. Taxes are onerous under all circumstances, and when they become oppressive and there is any apparent way of escape demagogues are very apt to find it out, and use such fact to their advantage. It is, of course, to be hoped that the colored voters will take the advice given in the above extract from the New York Tribune, as also the advice tendered the Virginia negroes a few days ago in the same journal to follow Gov. Peirpoint's counsels rather than Mr. Hunnicutt's.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

In a previous article on this subject we gave expression to a doubt in regard to the soundness of the policy of adding a Medical College to the old South Carolina College in Columbia, now known as the University of South Carolina. We suggested the propriety of adopting the old Medical College in this city for this purpose. Its being at a distance from the school of arts and of law, so far from being an objection, is rather an advantage, independent of the superior facilities a city and seaport like ours affords for the prosecution of medical studies.

The University of New York, although located in the same city with the Medical College, and called by its name, to all intents and purposes is a totally distinct institution. The University Medical College has always occupied a distinct building at a distance from Washington Square, where the Faculty of Arts hold forth; and the two never come in contact, as far as we know, except on commencement days, when, as a matter of form, the Chancellor of the University delivers an address to the medical graduates. The same thing obtains in the University of Pennsylvania. In the University of Virginia, a quasi Medical Department has been carried on for a number of years, but owing to the interior situation of Charlottsville and its village character, the school never attained to the respectability of a first class medical college; never had more than a small number of students, and was overshadowed by the college at Richmond. A move was recently made before the Legislature of Virginia to unite the medical schools at Charlottesville and Richmond, and transfer the property of the latter to the care of the Trustees of the University. The Committee on Schools and Colleges in the Lower House held a meeting to consider the subject a few days ago, and refused to interfere with the existing arrangement by a vote of 4 to 3. We incline to think that the result would have been otherwise, if some of the Committee had not felt doubtful about the right of the Legislature so far to change Mr. Jefferson's original plan, which certainly included the teaching of the medical sciences at his University.

Oxford and Cambridge, two of the oldest and most celebrated universities in the world, have none of these professional schools attached to them; and the best writers on the subject of education, Sir William Hamilton among them, have pronounced against the policy of combining the two. In fact, it runs directly counter to the highest and most philosophical view of education. Medicine in London, and, in fact, nearly all over Europe, is now taught in hospitals, and not in country schools.

We hope the Trustees of our University will reconsider this matter, and rescind their action. This is no time for new experiments. In the present convulsed state of public affairs, we should let well enough alone. We have no interest whatever to subserve in our advocacy of this measure, save the good of the State, and the cause of education. We would rather see one good school, well officered, and of a high standard of scholarship, than a dozen institutions such as have hitherto disgraced a large part of the United States.

AMENITIES OF FRENCH JOURNALISM.

M. de Girardin, the distinguished editor of La Liberte, it appears, is to furnish the first case under the new law regulating the press. He was summoned to appear before M. de Sonet, the "Judge of Instruction." Twenty years ago, the same M. de Girardin, then chief editor of La Presse, had a similar summons to appear before the Chamber of Pairs, where he pleaded his own cause, and was acquitted by a vote of one hundred and thirty-four against sixty-five. In his paper he says that he will again appear before the Judge in 1867, as in 1847, without counsel, pleading his conviction that, if he has used his right as a member of the press, he has not abused it.

The printer of La Liberte also shared the honor of this summons, to appear on Wednesday, March 6, before the 6th Chamber, and answer to a charge of having endeavored to bring the Government into disrepute, spoken disrespectfully of it, and stirred up hatred against it. The punishment for this offence by the law of May 17, 1819, is imprisonment of from one month to four years, and a fine from 150 francs to 4000 francs. It is thought by those who know the feeling in Government circles that M. de Girardin will get the full extent of the law. The Emperor and his Ministers are much embittered by the invectives they were obliged to hear a few days before from the eloquent Jules Favre and his compeers, and will scarcely be magnanimous enough to allow this opportunity to pass without teaching the ultra-Liberals a wholesome lesson.
