CITY IMPROVEMENTS.

Why it is that our forefathers had such a pre ilection for narrow streets. we have never been able to ascertain. But so it is, and not here only. On the contrary, we find views nore contracted, and streets more strait, the further east we trace our steps, and the deeper down we look into the vista of the ages. Syria, Turkey, Greece, and Italy, we find the fares. In truth they scarcely merit that name for they were almost exclusively made for the ise of the pedestrian, and afforded ample com and verge enough for the "hampered lonkey. Those ancient burghers doubtles were good men and true, and very well in their way, but they knew nothing of business. They and no street cars, express wagons, omnibuse: nacks or drays. In fact, we do not believe they and so much even as a "one-horse shay." consequence of this old fogyism, this highly reprehensible want of foresight, is that nearly very city in Christendom has been compelled, since the opening of the present century, to the no small annoyance of tax-payers, to renovate and reconstruct on an expensive scale. In Paris, as is well known, this work is continually progressing. M. Haussman's name will descend to the latest generations as the great conoclast of the present; earning odium only for what he destroys, and no credit for what he is constructing. In New York also, and other of the older and larger cities of the North, we find this same course of improvement continually going on. Charleston, our venerable old city, like he sisters, has her narrow streets. Ours are not generally very crooked. They were not projected upon cow-paths, as the late EDWARI EVERETT said was the origin of the streets of Boston; and as has been said also of Pearl street in New York. Improvements bave necessary, and were entered upon from time to time, as permisson was obtained from the Legislature. But it was not until a general Act was passed for this purpose, appointing "a Board of Commissioners, with power and authority to declare in what cases the streets, lanes, and alleys of the city shall be widened; and to provide for carry ing into execution the objects of the said Board and for other purposes therein mentioned.

This Act provides for nine Commissioners, to be appointed by the Legislature, whose approval and sanction was necessary before City Council could take any steps in carrying out the other provisions of this Act.

Section VIII of this Act (of 1817) says: 'And, whereas, narrow and confined streets, lanes and alleys, are disadvantageous to every city, exposing buildings so situated to great langer from fire, and the inhabitants thereo by close and confined air, to malignant diseases: Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and immediately after the passing of this Act, no street, lane, alley, or court shall be opened, laid out, extended or established within any part of the City of Charleston less than sixty feet, and until the same shall be previously approved by the Comnissioners of the Streets of said city.

There has been no opportunity in Charleson during the past thirty years of entering on uch improvements on an extensive scale, and at so little cost to tax payers, as we have at present. The fire of 1861 laid waste a large part of the heart of the city; and while it true that business has not increased within that period, and it cannot, therefore, be said that any extensive alterations in the topography of the city are absolutely necessary, yet we are glad to know that liberal ideas have made great progress here within the last few years, and there are now but few freeholders opposed to any reasonable scheme having in view the im provement of the city. We expect, within few years, not only to do the business we had in 1860, but largely to increase it. And now is the time to make the necessary preparation, especially in the burnt district, where streets can be widened at a very small cost. Accordingly soon after the present Counci was organized various plans were proposed, all having for their object the widening and straightening of streets, most of them within the burnt District; and as the old plan-of Board of Commissioners, "appointed from time to time by the Legislature," whose sanc-tion had to be first obtained for carrying out any such improvement,-was too slow and circumlocutory, laid the way open for continual complaints; in short, did not work well, -Council petitioned the Legislature for a repeal of that part of the Act of 1817; and on December 14, 1866, the Legislature passed an Actamendatory to that of 1817, which says that "hereafter it shall be left to the Mayor and Aldermen of Charleston in City Council assembled to deternine what streets, lanes, alleys, or courts shall be laid out, opened, widened, or extended with-in the limits of the city, and to carry and improvements into execution in the manner provided by law, without the intervention of commissioners." The Act also authorizes City Council to close any street, lane, or alley if they deem it necessary for the benefit of the

The City Council, after having determine on an improvement of this character, appoints a Board of Commissioners to assess the private property needed for the purpose; and we do not think such a Board will have much difficulty in ascertaining the proper value of the lots in question, and in giving satisfaction to lot-holders, as we may take it for granted that practical business men, of character and standing, will be selected for a discharge of this delicate duty.

Council has determined to widen King street, a move which has the hearty endorsement of the whole city. We hope they will continue their efforts, and do the same for Queen street, if not from East Bay, at least from Meeting street to the Roper Hospital. There is but one louse, on the north side of the street, in those three squares that would have to be recessed, and the proprietor of it, we learn, is quite willing to have it done. All the remainder within those limits is part of the "burnt district," and will cost but little. A sufficient widening of Queen street will enhance the value of property, both along the street itself, and in its vipinity; and there is no reason why, if this scheme is carried out, Queen street should not in a few years be as pleasant and as fashionsole a street for a private residence as Went-

True, it will be urged, our exchanges at present is not in a plethoric condition, and all needless outlays should be avoided; and though t may be true that neither the city nor the individual corporators have any money to spare just now, it is still the part of wisdom that the neasure should be determined now, and the lines run, so that no one in building along that

LARGEST CIRCULATION .- The DAILY We know the Committee on Streets in the City Council favors this improvement. We believe that nearly all the property holders in the viof each week, agreeably to the following be of benefit to the city at large, we can see cinity desire it, and as it will unquestionably section of the New Postoffice Law, as the no valid objection to the proposition, nor ever reason for delay.

The Nation has some sensible remarks on the situation of affairs in Europe. It says: "Tremendous as are the military preparations of the Great Powers in our day, there is no question that the enormous increase which we witness in the size of armies, is in reality a fresh guarantee for the peace and prosperity of the world. It is a curious but instructive fact that the length and frequency and destructive ness of war have declined in the ratio of the increase and effectiveness of armaments, and that when the King of Prussia takes the field with half a million of men, he is not half so formidable a foe to industry and civilization as FRANCIS L. or CHARLES V. when he went warring with his 30,000 or 40,000."
