of Gen. Schopielo's registration order (No. 34) in which he decides who is disfranchised. We have already printed the order in our telegraphic columns, and although we can hardly concur with the Dispatch in thinking that it is "as clear as Mr. STANSBERRY'S Opinion was muddy," we can have no dcubt whatever as to the mistake of the Examine in construing it so as to distranchise all but about 5,000 men in Virginia. The Whig has no comments, and the Times reserves its opinion for another time. The order in the main is based upon STANSBERRY'S opinion.

DELEGATED BENEVOLENCE.

The recent "anniversaries" at Excler Hall, n New York, Boston, and other great central points, have attracted considerable attention to species of harmless, though perhaps some what questionable amusement, annually in-dulged in by a respectable number of otherwise good enough people. Benevolence has become genteel; nay, fashionable. We are not sure that it has not, in many instances at least, we diametrically opposite sources-from the evangelicals." and from the "moral." non church going, or "non-professing" people. Now, it is not our intention to question the mo lives of any one; if we have any fault to find, t is with the ostentatious manner in which private virtue and liberality are blazened abroad to the world, in direct contravention o the Divine command.

The practices incident to the conduct of nany of these religious associations are so manifestly antagonistic to a cultivated taste, and their aims and objects so devoid of all pretensions to common sense, that they have naturally long since provoked the wits, poets, draatists, and writers of essays and novels, to satirize and ridicule them most unmercifully And, by a very natural though grave mistake, these writers confound the good and sincere, though, perhaps, a little vain and foolish, anniversarians, with the Aminadab Sleeks-the fat nd oily hypocrites. This is altogether wrong, and doing gross injustice to millions of good people.

Mr. CHADBAND, we have reason to believe is not a representative man, though we would not undertake to affirm as much of the Rev. CHARLES HONEYMAN, of Lady Whittlesen's Chapel of Ease. Mrs. Jellaby's, also, we fear, is a very correct picture. The rank and file of this faithful army seldom gives much offence, however. It is the self-constituted leaders, the men and the women who attend the anniversaries, who travel far journeys at other people's expense, make great speeches. and publish mighty reports, who usually bring odium upon the cause they advocate, and, to put it in the very mildest phrase, succeed it making themselves supremely ridiculous. Take the Peace Society, that greatest of all humbugs under the sun. We remember some years ago, under the auspices of that brigh nd shining light, ELINU BURRITT, "the learned blacksmith," this Society held what they were pleased to call a Universal Congress at Stuttgart. With a view of more thoroughly imthe Frank, and the Suavian, of the feasibility Northern exchanges, gives proof of good sense and a good spirit: "Wo see that on Saturday last, some ten thousand of the people of Richmond assembled in the cometaries of the city and vicinity to decowas the eclat of the Congress. When the war commenced in 1861, where was the Peace Society then? It was not so much as heard of Its individual members, perhaps, may have kept their "hands unsullied," by procuring substitutes, or ensconcing themselves unto "bombproof" places. But no sooner was the war ver, and the best American blood shed in tor rents, than this puling pack of canting philan thropists publish a begging circular, announ cing that they have resumed their labors, which, with charming naivete, they say, "had been sus pended during the war."

It is known that the Northern church was fiercest in its cry for war, blood and slaughter; many of its foremost ministers to this day still indulging in this vindictive spirit. Yet in that same latitude we hear of petitions for further legislative action, so as to inhibit restaurateurs and others from laying turtles on their backs. This will show how morbid and fictitious sentiment can take the place of genuine humanity and religion. BARNUM's hoa, and the rabbits it devours for breakfast, concern these silly people more than the thousands of men, women and children, white and black, suffering and dying all around them for want of the necessaries of life.

There is gomething radically defective in the whole modern system of benevolence. We are not now speaking of "poor rates," but of the numerous volunteer associations for the melioration, &c., of man and beast.

Charity is a godlike virtue, and to be commended always and everywhere. But we think it unfortunate that people should flatter themselves they are doing a meritorious deed when they listen to a public appeal, and subscribe a given amount to some philanthropic association, instead of coming into personal contact with the poor, as was the wont before the modern appliances came into vogue. The old way, we believe, was the best. It opened the heart of the giver as well as his hand, and nothing of what he gave was lost on the way; whereas charity by proxy has a great tendency to produce a callous, pharisaical feeling of self-righteousness, and to alienate, more and more, with every year, instead of drawing together, the several classes and elements of

But say, the giver has a pure motive, and preserves his heart soft and open; it is still an evil that so much of what is given in perfeet good faith is squandered. A cotemporary compares this expense attendar' on benevolent operations to the waste of force by friction in mechanics. This is shown by the workings of many foreign to lonary societies. Reports prove that the cost, to an English organization, of converting some Jews, is about £700, or $3500 per head. Here is a machine in which a majority of the power is absorbed in overcoming friction.

The friction was strikingly manifest in our State Hospital and Relief Associations during the war, where agents, superintendents and messengers, doctors, matrons and nurses, all in their turn, tithed the articles contributed in good faith, and often with tearful eyes and praying hearts, for the relief of the sick and wounded soldier. All the result of representative benevolence imperfectly organized.

Look at the American Bible Society, one of the wealthiest institutions of the kind on the continent. What a magnificent building they Mare erected watth millions now: for what? to furnish places for a number of the elect and fayored, and give power to President, Scoretary, vest. The heat few years than usual, and have out during the last few years than usual, and have had time to increase and multiply. Herring and shed are immensely abundant and are said to be flooding the markets at remarkably low prices. They constitute the only portion of our inhabitants who have led anything like quiet and peace, able lives for the last five or six years. Peace has prospared them—as it does every community. etc. One of the great boasts in their annual feat. But we should not anticipate much serious opposition. We have seen many young freedmen lately, of both vexes, entirely inno cent of letters, with ban new Testaments, thumbing them with unwashed bands. We should not be surprised if these biblical neo-phyces could be induced to accept a new Testament every Sunday morning. What a fine opening here for gratuitous distribution.

But worse than this is a govel and decidedly daring experiment on the part of the Bible Socicty's Secretary; no less than the publication with the Society's types press and money) of Apulatus' "Cupid and Psyche."
