IMPORTANT FROM LOUISIANA.

OVERNOR WELLS REMOVED BY GENERAL SHERIDAN. General Sheridan, as our readers are aware, a iow days since issued an order removing Governor Wells, of Louisiana, from office, and appointing Thomas J. Durant in his stead. Sometime ago the General deposed two rival boards of loves com-missioners, one of which had been a pointed by lovernor Wells and the other by a sec ature. The Governor there the President and Secretary of War an order reon of his order regarding the commissioners. This order was as follows:

"WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, June 3, 1867. "Major-Gen. P. H. Sheridan, New Orleans:

WASHINGTON, June 3, 1807.

"Major-Gen. P. II. Sheridan, New Orleans.

"Application having been made to the President of the United States, by the Governor of Louisiana and others, for revocation of your order removing the Beard of Levee Commissioners, and that the State authorities be permitted to proceed in the execution of the State laws, the President directs that all further proceedings be suspended unti for their instructions. You will please report the facts in relation to your order with the creasons for giving it.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War."

On the strength of this interference with the workings of the reconstruction law, General Sheridan immediately issued the following order:

"His Excellency the Governor of Louisiana, J. Madison Wells, having made himself an impediment to the faithful execution of the act of Congress of March 2, 1867, by directly and indirectly impeding the General in command in the faithful execution of the law, is bereby removed from the office of Governor of Louisiana, and Mr. Thomas J. Durant of the law, is bereby removed from the office of Governor of Louisiana, and Mr. Thomas J. Durant appointed thereto. Mr. Durant will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

After the edjournment the Governor appointed a board of his own, in violation of this act, and made the acknowledgment to General Sheridau that his object was to disburse the money in the interest of his own party by securing for it votes at the time of election. The old board refused to turn over its papers to the new board, and appealed to General Sheridan to sustin it, which he would not do, as the question would then have gone to the courts and have taken a year to decide. The State was then overflowed and poor people suffering. To abate this trouble and afford in modiate relief, which the boards disbursement of four millions would give, an order dissolving both boards was issued.

millions would give, an order dissolving both boards was issued."

Of Governor Wells the General eays:

'I say now unequivocally that Governor Wells is a political trickster and a disunionist. I have seen him myself, when I first came to this command, turn out all the Union men who supported the Government, and put in their stead robol solders, some of whom of mand, turn out all the Lubin men who supported the Government, and put in their stead rebel solders, some of whom had not doffed the gray uniform. I have seen him again during the July riet of 1866, skulk away where I could not find him to give him a guerd, instead of coming out as a manly representative of the State and Joining those who were desirous of prescring the peace. I have watched him since, and his conduct has been as sinuous as the mark left in the dust by the movement of a snake. I say again, that he is dishonest, and dishonesty is more than must be expected of me."

Ritualism in England.

SCENE AT THE DISHOF OF SALISBURY VISITATION.

The Bishop of Salisbury held his tricunial visitation at Bridport, England, on the 16th of Anywhen there was a large attendance of clergy and churchwardens. When he came to the subject of absolution, he said there was a time to speak and a time to keep silence; and be believed the time for being outspoken had arrived in his diocese, and he had, without any mental reservation, God knew, acted on that conviction. At this point the Rev. Was C. Templer, the rector of Burton Bradstock; stepped from his seat into the aisle in front of his Lordship, at dexclaimed with nuch fervor, "I believe there is a time to speak and a time to be silent; let those that are on the Lord's side follow mey," and he turned and walked out of the

This scene created a profound impression, and the Bishop was for a moment apparently much disconcerted. Intonse silence provailed for a minute or two, and then the Bishop said, "I would only remind you that this is a court, and the clergy are bound to attend it, though their consciences are not bound to receive all they hear. Of course a person may be punished for any contempt of court."

are not bound to recoive all they hear. Of course a person may be punished for any contempt of court."

He then proceeded with the reading of his the charge, but before he had concluded, though he omitted what he said would occupy several bours', realing, every churchwarden had loft the church, and the clergy manifected signs of wariness. In the afternoon the churchwardens held a meeting, and adopted the following address to the Bishop, which was signed by thirty-four of them:

"hy Lord: As church wardens of the several parishes within your diocess, we have this day at the charge delivered by you to your clergy. M. John Lemoine, the distinguished editor of the M. John Lemons, the distinguished editor of the Journat des Bebats, contributes an article on the English in Paris for "Paris-Guide." While he ap-pears to have a fair knowledge of his subject, and holds up to ridicule some of the olden prejudices of his nation as regards England and the English his very lively and interesting picture must be re garded as a caricature rather than a portrait itill we have no doubt he endeavored to be true to the original—giving way to his sprightly fancy only when tempted to make a mot. The French have a fatal foible for opigram and pointed antithesis, and they not unfrequently make the truth of history bend to these petty concelts and ornamental drapories.

But the performances of M. Lestoine are entirely thrown into the shade by the brilliant fancy, the entire originality of a brother editor, M. Edmond Texten, who paints a most Arcadian picture of America in his paper, Le Stecie. The following paragraphs, which we extract, read more like Monresquieu's Lettres Persanes, or the Arabian Nights, than a bona fide picture of our eminently practical and unpoetic republic. He says:

In North America, a vast, sterile, and uncultivated territory, where royalty has nover been able to take root, they have not the brilliant spectacle we behold in Europe. There is danger, even, that ore long the race of office-holders (a rare animal in the United States) will pass away altogether I have just read in a New York paper that Presi-dent Johnson, having to nominate a Governor for dent Jounson, naving to nominate a tovernor for Virginia, could not find a man who was willing to take the office. Every man the President ap-proached on the subject, invariably replied: "Monsieur le President, I am flattered at the offer which you have just made me, but I have my own little matters which require my presence at home. You had better try, M. Ic President, to find some do than to give his time to the service of the State. As for myself, I am in a hurry, and have the honor to bid you good morning." And the President is still on the lookout. He is searching a Governor, and can find none. Barbarous cour

How different with us ! Here the Government need not light a lantern, like Drognes and Pre-sident Jourson, to find a man, I beg pardon, a candidate for office. There are always a crowd of them at hand, soliciting places. In fact there are more than are wanted. A hundred applicants or a single vacancy.

M. Texies is evidently well informed on Ameri can matters. To think of all the trouble poor Jounson has had to find candidates for his offices The Courrier des Etats Unis sets seriously to work to prove that the French editor did not know what to was writing about, says that M. Texten ought to have known that the President has not the right to nominate a Governor of Virginia, that if he had cnown anything at all of American affairs he could not have been ignorant of the fact that offices pay botter here than in any o.her country; that there are many men in office with $3000 a year salary who, nevertheless, manage to make $18,000 a year

Similar blunders can be found daily almost in every one of the Paris journals. This, however, should not be surprising when it is considered that in Eugland, where the means of information on American effairs are far superior, mistakes no less serious are constantly made; not from ignocance of those who give them utterance, but rather through design, and presuming upon the gnorance of those to whom America is held up as the model Republic. Thus Mr. BRIGHT, in a recent argument in the House of Commons, in favor of universal suffrage, pointed to America as the country where the experiment had been tried with the most signal success; and the proof that the ple could be trusted with power, he stated, ald be seen in the fact that they always selected the best men for the most honored and respons ter, and so does Mr. Mill, but, nevertheless, thes false assertions answer a purpose, and they are

CAMPAIGNING IN THE SOUTH.—Political campaigning in the Bouth is deprecated by many of the Republican journals North, who see in the agitation created by Radical orators, the promise of an abundant crop of dire results. According to them, the various military districts are to be converted into areas, in which the various factions that divide the people are "to put their political gladiators to fight out the irreconcilable bitterness of party hate," making the South a second Kansas on a large scale. Says one of them:

The excitement of that scene stimulated party life through the whole country, and kept up a political fury that drove us to the great extreme of the war. Now this agitation is to be transferred to the Southern States. They are to become the theatre of the same sort of political drama that must be more exciting as the scene is larger, as the passions are more intense, as the results expected must be greater, and as there are more cities to be burned and throats to be cut, before those results can become attainable to either party. It is casy for the North, quietly looking on, speciators of the terrible struggle, to see what must be the inevitable issue. We tes a people down by military law—we tell them that their States have no political existence just now, that they are only free to pursue the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rether than the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rether that they does not be the results can be cone attentions or ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rether that they are only free to pursue the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rether that they are only free to pursue the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rether the course of business and social life, and must leave the rether that they are only free to pursue the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave have no political existence just now, that they are only free to pursue the ordinary course of business and social life, and must leave the rest alone. They acquiesce and go on as quietly as heart could wish, eager only to be quiet—grateful for rest from political turmoil, and for the chance to cultivate their fields. But, presto! before the ink of our military laws is dry, we let loose on them political missionaries, propagandists, agitators, to start again that very political life that we have said must for the present be extinct. We show them that they may go into politics as much as they like, if they will go in on the right side, and we hint broadly that we are ready to distribute Southern lands freely to the class that will bid highest for them in Republican vetes. Congress should come to the rescue on this point. It should certainly assemble in July, and take measures to provide against political campaigning in districts not politically free, but subject to military law."
