She has been visiting most of the members of Congress, and has been quite successful. -"Jean Paul," in the New York Citizen, says: "Certainly if Dickens be the artist that the loudmouthed dailies says he is, I am an idiot." Most people will assuredly agree with "the loud-mouthed dailies," even in view of the dilemma in which "Jean Paul" places himself. -The N. O. Picayune says : General J. B. Hood is now located in Galveston, as we see it paragraphed in a great many papers. He spends most of his time here, where he has his principal business house, and is sometimes in Galveston, which, as a Texan, he claims as his home, and where he has a branch of his house here. -The Florida Railroad, between Fernandina and Cedar Keys, is to be placed in good order speedily, and that a line of first-class steamers, one from Fernandina to New York the other from Cedar Keys to New Orleans, are to be established forthwith. It is expected that large quantities of cotton will be shipped from Mcbile and New Orleans via Cedar Keys and Fernandina this winter.

-The Suez canal is again looming up in our foreign intelligence. M. de Lesseys, who has it in charge, in a lecture on the Suez canal, recently given at Nice, stated that the contractors were bound to terminate the work by the first of September, 1869, under a penalty of $100,000 a month for any delay. He had received news that a steamer had passed through the Isthmus. The canal company has land to be sold of the value of $30,-000,000.

of their ganders, and bet a sovereign on the question. The defeated farmer paid the bet and bought the rival gander, which died the next day. On opening it, it was discovered that the man had won his wager by administering to the wretched gander two pounds of small shot. The Huddersfield magistrates assessed this act of cracity at that it shall increase its popularity and, in the 10s., which was paid, so that the ruffian netted 10s. by the cruel fraud.

-An English journal says: "Civilization has not given a Dorsetshire laborer much except lucifer matches and the penny post; suppose, as its next step, it gives the power of swift travel, first for his thoughts and afterwards for himself? Tell a Wick fisherman that he can telegraph to his salesman at Aberdeen and Leith for three pence, and reach either place for a farthing a mile, and he will at least feel that the State means to him something besides police and judges, that it can aid as well as restrain, lift as well as level."

-Ste. Marie, who will be remembered as the instrument of the arrest of John H. Surratt in Italy, and who was one of the witnesses against the prisoner during the trial last summer, has filed his claim for the full reward offered for the arrest of the parties implicated in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, General King, of Wisconsin, who was Minister to Rome at the time of Surratt's arrest, but who is now in this country, says that when he gave Ste. Marie money to bear his exenses to this country, the informer remarkel that he was now even with Surratt for having supplanted him in the affections of a young lady in Marvland, that he had long desired revenge and that he now hoped to obtain it.

-A correspondent gives the following description of the musical part of the service in a church near Carlisle, England : "When the psalm is given out, the clergyman tunes a small violin, and having afterwards touched a bass fiddle, hands the larger instrument over to one of the parishioners. Each then draws his bow across the strings, and, all being in order, the player of the bass gives out the verses to be sung, the two musicians are joined by a few parishioners, and the small party go through the psalm. The clergyman then abandons the violin, returns to the reading desk until another psalm requires him to resume his instrument, and again goes through the tuning process preparatory to the psalm singing."

-The Courant, of Rotterdam, makes a new point against capital punishment. It says the gallows is too expensive an institution to be maintained by a small State. In the last budget of the Minister of Justice one item to 7046 floring for pay and pensions to executioners. As sentences of capital punishment are, on the average, only carried out in Holland once in ten years, each execution may be said to cost 70,400 florins for executioners alone, not reckoning other expenses. The cost of a prisoner to the State, on the other hand, is fifty cents a day, and supposing that he is detained for twenty years, which is the maximum period, in prison, he would have cost 3650 florins only, or about a twentieth of the sum he would have cost if he had been executed. Thus, according to the Courant, the dispute about capital punishment has an economic as well as an humanitaman side, and can be argued as a simple question

-A foreign paper relates the following anecdote: "M. Bosco, the well-known conjuror spent the winter of 1858-59 in Berlin, and was one day summoned to appear at the palace, in order to exhibi his art before the present King, at that time Prince Regent, and the court. Among other apparatus he had a terrestrial globe, upon which Pruszia was made to appear extremely small. Bosco advanced to the Prince, who was sitting on an armchair in the front row, and asked him to take the globe in his hands. The Prince did so. when, to his astonishment, the formerly little Prussia began to assume much larger dimensions. 'Your royal highness perceives,' said Bosco, 'how Prussia will become aggrandized under your hands.' The trick was loudly applauded at the time, but little did the spectators imagine that

As a consequence 2400 do tors find employment. London, finally, supports 852 churches, which are presided over by 930 divines of greater or less note. It is also computed that the average extension of London is at the rate of two miles of finished buildings per day. The need of this rapid construction can be stimated when it is known that the railroad improvements projected, and now being constructed, will, during the present year, necessitate the removal of 20,000 dwelling houses. A majority of these are inhabited by the industrial classes.

Examples in Journalism

In conducting a live daily newspaper one People are fond of running in old grooves, and of clinging to customs which have no other claim to respect than their venerable age; but scribed some new practical invention which ergetic neighbor does that which old Rip Van Winkle would never have dreamed of, the advantages of a progressive spirit become sudmade about accommodation to the public and the appreciation of the necessities of the times. But it is to the reformer himself and not to his half-awakened disciples that the honor and credit is due. No praise can be won by the daily newspaper of 1867 only because it is superior to the paper of 1767, any more than news than was contained in the extraordinary gazettes which bore to anxious England the tidings of the defeat of the Grand Armada. The true and worthy aim is to be ahead of the competitors in the daily race,-to show more are taxed the same as with us. The tax was as- activity and spirit than is shown by them, -to sessed on 301,281 noimals in 1856; in 1866 the num- be more fully alive than they are to the value of constant improvement and the worth of salutary change. These are the things to be worked for; and, when those who do rot know how to originate, drowsily imitate the course of action of the apostle of advancement, the first fruits of labor have been plucked and the practicability of the new and shorter path is amply vindicated.

There are now three newspapers in the world whose daily circulation is counted by the hundred thousand. First is the "Petit Journal," published at one cent in Paris; second is the Daily Telegraph," published at two cents in London; third is the "Daily News," published at one cent in New York City. This last named has the largest circulation on this continent and prints daily thirty thousand copies in excess of the number issued by the New York "Herald."

Charleston is neither Paris, nor London, nor New York; but the example is before us, and the CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS shall be in Charleston in point of enterprise, as it is already in circulation, what the journals already named are found to be in the cities in which they are published.

The activity and spirit of the CHARLESTON News is already producing its effect. Its contemporaries have seen the necessity of proving that length of years does not always cause loss of vitality and strength; and, making a virtue of necessity, our venerable neighbor the "Courier" has taken warning by our reduction of the subscription price of the News to six -Two men in England disputed as to the weight | dollars a year, and has given notice that after instead of ten.

> Our neighbor, the "Courier," has done well to follow our example; and, if it will follow in the track marked out by us, we will promise Southern States, be second only to the NEWS The public will appreciate the reduction in rates as well as the reduction in size; and will bear in mind that the NEWS is not only giving them a first-class daily paper at six dollars a year, but has enabled them to save two dollars upon each copy of the "Courier" for which they may desire to subscribe So the News is not only the exemplar of Progress in itself but the cause of progress in others. After a time our city contemporaries may imitate our admirable system of weekly subscriptions, and give to their subscribers such an Extra as that distributed with the News of yesterday;ch a they may open their eyes to the propriety and necessity of giving their readers a paper upon every day in the year, "printers' bolidays" included; in the meanwhile, and always, we wish them both every success not incompatible with #### our own interests. Southern Mechanics.

The progress of the late war and the en forcement of the blockade of the Southern ports made the South depend on home ingenuity, and home manufactures, for such things as could not be imported at a price that placed them within the reach of all classes, or which could not be obtained in sufficient quantities or at the time when they were most required. Without warning and without preparation the South was thrown upon her own resources; and the ingenuity of her people in every department of manufactures, and in suggesting substitutes for articles which had been considered altogether indispensable, gave ample evidence that the Southerners were no less practical and ingenious than the artisan and mechanic of the Northern and Eastern States. Appliances of war of course received the greatest attention; and the iron-clad Virginia, the "Brooke" gun, the percussion-cap machine, the fuse-igniter, the breech-loading rifle, the rifled gun, powder mills, foundries and machine shops were born of the innate though sometimes dormant inventive faculties of the people. Many minor manufacturing matters were modified or improved, and the whole war went to show that it only required that the Southern mind should be directed to mechanical subjects to insure results equal to, if not beyond, any which have ever been attained in the North. The war gave the impetus and propelling force, and the new life and new vigor live, though the war itself is over. At the late Agricultural Fair in Danville, Va., there were on exhibition a variety of mechanical inventions, two or three of which were regarded as not only worthy of special mention but also as fully deserving the gold medals which were unanimously awarded them. One of the most important of tuese inventions was a hydraulic press, with improvements invented and patented by Mr. M. H. CLARK, of Danville. It was built in the town and was a masterly piece of work. The press itself is stationary, the pressure is relieved by two minutes. Its whole management has been simplified, and the machine. simplified, and the machinery does not occupy more than a third of the space required by the ordinary hydraulic press, nor does the Southern press require more than half the usual power to work it. This press is, however, surpassed in ingenuity by an engraving machine patented by Guer-RAUB & FIELDS of Pittsylvania and Rockingham. No machine had ever before been invented which would successfully take the what was intended as a courtly jest was destined place of the hand in the process of engraving.

A SEMI-MONTHLY JOURNAL OF MEDICINE, SURGERY, to become political earnest within seven years from Hundreds of efforts in that direction have been made and have failed, but, by patient -In London the houses number more than 350,- labor, two Virginians have solved the prob-000, and the streets, if placed in line, would ex- lem and invented a machine of which the tend from Liverpool to New York, and are lighted accuracy and precision are wonderful. On chine will copy any model, it can engrave in "relief" or in "intaglio." Seventy-five thousand dollars have already been refused for this invention, and it must be remembered that it was invented by Southerners, made by Southerners in a Southern State, and is owned by Southern men.

Mr. J. F. Zacharias, of Leesburg, has invented a machine for directing newspapers which will work a revolution in this department of all printing establishments. He has received a patent for his "Champion Newspaper Addresser," with which from three thousand eight hundred to four thousand papers can be directed per hour. He has also an addition to this machine by which he feels confident from ten thousand to twelve thousand papers can be directed in the same time. This important invention will soon be given to the public.

These are but three instances among many; but they are cheering and to the point. The South has had the ingenuity, the skill and the invention;-she now has poverty to compel her example is better than a thousand precepts. to strain every nerve in the race of improvement. South Carolina is not behind her sister States, and it is hoped that soon will be dewhen the positive example is given and an en- will give profit to its inventors and add to the prosperity of this State and of the whole South.

MEDICINE AND SURGERY.

THE PHILADELPHIA UNIVERSITY OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY was organized in 1848. Chartered by the Legislature, February 26, 1853. Name changed by a legislative enactment to the Eclectic Nedical College, of Philadelphia, in 1860. In 1863 it purchased the Pennsylvania Medical College, established in 1342, and the Philadelphia Medical College, which had previously been merged into the Pennsylvania Medical College. In 1864 it purchased the Penn Medical University. The Trustees of the separate schools united, peditioned and obtained a special Act of the Legislature, consolidating these institutions and challed university of Medicine and Surgery, March 15, 1865. All these various Acts are published in the statutes of Pennsylvania. The cost of the Iuliding and museum was over one hundred thousand dollars. It will be observed that the University, as now organized, is the legal representative of the four Medical Colleges that it has absorbed. It is a liberal school of medicine, confined to no dogma, nor attached to any medical cliques, but embraces in its teaching everything of value to the profession.
