MONDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 30, 1867.

The State Convention

In General Orders No. 160, which will be ound in full in another column together with the names of the delegates, it 's directed that the delegates elected to the State Convention at the recent elections shall assemble in this city, at noon on Tuesday, the 14th January next, "for the purpose of fr.ming a constitution and civil government' according to the Reconstruction acts.

The delegates are one hundred and twentyfour in number, fifty-five being white and sixtynine colored.

The Decapitated. The news from Washington this morning makes it plain enough that the President means to be President. The signal rebuke which the people of the North have everywhere given at the polls to the infamous schemes of the Radical destructives, and the miserable failure of impeachment on the floors of Congress, have doubtless nerved Mr. Johnson to sharp and decisive action, in cases where the public good seemed to require it. Of the specific complaints against Generals Pope and ORD we are not informed; but we are satisfied the officers appointed to succeed them, while no whit their inferiors in patriotism and gallantry, will prove competent to administer the affairs of the Third and Fourth Military Districts with far more success, in the interests of conciliation, good order, and the general welfare of whites and blacks alike.

General Scott and the Freedmen.

It is very much to be feared that General Scorr has taken too much for granted in coming to the conclusion, as expressed in his official report published in the News of Saturday, that "the question of free labor is no longer problematical," and that all that is necessary, on the part of the planters in this State, "to make the freedpeople as good if not a better class of agricultural laborers than can be introduced into this section, is to show by their treatment of them that they intend to pursue a fair and high-minded course in all their dealings."

There is no doubt that the negro can work, and that he knows how to work to advantage. this fact; and, if the same crops cannot be raised under the free labor system, it must be because free labor in the South is uncertain, and costly, and therefore unremunerative. In those countries in which only free labor exists there is a mutual dependence on the part of both master and person employed. The massupply is such that the negligence or dishonesty of the person employed can be punished by summary dismissal; so that the fear of loseason to deter the laborer from doing his and done at once,-travellers will pour in upon work in a slovenly or uscless manner. On the 400 acres, valued at $12,000, having an apple and other hand, the laborer is protected against will improve, and every man will feel the faany oppression by the existence of equal laws, and, as the rate of wages is regulated by sup- and the outlay of new capital. ply and demand, he can always avoid imposition or trickery. But with the free negro it is wholly different. He was suddenly emancipa--Housebreaking is greatly on the increase in ted, and as suddenly received the right to labor for his own benefit. Subsequently he received political privileges equal to those of the white race. He was dependent still on the white man who had the capital; and he would have worked faithfully and well had he not arvation and plagic. They are almost entirely been taught assiduously that the white races of the South were his enemies, and that he ould be supported in any difference that ming into vogue inight arise between himself and them. But if a just and impartial civil government is once restored, and the military authorities are restrained from all interference in civil affairs, the negro can be made to work, and will work, so as to benefit both himself and his employer. General Scorr says that in this State there were a large number of planters "who took every opportunity to defraud the laborer and discharge him without fair remuneration," and that "injustice was shown by planters in set-These expressions must have been well weighed tlement under the contracts of last season." and considered by General Scott, and they must have been founded upon information that he has received. No cases of the kind have. however, come to our knowledge, nor are any referred to in any of the District papers. Yet, as there are good and bad in all communities, there must be good and bad in Carolina; and it is not unreasonable to assume that there House Committee on Military Affairs to reduce the are men in this State who would endeavor by sharp-dealing to recover the losses to which war and force had exposed them.

But, while making this admission, we do not hesitate to say most emphatically that any man who treats the negro in any other than a just and honorable manner will be condemned at without fear of contradiction, that the feeling of the vast majority of people in this State is wholly opposed to any policy or action that would deprive the negro of one iota of the reward to which by his work he is entitled.

The cases referred to by General Scott are the exceptions and not the rule, and it is due to ourselves and to him that, in this matter, there should not exist even an apparent misrepresentation. Unless the negroes have confidence in their employers, negro labor will be valueless, and that the negroes may have this confidence is proved by the conduct of nine out of every ten men who have made any engagements with them.

The Tourist, the Invalid and the Pleasure Seeker Should Spend Winter and Spring

When the cold season has set in and winter in all its rigor has fairly begun, crowds of pleasure-seekers, invalids and valetudinarians take their departure for the South. They leave the North with its freezing cold, its bitter sleet, its falling snow, its blocked roads and impassable streets, and make their home until know the extreme bitterness of a hard frost, and where, during January itself, they may wear their lightest dress and enjoy all the pleasures of a life in the open air.

Year by year hundreds of pleasure-seekers and health-seekers have, at Christmas time hurried to the Crescent City of Louisiana, to and Carolina, the home of the Palmetto. There they were accustomed to find gaiety or quiet, bustling business or peaceful solitude, and always, health, security and comfort.

But this cannot now be done! New Orleans has been scourged by yellow fever, and the and consists chiefly in the arrival and departure of New Orleans, is for this year stricken from the colliers from Philadelphia and Georgetown, and list of Southern cities to which the Northerner or European may safely travel; and that which is true of New Orleans is, in the same manner, true of Mobile. This latter city has not escaped, and deaths from cholera are re ported every day. Strangers are afraid to go to Mobile. They know that, seeking life, they may find death; and Mobile also must be taken from the roll.

Florida and Charleston, however, remain and both State and city retain advantages which are not enjoyed in the same degree by any other city or State of the South. Charles ton itself has one of the finest climates in the world. There has been no fever here for years, the deaths among the white adult popu lation, from all causes, do not exceed ten per week, statistical tables show that the yearly mortality in Charleston has always been less than in London, Paris, Edinburgh, or any city of her own size in the United States. The air is warm and balmy, the city is well cleaned and policed, the community is orderly and law-

Then, again, Charleston is an inexpensive city in which to live. Rents are low, the mar kets are good, there are excellent and reasons ble hotels for the who do not keep house. There is no large theatre in the city; but our ijou theatre at the Hibernian Hall is seldom vacant, and not a week passes that some "star" company, or travelling exhibition does not give both visitor and resident the means of pleasantly passing their time. There is excellent sport for the huntsman,-in the woods there are deer, in the marshes and low-lands are found water-fowl and small game in abundance. The angler need never be idle for the harbor and rivers contain nearly every kind of fish. There are churches and chapels of all denominations, whose pulpits are filled by learned and eloquent preachers. There are public institutions which, in even these times, are worthy of examination and notice. There is ruined Sumter, and Battery Wagner, and Moultrie, and Sullivan's Island, and the historical church of St. Michael's, and a hundred other spots that will interest the tourist, from whatever place he may come.

Above all, Florida and Charleston can be easily, safely, and cheaply reached. From the North there is the Ansmessic route via Portsmouth and Weldon and the Northeastern Railroad, as well as the direct land line by Washington, Richmond, Petersburg and the North eastern Railroad. There is also a line of steamships from Boston, another from Baltimore, a third from Philadelphia, as well as three regular lines from New York City. In leaving Charleston there is the South Carolina Railroad, to Columbia and Augusta connecting with all points East, West, North and South, and the Northeastern Railroad for Wilmington and Weldon, and the North and East, direct. For Florida and Savannah there are three lines of steamers, and regular steamers leave at stated times for Georgetown and the islands.

Charleston, then, is the one Southern city in which the tourist or invalid can find the comforts and pleasures of a metropolis, as well as a climate as balmy as that of Madeira, and more healthy in this season than the hills and valleys of Virginia. Florida is almost at our doors and offers a warm welcome to every stranger, tempting the traveller by the perfumes of her orange groves, the purity of her tmosphere, and the rippling of her pellucid streams. The ocean is in front with its fresh and invigorating breezes. Georgia and North Carolina are at our backs with their claims for patronage and support.

Let these things be made known, let Charleston emerge from her solitude and tell the world what she is, let Florida raise her voice in beus, money will circulate more freely, trade vorable influence of an influx of fresh faces
