died, as a wounded hero dies, on the field of victory. Will Dr. MACKEY's Republican schoolreplied that he would have felt highly honored to have the chief magistrate of the nation present, and regretted that the public busiiess was so pressing as to prevent his attendance. After a very pleasant conversation, in which the President paid Mr. Dickens a graceful compliment, the latter withdrew, highly gratified with his call. In the President's ante-room Mr. Dickens and Major-General Frank Blair were introduced. At first neither recognized the other, but after the introduction General Blair reminded Mr. Dickens of the fact that twenty-six years ago they met in St. Louis and were in company on a hunting expedition on the prairies. Their meeting was exceedingly pleasant.

Libel Argued and Illustrated.

The chairman of the Club House Convention has fairly laid himself out in his speech on the law of libel. It was intended to be a great effort, legal, learned, loyal, sensational. It is in fact a failure, because vention. wanting in moderation of judgment and temper, and having no historic ground for many of its assertions. Dr. MACKEY has had some reputation for learning and claims to be a Conservative. A few more speeches like that of last Friday will effectually wither his laurels. We call attention to some of its misstatements.

The speaker misrepresented the historic status of the judiciary. He warned the convention against submitting to the decision of judges-"judges," he said, "who, from time immemorial, with few exceptions, have always been on the side of oppression from the locometive, a short distance west of and tyranny." We might reply that it can be established only in those cases where throne, as in the days of the STUARTS, when the monarch might, at will, displace the judge. But even in the dark days of tyranny, there were noble exceptions; as when the English courts remonstrated against illegal imprisonments; when they boldly disregarded the King's letters, and when, on other important occasions, they displayed exemplary independence and devotion in the discharge of their official duties. (Hallam Constitutional History, pp. 139, 199, 242). And in later years, as even foreign and hostile writers attest, when the ermine was independent of the crown, the judges were the very bulwark of English liberty, preserving in their administration, whether of civil or criminal affairs, the confidence, esteem and attachment of the public.

So far as our own judiciary is concerned, there is no lawyer at the bar who, having a good case, would not rather bring it into a court of equity, where a judge alone has to decide upon it, than subject it to the uncertain decision of a jury. This notorious fact is a sufficient refutation of Dr. MACK

That Dr. MACKEY's acquaintance with the judiciary is not very intimate, appears further from his reference to the Star Chamber, whose establishment he assigns to the age of HENRY VII., and of whose reestablishment, in our day, he seems painfully apprehensive. The fact is that the Star Chamber is named as being already in existence in the reign of EDWARD III. Its powers were defined and enlarged, aral Howard, Commissioner of the simply, under HENRY VII. It was formerly masters and colleagues thank him for this aspersion upon the fame of one of their greatest men ? On the other hand, what will they say of his commendation of the nullifier, Mr. MADISON, as "that profound statesman ?" Finally, Dr. MACKEY misrepresents us, when he warns the convention against establishing a code and precedent for the conduct of judges, which, he says, "perhars at a time not far distant, will be of avail to those who oppress you." We should like to inquire who among us is oppressing the African or the convention. The charge is simply absurd. But enough for the present. We may have something more to say in regard to the great speech on libel. In the meantime let the Doctor leave law, and return to Masonry. A man may make a good thing of Masonry, and yet get floored at the bar. The legend is not the ground of legislation. The hierophant of the crypt may get beyond his cable-tow in the con-To Bent.

Freedmen's Bureau, has issued a circular letter, directing that all officers of the bureau be- name from the star ornaments on the ceillow the rank of Major, who were ordered to be | ing of one of the royal apartments where mustered out on the 1st of January last, be re- it sat. This court was dissolved by 16 Car. tained and placed upon the rolls, and be paid salary as agents, which is $170 a month. He has also assigned certain disbursing officers to Kentucky, to pay the back pay of colored soldiers, and invested them with authority as officers of his bareau.

-The members of the Iowa Legislature having voted themselves forty copies of daily papers, some of them, to show their gratitude to their constituents, and to do a handsome thing, caused the Des Moines State Register to be sent to their friends, but the Iowans, not understanding it, have refused to receive them. "They hadn't subscribed for that paper, and they wasn't agoin' to pay for it." The proprietors have published a statement explaining the generosity of their legislators, and inviting the people to take hold.

-The number of the sovereigns of Europe is thirty-eight, viz: Three emperors, the Sultan, the Pope, ten kings, two queens, six grand-dukes, five dukes, and ten princes. The oldest of these is the Pope, who is seventy- bound to respect." It has been proved, over five. After him come the King of Prussia and the Duke of Anhalt, both of whom are over seventy. The average age of the European sovereigns is forty-four years, and twenty-two of them have already exceeded that age. Four sovereigns are unmarried beside the Pope, namely, the King of Bavaria, the Duke of Brunswick, and the two Princes of Lichtenstein and Beuss (senior line).

-In Paris this winter sledges have been more numerous than formerly; some of them are fantastic and even artistic in their decorations. The demi-monde, as usual, take the lead in this ocomotive novelty; their sledges are sometimes adorned with a carefully-modelled swan flying cupids, grotesque dragons, and such wits as appear to have their origin in Russian models. The fair drivers adopt coquettish hats and expensive furs, and certainly obtain the main object in view, namely, conspicuous notoriety. The carriages of the aristocracy drive round the frozen waters, and in elegant toilettes the ladies walk down to the borders of the lake and watch the animated scene. The Emperor and the court visit the Bois de Boulogne daily. The Seine continues to present the same snowy-white aspect, and the thickness of the ice has considerably increased.

_A letter from Tauris, of the 12th November, in the Moniteur, gives some details of the marriage of Mosaffer Eddin Mirza, heir to the throne of Persia. The prince is only sixteen years old, and the princess of the same age. The princess occupied thirty-three days in her journey from Teheran to Tauris. The corlege was preceded by about a hundred beasts of burden, horses, mules, or camels, carrying servants, carpets, tents, and the outfit of the bride; then followed a number of led horses covered with magnificent housings, and next the carriage containing the princess, who was invisible to all eyes behind the mabogany blinds. The procession was accompanied by violins, trumpets and tambourines, mingling their sounds with the military band sent from Teheran. Then came mules carrying palanquins closed with curtains and containing the women of the the legislation of all lands under tribute, princess' suite.

-At 11 o'clock on Thursday Charles Dickens called at the executive mansion to pay his respects to President Johnson. The President expressed his thanks to Mr. Dickens for his vent supplication for his country, and who courtesy in inviting the President and fam- with the cry "Independence forever"- the privy council of the King, deriving its 1, 10, about two hundred and twenty-seven years ago. One is simply amused at Dr. MACKEY's apprehension that this court will be renewed after such a lapse of time, or will be established in a country where it never has existed. The military courts are the only tribunals which have the Star Chamber irresponsibility, the two-fold prerogative of arbitrary monarchy-the right to judge and the right to command armies. But against these courts our modern patrict says never a word !

Again, Dr. MACKEY misrepresents the Supreme Court and the late Chief Justice TANEY. "whose name," he says, "is embalmed in eternal infamy." Of him it is said that he rendered the decision in the Dred Scot' ise declaring that "the black man had no rights that white men were and over again, that Chief Justice TANHY said no such thing. The malicious and cruel scandal was invented for political effect, and is still used for that purpose. Notwithstanding the exposure of the falsehood, it is persistently repeated by the ene mies of that great jurist and of the Southern people, whose views he in some sort is supposed to have expressed, as if the mere persistent repetition of a libel will force men to accept it as a truth. Justice TANEY simply said, as any one can learn who will take the trouble to read the Dred Scott decision, that at the time when the Africans were seized in their own country and brought to ours both by Americans and Europeans, and when they were sold as slaves by their captors, the opinion prevailed that they had no rights that white men were bound to respect. This was a notorious historic fact, not a judicial decree at all. And the infamy of its promulgation, as a decree, must therefore rest upon those who represent it as such, now. It does not adhere to the Supreme Court, nor to that venerable and illustrious man upon whom the mantle of Chief Justice MARSHALL fell. Dr. MACKEY also misrepresents the character and administration of JOHN ADAMS, which he designates as corrupt and oppressive. He charges the Judges of the Supreme Court of that day with being the willing tools of a tyrant, as "applying unwilling tools of a tyrant, as "applying un-constitutional laws upon the people." In such terms does he describe the early cham-pion of liberty, that noble patriot, to whom Wreezer assigns the famous speech "sink WEBSTER assigns the famous speech "sink | 15th instant. or swim," etc., which, for nigh half a century, has thrilled the hearts of the American people-that eminent jurist, who laid that he might vindicate, enrich and embellish our republican institutions-that great public spirit, who blended with the last prayers that trembled on his lips, the fer-January 31
