During the discussion in the United States Senate, in the case of Senator Thomas, General Lee was referred to as follows: Mr. Cameron said that he was informed, by a gentleman in whom he placed confidence, that General Lee, having received an intimation that he might have command of the Federal to insert his finger in the political pudding and army, had assured him of his entire loyalty draw therefrom a very large plum. In doing and devotion to the country. Cameron then this a speech is always necessary, and many consulted General Scott, who approved of allowances must be made for the inexperienced placing Lee at the head of the army, and the aspirants. There is said to be no manner of place was offered to Lee officially, with the approbation of General Scott; but Lee went to Virginia on a false pretense of seeing his family, and never came back. Cameron added that he would have arrested Lee if he had had a chance, but never expected that he would act perfidiously.

Mr. Johnson doubted the truth of this very much. (Laughter). Gentlemen might laugh, but he would inform the gentleman who indulged in merriment (Mr. Conness), that Lee was as honorable a man as any man to be found in California.

THE CONVENTION.

CONVENTION HELD BY AUTHORITY OF THE RECONSTRUCTION LAWS OF CONGRESS, TO FRAME A STATE CONSTITUTION FOR SOUTH CAROLINA.

The proceedings yesterday were intensely airy-that is to say, the pulmonary apparatus had free play, and performed unceasingly. It would not be fair to state that the speeches were "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing," for the debate at times exhibited the best powers of the several speakers. Much, however, was said for buncombe. The nominating caucuses are in full blast; everybody is expect ing an office, and everybody naturally desires doubt that J. M. Rutland will soon be the Senator elect, and his speech yesterday in opposistead question, shows the metal of which his heavy artillery is composed. It is evident that he dont't belong to the crowd who take to "bomb-proofs."

About eighty sections of the new constitution have thus far been adopted. The convention cannot probably get through with their work in less than two weeks.

B. F. Randolph, from the Committee ou Miscellancous Affairs, introduced the following ordinance, which was prepared and submitted by Joseph Crews (white), of Laurens.

Be it ordained, &c., That it shall be the duty of the legislature, at its first session hereafter, to appoint commissioners to investigate and ascertain what obligations of the State are entitled to be held as valid and binding upon the titled to be held as valid and binding upon the State, in conformity to the provisions of this constitution, and the ordinances adopted by constitution, and the ordinances adopted by this convention, and to report thereon to the legislature; and until the legislature shall have ascertained the validity of such obligations, no payment of either principal or interest shall be made on any outstanding obligation created and incurred prior to April 29, 1865.

The ordinance received its first reading, was ordered to be printed, and was made the special order for Wednesday next at 12 M.

The convention resumed the consideration

cial order for Wednesday next at 12 M.

The convention resumed the consideration of the unfinished business, which was section 35, providing a homestoad, &c.

Mr. B. F. Whittemore addressed the body at length. He contended first that in its present length. He contended first that in its present shape the section was retrospective in its character, and that, being retrospective and an expost facto law, it was unconstitutional. Secondly, that creditors were entitled to as much protection from the convention as debtors, and that no one had either a moral or legal right to step between the debtor and creditor and divorce them from their just claims and liabili-

For one, he felt as keenly as any member upon the floor for the distressed and unfortu-nate; he sympathized with the debtor in his nate; he sympathized with the debtor in his straightened circumstances, and desired to afford every possible means of relief consistent with law; cut the creditor, as a member of the community, likewise had claims which demanded consideration and regard. Persondemanded consideration and regard. Personally he had been instrumental in aiding many of the planters and factors of the State. The capital which he invited hither had been furnished with the confident hope that it would be repaid, and he could furnish letters from the best citizens of the State to show that not withstanding their temporary misfortune, they did not desire the convention to obliterate the beaut claims against them. The honor of the honest claims against them. The honor of the old Commonwealth, notwithstanding her re-verses, was not dead yet; and, while he had the power or influence to resist that which tended to throw a blight upon that honor, he would employ it upon all proper occasions.

Too much feeling had been brought into the consideration of this subject; too many appeals had been made to feelings and to prejudices. It was a question only for the exercise peals had been made to feelings and to proju-dices. It was a question only for the exercise of reason, judgment and justice. Measured by these, the retroactive law proposed was clearly unconstitutional, illegal, and unjust. W. G. Whipper spoke strongly in favor of the section as it stood, opposing all change. They were there to legislate for the people; a lerge proportion of that people were large proportion of that people were in distress; they demanded relief; and the best relief that could be afforded was that which secured to them a homestead which the creditor could not touch, gave to them a fresh start in life, and prevented the homes of the State from passing into the lands of commonants and seculators. the hands of cormorants and speculators.

W. J. McKinlay, of Orangeburg, spoke in opposition to the section on the ground of its re-trospective character, but said he was in tayor of its general spirit as a measure of relief. Until changed, he could not vote for that which ignored the obligations of a large class of the community, and at one stroke wiped out so much of the honestly incurred indebtedness of the country at the expense of the cre

R. B. Elliott (colored), of Barnwell, offered an amendment, so that the 10th line of the section would read, "It shall be the duty of the first legislature that assembles after the ratification of this constitution, at its first session to pass such laws as may be necessary to carry this provision into effect.

B. F. Randolph took the floor in defence of the section without amendment, and spoke long and well. He was followed by Simeon Corley, of Lex-

State; and, finally, that it would undoubtedly ensure the certain ratification of the constitution. He held the convention for nearly three-quarters of an hour deeply interested in every word that fell from his lips. It was the ablest speech made on that side of the subject; it was made with feeling, and made with a purpose; it told. A synopsis would scarcely do the speaker or his subject justice.

R. B. Elliott (colored), moved the previous question, and the main question was ordered.

J. M. Rutland, as charman of the Legislative Committee, was permitted, under the

PRACTICES BY CERTAIN MILITARY OFFICIALS. The Washington correspondent of the Balimore Gazette, writing on the 16th instant,

As great surprise has been expressed at the action of President Johnson in nominating Sherman as brevet general without first ascer-Sherman as brevet general without first ascertaining his feelings on the subject, and much curiosity exhibited to learn what the purpose of the President was, it can be stated, upon reliable authority, that Mr. Johnson did not consider it necessary, saying nothing of its indelicacy, to name to General Sherman in advance and consult him in relation to a nomination designed solely as a compliment to the General for his military services.

sulting the General, both as to his nomination as brevet general and as to the order detailing him to the command of the new Department of the Atlantic, was suggested to the President by a distinguished gentleman now in this dent by a distinguished gentleman now in this city, who is a near relative of General Sherman. Mr. Johnson replied to the suggestion, that so far as the compliment intended for General Sherman is concerned, it should be bestowed voluntarily and without his knowledge; it being one which he could not possibly chieft and one which he could not possibly chieft and one which he could not possibly chieft and one which were true soldier must blect, and one which every true soldier mus appreciate. As to his being ordered to the command of the Department of the Atlantic, or any other department, it was enough for him to know that General Sherman was a pa-triot, and ready to serve his country in any of-ficial position to which he might be assigned. It is believed this was the only conference held It is believed this was the only conterence held by the President with any one on the subject of the nomination or the order, and no one has been more surprised than Mr. Johnson himself at the manner in which General Sherman is reported to have received the news, and the President expresses the apprehension that some one has communicated to General Sherman statements which may have created false impressions which will, no doubt, be dissipated when all the facts come to be known. There are rumore affoat to-night that documents are in ex-istence in this city which will soon be made public, establishing conclusively the corrup-tions of certain late military officials who were connected with the operations of the army in the Southwest during the rebellion. Among these documents are vouchers signed in tripli-cate for cotton delivered by the Confederate Government to these military efficials during and prior to the siege of Vicksburg. With funds thus procured, military supplies were purchased by the Confederate commander of a Federal officer, with whom he held regular meetings on the borders of Lake Ponchartrain. A single invoice of these supplies amounted to three hundred and sixty thousand dollars, the officers through whom the negotiations were made using the cuphonious name of Smith. THE SECOND FAILURE OF IMPEACHMENY, AND HOW

IT WAS BROUGHT ABOUT. The New York Herald's Washington dispatch

The desperation of the Radical leaders over the untimely end which has tharacterized their boasted second impeachment movement is only equalled by the reactionary effect which their failure has had u on the minds of less enthu-

frail hope of consummating the revolutionary scheme, and in that view had the disposition scheme, and in that view had the disposition of the correspondence between the President and General Grant as well as the voluminous impeachment testimony of the Judiciary Committee referred to the Committee on Reconstruction, of which he is chairman. The champion considered by such a reference the case was sure, and in this view he was seconded by the Republicans generally, who voted for the was sure, at in the the Republicans generally, who voted for the measure in the first instance. Those Republicans who voted no in that case looked with licans who voted no in that case looked with some anxiety upon Stevens' determination, as the question, in the event of reaching the House, it was feared, would then come in such a shape that to vote against it under the lash of old Thad's authority would be almost equivalent to voting for it, in the estimation of their constituents. To this class the failure of the scheme is a subject of no small relief and self-congratulation.

The secret of the second failure, it is said,

self-congratulation.

The secret of the second failure, it is said, lies in the action of Mr. Bingham. This gentleman, one of the ablest Radicals of the House, for some time has manifested frequent inclination to the conservative view on many questions. In the beginning of the late affair, Bingham was evidently in favor of the impeachment. ment. The solution of the whole question rested entirely with the part Grant would take in the matter. In consideration of the lively character of the correspondence between the President and General Grant, it was expected that the latter would be found in the right frame of mind to furnish the impeachers with passion should be invoked to decide the question. The importance of a Homestead Is.4 was undeniable, and he would go as far as anybody in securing one whose effect would be prospective; but come what might, whether weal or woe to himself, it should not go forth to the country that as a lawyer and a man he had not done battle with all his power in behalf of what he deemed right, just and true.

The question then recurred on the several amendments, all of which were voted down exact the minds and expectations of the opposition. Upon putting heads together it was discovered that Grant was not the pliant tool they looked for, and was unwilling to submit to play the part laid out for him. This rebuff was not expected, and the General was accused of timidity and other failings equally uncomplimentary, by which the disappointed accused of timidity and other failings equally uncomplimentary, by which the disappointed Radicals vented their bitterness upon his de-voted head. This naturally made matters were, and created considerable sensation among the four persons who made matters among the few persons who were expected to manage the whole affair. Mr. Bingham getting wind of this difficulty in the way, became himself less inspired with the justice of the course about to be pursued, and tacked accordingly. The change of base on the part of Mr. Bing-ham carried with it a similar inclination on the ham carried with it a similar inclination on the part of the vemainder of the Republicans on the committee, except those who continued faithful to the last. Mr. Bingham's motion, in committee, to lay on the table the report which Thad, and his coadjutors had most carefully and diligently prepared, was a fatal blow, and put an end, by one fell stroke, to the delightful anticipations of Thad, and his supporters. It is considered fortunate by the moderate Respicieus not of the committee that the movepublicans not of the committee, that the move-ment was thus nipped in the bud.

RADICAL VISITORS TO SECRETARY STANTON. RADICAL VISITORS TO SECRETARY STANTON.

The Senate not being in session to-day, a good many members of that body and several from the House of Representatives called upon Secretary Stanton and had various conversations with him. For seme time the Secretary was seated in a corner of the ante-room next to his private office, smoking a long brier root pipe and looking unusually contented. Ben. Wade weeping his customary irracible average. Wade, wearing his customary irascible expres-sion, shuffled in about noon and inquired what was the news. Nothing particular was vouch-safed to him, so old Ben. offered his share, which was put in a congratulatory form and related to the passage of the act yesterday to related to the passage of the acyssicray to supply vacancies temporarily in the Executive Department. "Just the thing that was wanted," remarked Stanton. "Yes," replied Ben., "he (meaning the President) will have no six nonths' occupation for his "ebel appointments in future. The ten days the Senate allowed him was too long, in my opinion. He is able to do more mischief in a shorter time than any other man in the country." "His capacity for that," re-lied Stanton, "is more than equal to his means." Here Senators Ramsay and Pome-roy entered and the usual congratulations were extended. "The same fact was mentioned were exte ided. The same fact was mention to Stanton that Ben. Wade so kindly furnished in advance; but it was acceptable news in the quarter to which it was directed, and a due ap-preciation was signified. Stanton is evidently hand and glove with his Radical friends in Congress.

BERTU-OLD THAD. ON THE ADMISSION OF THE SOUTHERN STATES-DOINGS OF CONGRESS. WASHINGTON, February 19 .- Mr. Burlingame, Chinese Ambassador to the United States and to the Powers of Europe, will leave China on the 25th instant, with a suite of thirty persons, to proceed to the execution of his mission. J. McLeary Brown, late Chinese Secretary of the British Legation, is first secretary; E. Duchamps, who accompanied him to Europe last year, is second secretary. Two Chinese officials of the highest rank precede him with the retinue. By imperial decree, Mr. Burlingame is placed at the head of the mission, and has letters of credence to each of the treaty powers, signed, for the first time, by the Emperor himself. The mission is to be permanent, that is, to last during Mr. Burlingame's life. The salary is $55,000 a year in gold. Hancock's recent removals are still under consideration at General Grant's headquarters. Thad. Stevens opposes special legislation for Southern States at once. The Alahama Republican committee are on the floor of the House to-day, urging the admission of that State. Gen. O. L. Shepherd, Colonel of the 15th in-

Mr. Wilson introduced a bill to restore Alabama. After the usual preamble it says: Resolved, That the Constitution of Alabama Resolved. That the Constitution of Albahas is hereby declared to be in conformity with the provisions of the act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States, passed March 2d, 1867; and whereas the legislature cted under the same constitution shall ratify

F. J. Moses, Jr., made the grand speech of the day. Taking the broad ground that this was a poor man's measure; that the circumstances of the hour demanded it; that it was not retrospective in action; that if so, it was nevertheless legitimate, viewed by the light of precedents and example; that its results would be beneficial to all the people of the State; and, finally, that it would undoubtedly ensure the certain ratification of the constitution.

J. M. Rutland, as chairman of the Legislative Committee, was permitted, under the rules, to speak fifteen minutes, and he used the opportunity well. He planted himself upon broad constitutional grounds, that the proposed retrospective action was all wrong, and the courts would so declare it. Appeals to feeling would do very well in their place, but upon such an important theme as this, involving so much material interest. so many moral obligations, so much of the honor of men and the honor of the State, something more than passion should be invoked to decide the quos-tion.
