-The installation of the Prince of Wales as a Knight of St. Patrick, it is said by the London Times, will be celebrated with all the splender which it is possible to bestow on the ceremonial. No similar spectacle has been witnessed since the visit of King George IV. to

-The House committee on coins and coinage have agreed to report a bill to provide for more uniformity in coinage of two, three and five cent pieces, to be composed of nickel and copper, the two cent pieces to be of a particular size described in the bill, the three cent pieces to be of a size larger, and the five cent thus regulating the size proportionately to the value of the different coins.

-Thaddens Stevens, owing to his feebleness, has to be daily carried in a chair to and from his lodgings to the House of Representaturned faces, . marking in his quaint style, "Well, boys, what am I to do when you are both dead and gone?"

-The commissioner of internal revenue has rendered a decision in the spurious champagne wine cases. He holds that wines made by the tions which bear sway. Far otherwise! infusion of carbonic acid gas, and put up in bottles similar to foreign champagne wines, British speculative thought is a materialist are subject to a tax of $6 per dozen. All of the wines known as the spurious champagne wines, between $400,000 and $500,000 worth of which were seized by Collector Shook, in New York, some time ago, were put up as above described. This decision will not only bring a revenue to the government, but drive out of use those fraudulant champagne wines.

-The Jews of New York are, it is said, er deavoring to induce the legislature to abolish the office of Superintendent of Police, or at least to remove Kennedy the officious. There is a queer report, however, which if true guarantees a long lease of office to the inventor of the peaceful citizens. It is that Kennedy, by the mysterious book in which are recorded the private doings of leading officials, legislators and influential citizens-men who control conventions and appointments, and are a power in the State. The story goes that he has used the machinery of his department to track every Albany or Washington official who has come to the city, to note all his sins, small or great, to the minutest detail, the sum lost at faro, or the name of the syren in whose smiles he basked being carefully preserved. Armed with this record he can bring troops of the me i conorable and the most influential to his support at the first whisper of removal.

-Wednesday was "Opening Day" in New York,—that is, the day of the season when the modistes display for the first time their spring fashions. The streets were thronged with ladies, and all the principal establishments were crowded with their patrons, who criticised what they considered "a sweet thing in bonnets," and called this article of dress "hateful," and that "perfectly splendid." The salient points of the new styles appear to be that Lonnets are smaller and more flimsy than ever, that the sensible fashion of wearing short street dresses is to be continued, and that evening dresses may be cut in almost any way, provided they be furnished with a trail long enough. One reporter says that there never was a time when greater latitude was allowed in full dress toilettes, but he evidently means longitude, for he adds, "Provided the train is long and the skirt narrow, "the rest of the dress may be left to Providence." And when the fashions have come to such a pass as this, it is quite certain they are no longer proper subjects for newspaper discussion.

-In the matter of professional fees, the giants of the New York bar, not to speak of he says, the pigmies, are as fortunate, if we may believe report, as they are skilful. In the Jumel will case, for instance, Mr. Martin, who appeared for the defendant, received a fee of $10,000, while O'Conor, who gained the suit. pocketed $50,000 as his reward. These will cases, often involving the labor of weeks, and even months, in their preparation, and requiring arguments of an interminable length, seem to be peculiarly profitable. The leading couning a property of two millions, $200,000 were numbered John Ja ob Astor among his clients. He drew up the will of the millionaire, and was one of the executors, drawing as his share for the members of this profession. Mr. J. R. Whiting owns Broadway property renting for $27,000, and Mr. Marbury returns an income of $55,000 mostly from the same source, it is reported. But large as these incomes may seem. they are generally the fruit of hard and longcontinued labor. Mr. Lord struggled for years without a sign of success, and at the age of thirty-five was on the point of giving up his profession for something which would afford him a living. It is generally the same story of the triumph of real ability after long trial.

-The question of the appointment of Mr. Burlingame, an American citizen, as ambassador from the Chinese Empire to the Western Treaty Powers, has been referred to in the British Parliament. The question was put to the appointment in question was made with the concurrence of the British Minister in China, and had received his (Lord Stanley's) should be prepared to enter into negotiations and discussions with him on all matters affecting the Chinese Empire. There has been the same good feeling displayed in regard to Mr. Burlingame's remarkable appointment by the official press in France, and, so far as we have observed the expression of opinion in official circles throughout Europe, there will be no barrier to the successful projecution of his ## Superfleiality.

The great characteristic of the age is a lack of earnestness. Never, since the niaiseries of the Fronde gave to the vocabulary of the French people a new synonym for frivolity, has so great a disposition to trifle through life been manifest all over the world. Everywhere men seem to be returning to the bagatelle-loving, volatile days of their childhood, or at least to be crowning the red shoes and coral of their babyhood with the cap and bells of maturer folly. "Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw," they laugh and grimace and caper through life with the skill of practiced Polichinelli, varied only as surrounding circumstances coint coin to be larger than the three cent, darken the lines of the picture, by the grim, sombre travestie of mirth which we mark in the features of the ancient revellers in the "Dance of Death." Over a large portion of the civilized world a desolation like tives. A New York editor crosses the Atlantic in a yacht, and high and low are frenzied with excitement, as we can imagine men in the simple, earnitro-glycerine hoax and the apprehender of nest days of old, thrilling to the knowledge of some newly discovered law of being, or aid of his detectives, has compiled a certain the disappearance from the heavens of some familiar star. The book is handafter-time as the tale of that other whilome ride through awe-hushed Coventry! The influence of the spirit of the time seems to come like a blight upon the energies, and to permeate like a subtle poison through the veins of all sorts and conditions of men. The greatest singer of our time has been beguiled by this tricksy Puck, who has seized the reins of things, to roar as gently and well-nigh as sillily as any sucking dove. Those kings of modern thought who have retained their royalty so far as not to descend and gambol with the crowd, have, for the most part, shut their mouths from vain remonstrance, and folded their hands from fruitless interference. Mr. Caulyle, after one last tug at the reins has wearied of efforts as futile as PHAETHON'S, and utterances as despised as Cassandna's, and is dumbly waiting to see the future come. Mr. MATTHEW ARNOLD, too, records his protest and shuts the book with regretful hand. STUDIES IN PATHOLOGY AND THERAPPUTICS. By Samuel Henry Dickson, M. D., L. L. D., Pro-fessor of Practice of Physic, in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. 1 Vol. 12mo. New York: Wood & Co. Charleston: John Prescal

The announcement of a new work from the pen of Professor Dickson always fills us with pleasurable anticipations; we are sure, whatever be the subject, that it will prove a literary treat. Few, if any, wield a more graceful pen, and whether it be a poem, an address, an essay, or a more elaborate work, all and each come from under his hand with the finish of the Lord Stanley whother Her Majesty's Govern- thoughtful, philosophic, and elegant scholar. ment intends to enter into negotiations with | To all but the more recent comers amongst Mr. Burlingame, as chief representative of the us, it is needless to say that S. He further set at rest all doubts as spent the best of his years in our commuto Mr. Burlingane's reception by saying that nity, distinguished in his profession both if he arrived, as he presumed he would, duly as a practitioner and lecturer, and enjoyaccredited as the representative of China, he ing a degree of respect and esteem from all classes of which any one might be justly proud. Though engaged in an extensive practice, he was ever ready, by his pen, his purse, and his personal service, to advance the interests, in whatever way, of his native city. The cause of medical education, in the South especially, early engaged his attention, and to his untiring zeal and energy our Medical College mainly owes its origin. In this institution Dr. Dickson was one of the original Professors, who by his wide spread fame as a lecturer, contributed largely to build it up and acquire for it a reputation which led students to flock to it from all quarters. At one commencement, if we are not misinformed. it graduated over one hundred students. In 1847, Dr. Dickson was called to a Professorship in the University of New York. He continued there, however, only three years, when, at the carnest request of his colleagues, he returned to resume his former chair. But it was not long ere a wider field was opened to him, and a vacancy having occurred in the Jefferson Medical College, he was invited to take the position which he now so eminently occupies. In the sere and yellow leaf of life. Dr. DICKson is still the same vigorous thinker and cloquent and graceful writer as ever, as is evidenced by the last production of his pen, which we find thus noticed in the New York

Evening Post : "A volume entitled 'Studies in Pathology and Therapeuties' is published from the pen of Dr. Samuel H. Dickson, of this city, the distinguished pathologist, formerly Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in the University of New York, and now occupying a similar chair in the Jefferson Medical College. similar chair in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia. Professor Dicason is so wel and widely known and respected as a teacher and writer of medical therapeutics, that the announcement of a new book from his pen upon the subject of his specialty will secure its eager perusal. This able writer has already enriched his profession with several most able and authoritative treatises up n various branches in his department of research, and his books are noted, independent of their scihis books are noted, independent of their scientific value, for a sigularly eloquent and graceful style which gives them peculiar literary merit not common to works of their class. In the present volume this charm of style is eminently displayed, making the 'Studies' as interesting to the cultivated but unprofessional reader as they are to the student or professional man. Each essay is admirable in its way; and though of necessity far from exhaustive, they are, nevertheless, full, learned, and, in many instances, highly ingenious and original in their argumentative and theoretic aspect."

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 15, 1867.

Wm. Gurney: Dean Sin: For the past year I have had the DEAN SIR: FOr the past year I have had the superintendence of a large Cotton planting interest near the city. In the cultivation of the land I have used CROASDALL'S PHOSPHATES, and although the eason was most unflavorable to a fair experiment of this Fertilizer, I can with safety say that the beneficial effects on the crops in the progress of its growth was most manifest. My faith in its utility is so strong that I will recommend its use for the ensuing season. Very respectfully,

G. W. S. LEGARE. HILTON HEAD, December 20, 1867.

Wm. Gurrey:
DEAN SIR: I experimented with five different kinds of Phosphates and Manures the past season on cotten lands, and am forcibly convinced that "CROASDALE'S SUPER-PHOSPHATE" is far superior to any other of the fertilizers I have tried, and think so invorably of it that I intend giving it the profusence the coming season.
