REMOVAL OF THE FILES OF THE CITY PAPERS moved yesterday to the college library. This collec-tion embraces some three hundred volumes, and has been heretofore kept in the room opposite the Coun. cil Chamber. The removal of these journals to the College Library will enable the public to indulge in of old city newspapers in the Charleston Library, dating back to 1729.

THE READFORD MURDER TRIAL.-The prisoners, Stevens and McDaniel, charged with the murder of Mr. Bradford at Walterboro', ware brought from the jail to the Citadel yesterday morning in charge of an armed guard. General Hinks, the former Provost Marshal General of this military district, was ordered from Raleigh to act as the presiding officer of the military commission, and the court was organized yesterday morning under his supervision. The prisoners having no counsel, they were remanded until to-day in order to give them time to secure a lawyer to defend them, and the BASE INGRATITUDE .- Two darkeys, who bore the names of Jeffry Small and Prince Brown, were arrested yesterday for robbing the Freedmen's Bureau. They had forgotten the many benefits which the same bureau had conferred upon them, and with out the fear of Judge Platt or General Scott before their eyes, they sequestered a ham. Prince was an employee of the bureau, and while the crowd was around the office at the foot of King-street, he passed a ham to Jeffry, an aged darkey, and told him to cut. Jeffry did, but was not sufficiently active, and both himself and Prince were captured and taken to the guardhouse. They will be tried this morning.

FILLING UP EXCAVATED LOTS .- This work is now progressing rapidly in different parts of the city, and the low lots will be soon raised to a level with the street. The city engineer has recently secured a large quantity of available material, and the street laborers will be kept busily employed until the 1st of June, when, by a city ordinance, all dirt digging is strictly forbidden. Laborers are now engaged in excavating the lot of Messrs, Cameron & Barkley, at the corner of Meeting and Cumberland streets. The earth has been secured by the city engineer, and will be used to fill other lots. This excavation has already reached the tessellated pavement which formerly served as a floor to Werner's lager beer saloon, and the tiles that have been removed are in a good state of preservation.

THE FAIR-SEVENTH DAY .- Only to-day and sto-morrow, and then the Fair will close. Those gentlemen who have been holding back for the last two nights must now make their mark, and walk up to the winning place. Only two nights more, and then FINIS.

H 'sited Dr. Davega's office and abstracted four case of surgical instruments. A similar raid was also made on the office of Dr. Parker, in Broad-street, and one case stolen in the day time. Johnny sold the instruments to some drug stores, and the robbery was traced to the redoubtable John, who was captured and caged, and will answer for his crime in court.

THE CONCERT LAST NIGHT.-The concert room at the Mills House was again crowded last night by an audience anxious to applaud Miss Mc-Culloch and her companions of the Parlor Opera Troupe. Susini was excellent in "Madamina il Catologo," and the famous aria from "Ernani." Orlandini gave new charms to the thoroughly worn out and hackneyed "Il Balen," and graceful ballad from "Ballo in Maschera," and Boye sang the passionate small house in Queen-street.

G. W. ETHFERS & Co. will sell at 9½ o'clock, in romanza from "La Traviata" and the tender "La Donns e Mobile" with great effect. Miss McCulloch was applauded to the echo and encored again and again. Torriani's "Valse" would be famous if the old postoffice, lot of land and buildings in Ruiledge-street. gymnastics had no terrors for her. The "Last Rose of Summer' Miss McCulloch sang exquisitely, and this was the gem of the evening.

Signor Torriani accompanied the singers with great taste and judgment, and in a duo with Miss McCulloch was warmly applauded.

To-night is the grand complimentary benefit to Miss McCulloch, and the programme is as attractive as the voice of the fair beneficiaire. Miss McCulloch must have a bumper !

A DESTRUCTIVE WIND NEAR GEORGETOWN, S. C .- A terrible blow, attended with much damage to property and loss of life, took place above Georgetown, S. C., on Thursday last, between two and three o'clock P. M. The wind commenced at the plantations of Dr. Gaillard and Mr. Reese Ford, on Black River, where the buildings were somewhat injured, and took a course from there to the Peedee River, where it passed immediately over the plantation of Dr. Fishburne. At this point it was terribly severe, demolishing some thirty small buildings, breaking most of them entirely up, and injuring several large structures, and in the demolition of these houses some three colored persons were killed outright, and several others badly if not dangerously injured. The trees along the course of the wind presented a scene of entire destruction, being almost universally broken or rooted up, and in several instances were lifted from the ground to a great elevation. It is feared that further damage to life and property may be heard of. The hour being one when many persons were in the field and not at their residences, prevented a greater loss of life.

THE NICHOLSON PAVEMENT .- This pavement has been praised wherever it has been used, and most of the large cities are now discarding the old cobble stone pavement for the Nichol son. The propriety of using this style of paving in Charleston was agitated as early as 1856, but the committee then appointed to consider the feasibility of adopting the patent reported adversely, considering it to be liable to decay. Since that time the Nicholson pavement has been subjected to a thorough trial and has given great satisfaction. A pavement of this description, which was laid on one of the principal thoroughfares in Boston, has stood the test of travel for six years without costing the city. one cent for repairs. The wood used for this pavement was the spruce pine, which is much softer and more pliable than the Southern pine. Since the war, when the city contemplated repairing East Bay and Broad streets, the Mayor communicated with the nunicipal authorities of different cities that had adopted the Nicholson pavement. The report in each case was the same, all uniting in recommending the Nicholson as the best invention known. Motives of economy induced Council to adopt the cobble stones but the experience of the past shows that this style of pavement requires constant repairs. Under the new regime, improvements seem to be the order of the day, and, as there are now several streets sadly in need of a good pavement, the present would seem the public. Mr. Hugh Ferguson has been recently appointed the agent of the patentee for this city, and we learn that a memorial on this subject will be presented to Council at their next meeting. The pri of laving a cobble-stone pavement is about two dol lars and five cents per square yard, not including the cost of subsequent repairs. The Nicholson will cost from two dollars and seventy-five cents to three dollars, and is warranted to last from fourteen to twenty years, without costing the city a cent for re-

Anything relating to the relief of those of our friends and countrymen, whose wounds or mis-fortunes in the death of relatives in the late war have impaired their ability for self-support, or whose meagre earnings render the education of their children impossible, must ever be a matter of earner solicitude to the citizens of Charleston. We have thought, in this connection, that a brief reference to the objects of this flourishing and active association, and a detail of some of the amounts expended by it within the last few years for various purposes connected with the relief of the necessities of this large needy and highly esteemed portion of our people, whose claims to generous sympathy and substantial aid we must all heartily recognize, might be a sub-the association. A considerable amount has been given to the enterprise of those noble ladies whose zeal in attending the sick, nursing the wounded, and watching over the last moments of the dying, is only equalled by the self-sacrificing devotion which now stimulates their unwearled energies to provide a home for the widow and orphan. A handsome purse was presented—an unsolicited acknowledgement—of the services of one whose name excites a thrill of ad miration and love in the breast of nearly every solder who travelled the South Carolina Railroad from and would show that the meeting siready held was a representation of the ward. Unless the meeting was a packed one, there would be no objection.

Captain Carson followed, and argued against any new meeting where a meeting had been held.

It was then said that the meeting in No. 6 was only called by a few people, and to this it was replied that one hundred and twenty persons were present.

The chairman then explained the manner in which the Conservative Committee of the city had been formed. He said that he had been a member of the committee, and believed it to be an honest and unselfish body; but the opinion had been formed that it was the organ of a clique, and for that reason the committee had determined to recommit the whole matter to the wards themselves. In conclusion, he explained the necessity of harmonious and united action.

A number of scattering motions were made, and corner Whiting then addressed the meeting. He urged the gentlemen to be united in working for a common cause, deprecated all divisions, and said that he was prepared to vote and work for any man where the carried nearly unanimously. They are as follows:
